United Church And Anglicans Release Plans

Would Continue Costly New School Courses

By DON HARVEY

TORONTO (CP) — Immediate steps toward uniting Canada's two largest non-Roman Catholic denominations were urged in a document made public jointly today by the Anglican and United Churches of Canada.

Called the Principles of Union, the 4,000-word document recommends establishment of a general commission of 20 Anglicans and 20 United Churchmen to prepare concrete and detailed plans for organizational union into one church of more than 6,000,000 persons.

Union of the two denominations would make the new church second only in Canada to the Roman Catholic Church in numbers. More than 8,342,000 persons were listed as Roman Catholics in the 1961 federal census compared with more than 3,600,000 as United Church adherents and more than 2,400,000 as Anglicans.

"When unity in the essentials of the faith has been achieved between two churches, there should be nothing to prevent

TORONTO (CP) — Costly new Sunday school courses published recently by the United and Anglican churches would continue in use after union of the two denominations, spokesmen said today.

Parents already have spent millions of dollars purchasing the study books.

In a joint statement, the spokesman said:

"For a long interval between now and the actual consummation of union, the two new curricula will of course continue in their respective churches, with revisions, as at present planned.

"Even after union, doubtless as at present, local congregations will be free to decide what curriculum they use in their Sunday schools. Both new curricula may very well continue to be used for the next 20 years or more."

Twenty Six Questions About Union Answered

TORONTO (CP) — Members of the Committee of Ten who prepared the principles of union between the Anglican Church of Canada and the United Church of Canada provided the answers to the following questions about the proposed union:

1. Does this mean union?

This is not an act of union but it paves the way for union if the responsible bodies of both churches approve the document.

2. What steps are still to be taken before union is a fact?

At least five: (a) approval of the principles of union by the general synod of the Anglican Church and the general council of the United Church; (b) commitment by both churches to proceed immediately to union; (c) appointment of commissions to work out details (d) acceptance of the commissions' reports by the two churches according to their proper legal procedures; (3) the act of unification itself.

3. What will the new church be called?

The name will be referred to one of the commissions to be appointed.

4. Why has it taken so long? Especially for two reasons: (a) differences concerning the nature of the church and the ministry; (b) human nature. Because the Committees of Ten came to know and understand one another's point of view and had the will to overcome the great difficulties in thought and practice, this major breakthrough concerning differences has become possible.

5. How long have negotiations been going on?

This present round of conversations, since 1943.

6. What were the biggest ob-

Church Highlights

TORONTO (CP) — Following are highlights of the suggested plan of organic union made public today by the Anglican and United churches of Canada:

A general commission of 20 Anglicans and 20 United Churchmen to enter into a solemn and formal commitment to prepare concrete and detailed plans for eventual union.

Establishment by the general commission of special commissions to deal with constitutional, legal, doctrinal and liturgical matters.

Inauguration of bishops responsible to regional church courts represented by lay and ministerial members.

Both Committees of Ten that prepared the recommendations agreed unanimously on what the Christian religion is and on the nature of the Church and its ministry.

Acceptance of the Anglican church threefold ministry of bishops, presbyters priests and deacons who are functionally different from priests. The United Church currently has a single priesthood.

Ministers of the uniting churches would subscribe to an act of unification of ministries, terms of which would be made by the proposed commission on liturgy, or practice of worship.

Lay members of the uniting churches would re-affirm their faith at special congregational services at the time of union and pledge allegiance to the new church.

Ratification of a final plan of union by the highest courts in both churches after acceptance by most local congregations and lower church courts.

Tributes Paid To Nowlan

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—After paying a rare tribute to George Nowlan, the Commons resumes debate today on proposals to elect a permanent Speaker and adopt new rules of procedure.

Mr. Nowlan, former Conservative finance and revenue minister and a widely - esteemed parliamentarian, died of a heart seizure Monday morning in the Ottawa Civic Hospital. He was 61.

Funeral will be in his home town of Wolfville, N.S., but arrangements have not been completed.

Monday's sitting was adjourned out of respect for Mr. Nowlan after party leaders and former cabinet colleagues paid tribute to his public service, achievements and qualities. The sitting lasted only half an hour.

Commons sittings traditionally have been adjourned only on the day an MP died in the capital and to mark the passing of world figures.

REPLY EXPECTED

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker or a Conservative frontbencher is expected to reply today to a proposal by the government to name former Conservative Speaker Roland Michener as permanent Speaker free of party affiliations. Mr. Michener now is high commissioner to India.

Other candidates mentioned earlier in the debate were the present Speaker, Alan Macnaughton and his deputy, Lucien Lamoureux (L—Stormont).

Despite the discussion about potential permanent Speakers, the House has not agreed in principle to establish the position, nor has it spelled out the details of tenure, appointment and remuneration.

The two main rule changes, as amended last week, would provide for:

—A 60-day limit each session on appropriations debates, except for extra estimates introduced after the 40 days have expired.

France Will Study Plan For Nuclear Policy Study

PARIS (Reuters) — French Armed Forces Minister Pierre Messmer told the NATO defence ministers conference today that the French government would study the United States' proposal for a "select committee" of four or five defence ministers to consider ways of enlarging allied participation in nuclear policy, a NATO spokesman said.

Canada and Belgium also welcomed the American proposal, outlined Monday by Defence Secretary Robert McNamara.

Paul Hellyer, Canada's defence minister, told the meeting that although he wanted more details he welcomed the fact that McNamara had put forward the idea of forming a select committee to bring better order to NATO's nuclear arrangements and broaden the sharing of these responsibilities, a Canadian spokesman said.

U.S. Jets Counterattack

Viet Cong Withdrawing After Victory on Ground

SAIGON (CP)—South Vietnamese troops supported by U.S. Air Force jets today counterattacked Communist Viet Cong units withdrawing after handing government forces one of their worst defeats of the five-year war.

As wave after wave of U.S. Air Force and Marine Corps jets pounded the withdrawing guerrillas with bombs and napalm (jellied gasoline), South Vietnamese troops raced the battle area in the northern province of Quang Ngai, picking up the wounded and collecting bodies.

Details of the fighting which raged for three days between Ba Gia and Quang Ngai city about 15 miles to the east were still scanty but government officials said more than 350 South Vietnamese were killed in the weekend fighting.

The Viet Cong mutilated the bodies of many of the dead and shot wounded prisoners.

So far the bodies of only about 60 Viet Cong have been found. South Vietnamese officers estimated that massive American air strikes in support of trapped government units had killed more than 200 guerrillas and ground forces another 100.

U.S. Navy planes hit again at targets in North Viet Nam and one F-8 crusader was shot down by anti-aircraft fire.

Two U.S. advisers were killed in the Quang Ngai fighting, 63 miles southeast of the big Da Nang air base.

223 Miners Trapped In Jap Mine

TOKYO (Reuters)—A heavy death toll was feared tonight when a gas explosion ripped through a coal mine in southern Japan. At least 24 bodies were recovered and 223 miners were trapped 1,500 feet under ground.

Of the 552 men working underground when the explosion struck, 277 so far have reached the pithead safely and 28 were brought up injured by rescue teams.

The explosion roared through the pit of the Yamano colliery in Fukuoka, on Japan's main southern island of Kyushu, this afternoon.

It was thought that as many

Joyce Realty Office Gutted Early Today

A 12-year-old girl will be charged in connection with an early-morning fire that gutted the offices of one of Belleville's biggest realtors, police said today.

Destroyed in the blaze were the premises of Gerald Joyce Realty and insurance agencies on the city's Front Street.

Fire loss was estimated at approximately $30,000.

Police said the girl came down to the police station and turned in the fire alarm shortly after 1 a.m. Then she returned to the scene and watched firemen battle the blaze.

She was later questioned and, as a result, say police, will appear in juvenile court.

Officers said the girl lives in the general area and was on her way home before the blaze.

SIFT RUBBLE

This morning, fire, insurance and police investigators clambered through the ruins sifting the rubble for clues to the origin of the blaze. An inspector from the Ontario Fire Marshal's Office was expected later in the morning.

Realtor Gerald Joyce still was uncertain about the fate of contemporary office records early today.

Real estate files dating back to 1958 were lost when the fire raced through storage space on the second floor of the 2-storey building.

He believed his current insurance accounts files were saved by firemen.

PREVENT SPREAD

All city fire units were rushed to the scene as a general alarm was turned in.

Firemen fought the blaze for nearly two hours before striking it out and preventing it spreading to two other premises in the same block.

He said he had more than 200 appointments alone for today.

Mr. Joyce, called by police in the early hours to learn his offices were burning, today was making arrangements to keep his practice in operation from the former Ontario Intelligencer offices on Front Street.

Freedoms Viewed In House

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal Leader Andrew Thompson Monday urged Ontario government to examine laws related to freedom of assembly, freedom of speech and freedom of the press in the light of mob violence in a Toronto park Sunday.

Mr. Thompson told the legislature radio stations made spot announcements about a Nazi meeting scheduled to be held in the park and asked "whether this does not veer on the irresponsible and whether in some way this could not be controlled or pointed out."

He said the Liberal party wants no part of McCarthyism, but the government should consider "to what extent do we permit freedom of assembly and freedom of speech and where does it go beyond freedom into license?"

He said Premier Robarts should put the matter before the McRuer royal commission on human rights, or else should set up a separate royal commission.

Mr. Robarts said the problem was associated with the distrib-

Self-styled Toronto Nazi Remanded For Trial

TORONTO (CP) — William John Beattie, 23, of Toronto, self-styled leader of the recently formed Canadian Nazi party, Monday was remanded to June 7 on a charge of causing a disturbance in a midtown park Sunday.

Beattie and eight anti-Nazi demonstrators were arrested during a riot after more than 4,000 persons gathered to protest a scheduled Nazi rally.

The others also were remanded.

A crowd of about 500 middle-aged persons—many of them eastern Europeans or members of Jewish organizations and some armed with clubs — attacked six youths they thought were members of the Nazi party.

Four of the youths were caught and kicked and beaten while the rest of the crowd cheered the attackers on.

Police said Monday they took statements from seven persons who said they had been assaulted.

Inspector Arthur Walmer said all of them appeared to have been innocent bystanders who had no connection with any Nazi group.

Moreau and four other Timmins men, in Toronto to look for work, had gone to the park to see what the excitement was about, Insp. Walmer said.

"If it hadn't been for the police I'd have been killed," said Ivan Gelinas, one of the group.

"I was punched and kicked several times. I remember one man hitting me with a piece of two-by-four across the back. My God, there must have been a thousands. We didn't have a chance."

City officials discovered that a bylaw designed to regulate public meetings in parks may have to be altered to prevent similar outbreaks.

Alderman Kenneth Ostrander said Monday he will ask for a meeting with Mayor Phillip Givens to consider censoring and controlling public speaking in the parks.

Present city bylaws allow the parks commission to decide the time and place for a meeting, it was learned Monday, but do not allow the commission to refuse a permit to any group.

Mayor Givens said one method of control should be exercised by the police.

"If the police suspect a rally by a certain organization could cause trouble, the city could be notified, and we could refuse to issue a permit," he said.

Royal Garden Party Given To Celebrate Anniversary

By CAROL KENNEDY

And there to talk to the Queen was a Canadian representative from the little town where it all started back in 1897—Stoney Creek, Ont.

The Queen asked Mrs. Chester W. Nash, president of the Stoney Creek Institute, about the strength of her branch. Mrs. Nash extended the good wishes of the two surviving founder members—Mrs. H. P. Van Wagner, W, and Mrs. McKinley Morden, 89.

"It was a most thrilling day for me," said Mrs. Nash, who is here on a vacation. Before her return to Canada June 14 she will lecture in Hovingham, Yorkshire, home of the Duchess of Kent, on the origins of the movement.

STARTED IN TRAGEDY

The germ of the idea that was to grow into a worldwide sisterhood came through a Canadian domestic tragedy. Mrs. Adelaide Hoodless, a St. George, Ont., farmer's wife, lost a baby son. Believing his death was due to her lack of proper nutritional knowledge she decided women should be able to get together and pool their knowledge much as her husband and his friends did at the local Farmers' Institute.

With help from a local agricultural official, Erland Lee, Mrs. Hoodless was able to hold the first meeting of the Women's Institute — attended by about 100 farmers' wives—at Squire's Hall in Stoney Creek, Feb. 19, 1897.

From there, the idea snowballed across Canada and during the First World War was brought to Britain by two other Ontario women, Mrs. Alfred Watt and Miss Emily Guest.

In September, 1915, the first British meeting was held in a summerhouse in the little Welsh town with the longest name in Britain — Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllantysiliogogogoch, Llanfair P.G. for short.

SCOTS JOIN

Two years later, Miss Guest started the Scottish organization, which now is an autonomous group known as the Women's Royal Institutes.

Over the years the popular image of Britain's Women's Institutes — now numbering 8,717 with some 500,000 members— has acquired a gently comic air for many people who think of their activities in terms of vi-lage-hall tea parties and pots of preserves at the local fair.

All that is being changed by another dynamic Canadian — Molly Millard of London, Ont., who took over 18 months ago as the WI's first full-time public relations officer.

"We're trying to get away from the jam and Jerusalem image—or at least enlarge it," Mrs. Millard told a reporter, explaining that the singing of Blake's stirring Jerusalem is a traditional opening to WI gatherings.

"It's only one-tenth of the iceberg," said Mrs. Millard, who is married to an Englishman and has lived here for 20 years. Many remote English villages owe amenities such as piped water and modern sewage to the efforts of the WI, she said, and the organization was also largely responsible for the beginnings of Britain's women's police force.

New Timaran Reported in Safe Condition

LONDON (CP) — Canadian adventurer Matt Burpee sailed into hailing distance of Cobh harbor in southern Ireland Monday night and dropped anchor offshore, clearing up some of the mystery about a voyage he undertook nearly in darkness five days ago at Padstow, Cornwall.

A harbor pilot at Cobh said in a telephone interview early today that Burpee's bright new trimaran, Trynfah, anchored half a mile offshore and everything appeared to be shipshape.

Later in the evening, the three - hulled vessel's crew—Burpee, his wife, their two teenage children and two English sailors—went ashore.

The Cobh pilot's station said it had no knowledge of Burpee's plans.

The retired dairy farmer from Perth, Ont., set sail in darkness early last Thursday and his whereabouts had been reported only once — a since-southwest of Land's End. Cobh is about 200 miles in a direct line southwest of Padstow.

A friend in Cornwall reported Burpee was headed for the Caribbean. Burpee had said a month ago he planned to use the Trynfah in charter business in the Caribbean and the Mediterranean. The London Daily Sketch quotes Burpee saying in Cobh that in leaving Padstow— prompting a six-hour search later in the Cornish coast guard —"I sailed away from frustrations that were costing me thousands of dollars a week."

Trenton Rink Wins Tourney On Local Greens

Despite the chilly winds and cloudy weather the bowling tournament staged by Trenton Lawn Bowling Club at the Belleville greens on Saturday was a decided success. There were eighteen rinks in play, coming from Brighton, Trenton, Stirling, Kingston and Belleville. The tournament opened at the bowling greens in this city and the greens were in perfect condition, due to hard work by the groundsman, Jack Smith, and the greens chairman, Gordon Vince.

A Trenton rink of O. H. Newton and Clayton Maguire won the three-game high with a rink from Brighton of Ernie Lord and C. Young in second position. Eddie Dennison and Morley Gould of Kingston, won the two-game high score, while another Kingston rink of Douglas McCorquodale and George Martin won the one game high count.

Incidentally, the winners of the one-game high were materially helped by their opponents, Orson Gray and Clade Tice, by allowing them to score a seven-end, just one short of a possible.

The women's section of the club served light refreshments during the day's play and everyone reported a most enjoyable day at their favorite sport.

On Wednesday a mixed doubles tournament is being held at Campbellford and it is reported there is a full double draw. The trophy up for competition is the Archie Myers Cup and this fine bowler, although slightly retired from the game will be on hand to make the presentation.

Order Inquest Into Fatality On Station St.

An inquest has been ordered into Saturday morning's double traffic fatality on Station Street, police inspector Ralph Blatchford says.

The victims were Margaret Cook, 17, and a soldier on course at Kingston, 30-year-old Ivan Pickett. Release of the soldier's name was withheld until late Saturday when his next-of-kin was notified.

Richard Kregar, 23-year-old army compagnon of Pickett, and Bonnie Smith, 17, of 1 Emily Street, were injured in the back seat of Pickett's car when it struck a hydro pole.

Farm Safety Week Observed In Province

This week — May 30 to June 5th — is Farm Safety Week and the Ontario Department of Agriculture is directing attention to potential accident hazards lurking in every day operations about farm life.

For instance, not long ago an Ontario farm boy was almost electrocuted as his auger-filling machine he was using short-circuited This may be an unusual accident, but it indicates there may be other similar machines which have deteriorated under dusty stable conditions and have become dangerous.

According to the Ontario Farm Safety Council a regular check by a qualified electrician is good insurance against this type of farm hazard.

Stable wiring should also be checked as damp conditions can deteriorate the insulation to the point where it becomes dangerous.

REAR SEAT BELTS URGED

The use of rear seat belts in automobiles as well as front seat belts is also urged by the council. The Canadian Highway Safety Council has announced that in addition to front seat belts, all new General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and American Motor lines will have belts installed in the rear seats as standard equipment. Some 1965 models will come so equipped and the remainder will start using them in 1966 models.

The Ontario Farm Safety Council urges that both front and rear seat belts be used.

CAN BE NEGLECTED

Tractor operation is another phase of farm work where safety can be neglected as is shown by the many accidents involving tractors.

Among the hazards are turning too quickly, operating on steeply-sloped land and bumping over obstacles, all of which can result in machines overturning.

Slow moving tractors on public roads and highways can also be hazardous unless they are protected by the new orange and red triangular signs.

These are the new "Slow Moving Vehicle" signs which are used only on vehicles travelling less than 25 miles per hour.

The Ontario Safety Council urges farmers to use the sign on all slow moving vehicles when they are travelling on public roadways and at the same time urges motorists to be on the look-out for the signs.

Electrician Crushed by Moving Boom

Yanath was working on electrical installations when the crane shifted, crushing him between its boom and the beam.

Royal Garden Party Given To Celebrate Anniversary

By CAROL KENNEDY

And there to talk to the Queen was a Canadian representative from the little town where it all started back in 1897—Stoney Creek, Ont.

The Queen asked Mrs. Chester W. Nash, president of the Stoney Creek Institute, about the strength of her branch. Mrs. Nash extended the good wishes of the two surviving founder members—Mrs. H. P. Van Wagner, 97, and Mrs. McKinley Morden, 93.

"It was a most thrilling day for me," said Mrs. Nash, who is here on a vacation. Before her return to Canada June 14 she will lecture in Hovingham, Yorkshire, home of the Duchess of Kent, on the origins of the movement.

STARTED IN TRAGEDY

The germ of the idea that was to grow into a worldwide sisterhood came through a Canadian domestic tragedy. Mrs. Adelaide Hoodless, a St. George, Ont., farmer's wife, lost a baby son. Believing his death was due to the lack of proper nutritional knowledge she decided women should be able to get together and pool their knowledge much as her husband and his friends did at the local Farmers' Institute.

With help from a local agricultural official, Erland Lee, Mrs. Hoodless was able to hold the first meeting of the Women's Institute, attended by about 100 farmers' wives—at Squire's Hall in Stoney Creek, Feb. 19, 1897.

From there, the idea snowballed across Canada and during the First World War was brought to Britain by two other Ontario women, Mrs. Alfred Watt and Miss Emily Guest.

In September, 1915, the first British meeting was held in a summerhouse in the little Welsh town with the longest name in Britain — Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogocwchwyrndrobwllllantysiliogogogoch, Llanfair P.G. for short.

SCOTS JOIN

Two years later, Miss Guest started the Scottish organization, which now is an autonomous group known as the Queen's Royal Institutes.

Over the years the popular image of Britain's Women's Institutes — now numbering 8,717 with some 500,000 members — has acquired a gently comic air for many people who think of their activities in terms of village-hall tea parties and pots of preserves at the local fair.

All that is being changed by another dynamic Canadian — Molly Millard of London, Ont., who took over 13 months ago as the WI's first full-time public relations officer.

"We're trying to get away from the jam and Jerusalem image—at least enlarge it," Mrs. Millard told a reporter, explaining that the slaging of Blake's stirring Jerusalem is a traditional opening to WI gatherings.

"It's only one-tenth of the iceberg," said Mrs. Millard, who is married to an English man and has lived here for 20 years. Many remote English villages owe amenities such as piped water and modern sewage to the efforts of the WI, she said, and the organization was also largely responsible for the beginnings of Britain's women's police force.

New Tmaran Reported in Safe Condition

LONDON (CP) — Canadian adventurer Matt Burpee sailed into hailing distance of Cobh harbor in southern Ireland Monday night and dropped anchor offshore, clearing up some of the mystery about a voyage that began suddenly in darkness five days ago at Padstow, Cornwall.

A harbor pilot at Cobh said in a telephone interview early today that Burpee's bright new trimaran, Trimaran, anchored half a mile offshore and everything appeared to be shipshape.

The pilot said the three - hulled vessel's crew—Burpee, his wife, their two teenage children and two English sailors—went ashore.

The Cobh pilot's station said it had no knowledge of Burpee's plans.

The retired dairy farmer from Perth, Ont., set sail in darkness early last Thursday and his whereabouts had been reported only once — 150 miles southwest of Land's End. Cobh is about 200 miles in a direct line northwest of Padstow.

A friend in Cornwall reported Burpee was headed for the Caribbean. Burpee had said a month ago he planned to use the Tryptich in charter business in the Caribbean and the Mediterranean. The London Daily Sketch quotes Burpee saying in Cobh that in leaving Padstow—prompting a six-hour search alert by the Cornish coast guard —"I sailed away from frustrations that were costing me thousands of dollars a week."

Trenton Rink Wins Tourney On Local Greens

Despite the chilly winds and cloudy weather the bowling tournament staged by Trenton Lawn Bowling Club at the Belleville greens on Saturday was a decided success. There were eighteen rinks in play, coming from Brighton, Trenton, Stirling, Kingston and Belleville. The tournament opened the bowling season in this city and the greens were in perfect condition, due to hard work by the greenskeeper, Jack Smith, and the greens chairman, Gordon Vince.

A Trenton rink of O. H. Newton and Clayton Maguire won the three-game high with a rink from Brighton of Ernie Lord and C. Young in second position. Eddie Dennison and Morley Gault of Madoc, won the two-game high score, while another Kingston rink of Douglas McCorquodale and George Martin won the one game high count.

Incidentally, the winners of the one-game high were materially helped by their opponents, Orwin Gray and Claude Tice, by allowing them to score a seven-ender, just one short of a perfect end.

The women's section of the rehab served light refreshments during the day's play and everyone reported a most enjoyable day at their favorite sport.

On Wednesday a mixed doubles tournament is being held at Campbellford and it is reported there is a full double draw.

The trophy up for competition is the Archie Myers Cup and this fine bowler, although slightly retired from the game will be on hand to make the presentation.

Order Inquest Into Fatality On Station St.

An inquest has been ordered into Saturday morning's double-traffic fatality on Station Street, police inspector Ralph Bletcher said today.

The victims were Margaret Cook, 17, and a soldier on course at Kingston, 30-year-old Ivan Pickett. Release of the soldier's name was withheld until late Saturday when his next-of-kin was notified.

Richard Kregar, 23-year-old army companion of Pickett, and Bonnie Smith, 17, of 1 Emily Street, were injured in the back seat of Pickett's car when it struck a hydro pole.

Farm Safety Week Observed In Province

This week — May 30 to June 5th — is Farm Safety Week and the Ontario Department of Agriculture, has directed attention to potential accident hazards lurking in every day operations about the farm.

For instance, not long ago an Ontario farm boy was almost electrocuted when the silage machine he was using shortcircuited This may be an unusual accident, but it illustrates there may be other similar machines which have deteriorated under daily usable conditions and have become dangerous.

According to the Ontario Farm Safety Council a regular check by a qualified electrician is good insurance against this type of farm hazard.

Stable wiring should also be checked and damp conditions can deteriorate the insulation to the point where it becomes dangerous.

REAR SEAT BELTS URGED

The use of rear seat belts in automobiles as well as front seat belts is also urged by the Council. The Canadian Highway Safety Council has announced that in addition to front seat belts, all new General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and American Motor lines will have belts installed in the rear seats as standard equipment. Some 1965 models will come so equipped and many manufacturers will start using them in 1966 models.

The Ontario Farm Safety Council urges that both front and rear seat belts be used.

CAN BE NEGLECTED

Among the hazards are turning too sharply, operating on steeply-sloped land and bumping over obstacles, all of which often result in machines overturning.

Slow moving tractors on public roads and highways can also be hazardous unless they are protected by the new orange and red triangular signs.

These are the new "Slow Moving Vehicle" signs which are used only on vehicles travelling less than 25 miles per hour.

The Ontario Safety Council urges farmers to use the sign on all slow moving vehicles when they are travelling on public roadways and at the same time urges motorists to be on the look-out for the signs.

Electrician Crushed by Moving Boom

Yanath was working on electrical installations when the crane shifted, crushing him between its boom and the beam.

BLAMES SALTS

Dr. Langford says that the salts stimulate growth of algae which clog water intakes and filters, reduce water flow in rivers, pile up on beaches to die and stink, or sink to lake bottoms to use up oxygen needed by fish.

Suggestion Slapped Down By Magistrate

Magistrate T. Y. Wills today verbally slapped down a lawyer's suggestion it was impossible for persons arrested over a weekend in Belleville to obtain bail.

Taken to task by the bench was Douglas Boyle who said a client had been unable to obtain bail from the county jail after being arrested Saturday for the theft of a bicycle.

The magistrate said Mr. Boyle's statement in using a recent newspaper articles on justice administration "is wrong and I am trying to debunk it right now."

"People can be got out on bail if there is any necessity for it at reasonable times," he added.

Magistrate Wills placed the man — 30 year-old Robert Dowdall — on a year's suspended sentence after he pleaded guilty to taking the bicycle and dismantling it.

Is Not True to Say Crime Does Not Pay

TORONTO (CP) — J. L. Edwards, director of the centre of criminology, at the University of Toronto, said today it is no longer true to say crime does not pay.

He said 1963 figures showed in Toronto a person committing robbery stands a 50-50 chance of not being apprehended and rates of immunity are even higher in Calgary and Vancouver.

Prof. Edwards was addressing about 50 delegates from across Canada — including the attorneys - general of Ontario and Newfoundland and representatives of the other provinces and the federal government—at the first national conference on the prevention of crime.

Apart from Prof. Edwards' introductory speech, sessions of the four-day conference will be private.

He said the number of Criminal Code offences known to police had risen 32 per cent between 1961 and 1963 compared with a four-per-cent increase in population. He suggested such figures pay represent only a fraction of the number of crimes, most of which go undetected.

COMMITTED FREQUENTLY

"Cases of fraud, theft, assaults (both sexual and otherwise), vandalism to property, are committed with impunity and depressing frequency in our modern urban conditions of living," he said.

Prof. Edwards said the conference discussions might produce a strong case for certain changes in the law.

"The danger in refusing to consider any encroachment on our traditional rights of inviolability of person and property is that the incidence of depredation and crimes of violence will increase unchecked to the point where more drastic methods become necessary."

A main theme of the conference will be the conflict between the rights of the individual and the rights of society.

Prof. Edwards said he considers the question of increasingly-strained relations between police and public to be one of the most important topics to be discussed.

The conference will consider the changing pattern of crime in Canada, the legality and effectiveness of police methods, such as wiretapping and privileges and treatment accorded to persons accused of crimes.

Kingston Area Poverty Shocks Labor Expert

KINGSTON (CP)—John W Eleen, research director of the Ontario Federation of Labor who has made special studies of poverty in the province, said Monday he was shocked by conditions in Kingston.

"I saw slum housing like I hadn't seen in a long time," he told the Kingston committee on welfare and housing.

He described some of the shacks he had seen as "fire-traps."

Mr. Eleen said that in Lennox and Addington, Renfrew and Lanark counties in eastern Ontario, between 20 and 30 per cent of the families exist on less than $3,000 a year.

Up to 20 per cent of the families in Frontenac County, in which Kingston is situated, live under the same conditions, he contended.

"There are 3,000 persons over 75 in the county . . . who have not gone beyond Grade 4," he said. "Certainly there must be a relationship between the levels of education and degree of poverty."

SEE MARKET

VANCOUVER (CP)—A touring group of 26 Dutch and West German construction experts agreed Monday a vast market awaits Canadian lumber products in the current European construction boom. But Canadian lumber would have to meet keen price competition from the Scandinavian countries now supplying most of Europe's needs, members said at a press conference.

New Gears Being Cut for Town Clock

Belleville's 80-year-old city hall clock has been out of operation for the past two weeks pending repairs, but there are people in the city still terming the timepiece a four-faced liar.

The reason is that although worn clock gears have been removed, the clock hands still remain in place — and all showing different times.

Preparations are now underway for having new gears cut by a local foundry company, but repairs are expected to take another two weeks or more before they are completed.

Next step will be to sling a workman in a bosun's chair outside the clock tower to remove the wooden hands and clean the four clock faces.

Then, at least, city residents won't be able to say the clock is telling the wrong time.

Big-scale Selling Hits Pound Sterling

LONDON (AP) — Big-scale selling hit the pound sterling on the foreign exchange market today, with pounds for future delivery under heavy pressure.

The spot rate for immediately delivery slipped 3-32 of a cent to $2.79 7-32.

Pounds for delivery in one, three or six months "suffered very badly," a leading broker said.

Around mid - day the rates steadied, and some dealers speculated that central banks of the continent had stepped in on the buying side.

Public Has Accepted Credit As Way of Life Rotarians Told by Bureau Manager

Credit is the most powerful economic tool developed since the invention of money as a medium of exchange, Chamber of Commerce president George Hume told Belleville Rotarians at their luncheon meeting in the Hotel Quinte yesterday.

"Only in our own time have we worked out systemised methods of releasing the economic power which credit can provide nations, states, industries, companies, mechanics and individuals who employ credit as a matter of course to secure what they need now by means of an agreement to pay it in the future", said Mr. Hume.

He said that while credit had been known since the dawn of civilization, its greatest usage had been in modern times and its greatest flowering had been on this continent.

Noting that the public had accepted credit as a way of life, and that there was no longer any stigma attached to its use, Mr. Hume, who is manager of the Credit Bureau of Belleville, said a survey of over 20,000 credit bureau history files on families selected at random in twelve southern Ontario communities showed that 80.9 per cent of all credit users paid their accounts as agreed; 10.38 per cent paid with varying degrees of slowness, but without the need of a third party intervening, while 9.53 per cent could be classed as unsatisfactory and ineligible for credit until they did extension in their existing circumstances.

He said the survey disclosed that members in the "unsatisfactory" category applied for credit about three times as often as the prompt payers. Less than one per cent of individuals with good paying habits had any history of criminal activity or serious social problems.

PRINCIPLE SOUND IS CLAIM

In the slow paying group, however, 11.3 per cent had been in trouble, while no less than 28.7 per cent of the "not satisfactory" group had records of criminal activity and serious social problems.

"To some extent this may be why some social welfare agencies seem to have the impression that many social problems are caused by over-indulgence in credit," said Mr. Hume.

"However, in the opinion of members of the credit bureau industry many of these cases would be social problems for other unrelated reasons, and the fact they are credit users is co-incidental."

Mr. Hume said the principles of consumer credit were completely reactivated in 1946 when it was realized that through two wars, the depression, inflation and deflation, and all sorts of economic ups and downs, consumers had come through handsomely.

"In the big depression of the 1930's, consumers ultimately honored their debts. According to reliable figures, the overall final losses on monthly accounts averaged less than one per cent and on installment accounts less than four per cent." In 1945, said Mr. Hume, the consumer debt was 300 million dollars. Last year it was five billion, 483 million, excluding home mortgages, and the combined total for Canada and the United States was 63 billion, of which 48 billion was made up of installment credit, with the largest single financed item being the automobile at a combined total of 20 billion for both countries.

The speaker defined a billion dollars thus: "If you had the billion dollars in the year A.D. and spent $1,000 a day it would take another 776 years before you had completely spent it."

REPAYMENT LOAD JUMPS

The repayment load on installment credit, said Mr. Hume, had jumped from five per cent of the average earner's take home pay in 1946 to 18.3 per cent of disposable income in 1962. Seven out of 10 married couples in the 18 to 44 age group with children under 10 had installment debt. Older couples and single people more often were inclined to pay cash.

"Undoubtedly credit has been closely associated with the economic advancement and steadily increasing standard of living of our society," said the Chamber of Commerce president. "And yet notwithstanding the substantial consumer debt, both the Royal Commission on Banking and the Credit Bureau survey made to the Ontario Select Committee on Credit last July indicated that 50 per cent of Canadians had no installment credit."

Mr. Hume said that credit bureaus have the factual credit history of both the competent and the incompetent credit users and he therefore had no doubt that credit reports prevented many people from using credit beyond their capabilities.

"We agree with the conclusion of the Ontario Commission on Banking and Finance which reported that Canadians 'manage their financial affairs better wisdom than appears to be popularly believed.'"

The speaker acknowledged that as long as there were greedy people, whether sellers or buyers, lenders or borrowers, society would continue to have some credit problems. But these were a minority of the thousands of satisfactory credit transactions which are consummated each year."

COMMON SENSE NEEDED

Mr. Hume said the majority of sound credit users had responsibility, discipline, control and common sense were necessary to avoid the credit transaction if credit were to remain useful. It was also the responsibility of adults to ensure that younger persons being introduced to a complex credit economy for the first time should be afforded a similar understanding of the nature of their own personal obligations.

Al Cameron introduced Mr. Hume and was thanked by Ron Messenger.

Bob Burns, son of Rotarian Harry Burns, gave an account of his recent visit to Ottawa where he participated in Rotary's "Citizenship" program with young people from all parts of Canada.

Cyrus Eaton Speaks

Cyrus Eaton's gloomy prediction that the Soviet Union and Red China will both enter the Vietnamese conflict no later than four weeks from now is not in accord with recent trends.

For one thing, the North Vietnamese government behind the Viet Cong rebel movement is loathe to encourage direct Chinese intervention since it would be an admission of failure. Russia, on the other hand, is believed to be having enough difficulty already in effecting passage of arms and equipment to North Viet Nam, because such aid must pass through China, with whom it has been on rather less than perfect terms for some time.

Mr. Eaton said that in talks with the Soviet premier, Mr. Kosygin, he had never seen anyone in such a grim mood. Russia and China would attack with "everything they have got," said Eaton, the United States would resist and nuclear war result. There was nothing to be done, he opined, but resign ourselves to fate.

But major wars do not occur simply on the word of quasi-statesmen like Mr. Eaton. The Canadian-born industrialist may have a privileged seat in the communist camp because of his friendship with its leaders, but it is inconceivable that either Russia or China considers the Vietnamese war worth the trouble of direct intervention at this stage.

Once it was Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery who, in retirement, returned from visits to the communist world professing to know exactly what the Reds were going to do next. But Lord Montgomery proved no more accurate a seer than Mr. Eaton.

Mr. Kosygin, a singularly mild man by comparison with his colorful predecessor, Nikita Khrushchev (who delighted in harassing the Western powers with all manner of threats) may well have been leading Mr. Eaton up the garden path, in an effort to cow the United States into getting out of the Viet Nam conflict.

Russia Wants Peace

Far from wanting to initiate all-out war with the west, the Soviet Union appears to be acquiring a taste for the soft life enjoyed for so long by the people of what it regards as the decadent west.

Consider for instance that motels are beginning to appear in Russia and that restless young Russians, with few outlets for leisure time, are crowding the popular youth cafes—places where they can gather for coffee, conversation and dancing.

All sections of Soviet society desire peace to enjoy the country's growing wealth and the increase in consumer goods, and to continue such projects as Arctic development. The latter field is one in which the Soviets have made great advances, so much so that a six-man Canadian delegation headed by Northern Affairs Minister Arthur Laing is currently visiting the Soviet Arctic to study methods of building homes and factories under permafrost conditions.

The Soviets are not going to imperil such developments if they can help it. China may want war and stands to gain at least from such a conflict. Not so the Soviet Union which, despite the war in Viet Nam is perhaps closer to the western way of thinking than at any time in recent years.

The Art of Subversion

Spying and its parallel calling, subversion, goes on all the time. All over the world undercover men and women pursue their hazardous calling.

Sometimes the spy work is carried on under the cloak of diplomatic immunity—until it is exposed by counterintelligence. It is then that we read of some diplomat or other being declared persona non grata and expelled from the country. A recent case in Canada was the expulsion of two Soviet embassy officials.

Then there is the impersonal side of spying, using the latest electronic devices, not to mention space satellites and high flying aircraft for photographic work and so on.

Usually when one thinks of spying it is on an east-west, communist versus free world basis. A recent case in Britain, however, involved two men with jobs in top military establishments who pleaded guilty to spying for two Arab countries, as well as for Russia.

One of the men, an army clerk, was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment for selling defence documents to the embassies of the United Arab Republic and Iraq. Just what these two countries wanted from Britain in the way of defence secrets was not explained in the agency report. It does illustrate the belief though, that subversion is universal, all-embracing.

Foods Rich in Vitamin B Should Not Be Neglected

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What foods contain Vitamin B mostly? What is the difference between Vitamin B and Vitamin B 12 if any? — R. J.

Those are intelligent questions. People today are rather well accustomed to telling their children: "Drink your orange juice. It's full of Vitamin C."

But the very important B vitamins are not as well known; yet lack of them can cause serious or annoying disorders.

Think of Vitamin B as a whole group of vitamins. We refer to them, collectively, as B complex. You might visualize this as a rope made up of separate strands. Some have numbers; others are customarily listed only by name. Let's run through them:

Thiamine (Vitamin B1); riboflavin (B2); nicotinic acid, or niacin; pyridoxine (B6); biotin; pantothenic acid; folic acid, finally B12 which is the anti-pernicious anemia factor. Pernicious anemia used to be quickly fatal. Today periodic injections of B12 about once a month or so, keep the disease under control.

Lack of enough B1 causes beriberi and nerve disorders lack of other vitamins in the B complex produce recognizable symptoms pertaining to the tongue, mucous membranes, hair, blood, skin, digestive tract and growth.

Fortunately, any balanced diet including meat, cereals, vegetables, and fruit will be rich in the various B vitamins. Cereals are richest, particularly whole wheat. Meats (pork, liver, lamb and beef) are excellent sources. Brewers' yeast is rich. Many vegetables, which we think of primarily as a source of Vitamin C, are high in Vitamin B, also, especially legumes (peas and beans).

However, the B complex vitamins, in general, are not easily stored by the body, but are rapidly lost. People taking B complex in prepared form may notice that the urine turns deep yellow. This is from riboflavin being filtered out through the kidneys.

Likewise, since these vitamins are soluble in water, overcooking means that they may be lost. Of course, mixing your allotment of the B complex vitamins for several days isn't going to cause trouble.

The best rule is to get in the habit of eating portions of several of the B-rich foods every day. Picking out particular members of the Vitamin B family to take in pill or tablet form isn't often necessary except in a few cases, of which pernicious anemia is the most notable.

Generally speaking, just eat the foods which are rich in the whole array of B complex vitamins.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been taking birth control pills for 17 months. Can they make my hair fall out. I am getting a small bald spot on the crown of my head. If it isn't the pills, what would cause this. — J. A. R.

It is doubtful that the pills have anything to do with it. In one study of 1,500 women taking the pills, only two reported any loss of hair. I dare say you'd find that many among another 1,500 women who were not taking the pills.

Small, local hair loss can be due to nerves; sometimes to a local scalp infection; occasionally may be related to the way you do your pair, putting undue strain on the roots.

Dear Dr. Molner: If a member of the family has bronchiectasis and emphysema, should any precautions be taken? I have seen such patients in the hospital and they were not isolated. — Mrs. E. M.

These are not "catching" ailments.

Strictly Personal

Words Alter In Meaning Over Period

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Gov. Romney's recent speech in which he strongly suggested that we replace the word "capitalism" with "consumerism," to describe the American economic system, is a striking example of the ways in which words become weaponed with use.

In point of fact, Gov. Romney is quite right: our 20th century system of distributing goods and profits bears little relation to the 19th century idea of classic capitalism. The system has improved, but the word itself has become what the philologists call "pejorative."

The history of language is filled with examples of this kind. In our own time, we have seen it happening to many more words than "capitalism." Such words as "imperialism" and "colonialism" are now terms of depreciation and scorn through most of the world; but their original usage was nothing of the sort.

Until the Second World War, "appeasement" was a perfectly respectable word; as Fowler remarked, "Nobody thought any the worse of Aeneas for letting Cerberus have his usual sop." Today "appeasement" is a negative word; anyone who wants to make concessions, however reasonable, to the enemy, is labelled as an appeaser and compared to the European politicians who capitulated to Hitler.

Likewise, the ancient and honorable word "collaboration" lost most of its integrity during the same war. "Bourgeois," which was a neutral descriptive word for the middle class, is now a term of devastation; and, indeed the word "class" itself is used mostly by sociologists, and a "class society" is considered almost an insult by most of the world as a "caste system." The word "reactionary," of course, has become sinister.

Not only political, social and economic terms, but general words as well, have taken on unpleasant connotations they did not originally have. "Academic" is now used in many a derogatory sense ("That's only academic"), to reflect the contemporary vulgar view that the mere" acquisition of knowledge is useless and perhaps harmful.

Along the same anti-intellectual lines, "hypothesis" is very nearly a dirty word in many semi-educated quarters (It's just an hypothesis") used to discredit what the speaker is opposing. What is forgotten is or has never been known — is that "scientific theory" we believe is underpinned by some hypothesis or other.

Words change their connotations, and no force can stop them: "candid," for example, once meant "kindly and uncensorious." Now, when someone says "I'm going to be candid with you," we know that he intends to be unkindly and censorious. In the first century, "capitalism" will doubtless be charged with "feudalism" as a term of opprobrium.

Ottawa Offbeat

The Case of the Missing Space Heater Parts

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — It was all so deliciously "in."

Chubby, in such a quiet, well-bred way.

There was Sir Henry Lionel, handsome, young British High Commissioner, poised and polished, impeccable in his diplomatically fashionable Saville Row lounge suit of properly-bued Etchelsea blue.

And there were his aides, four of them, flanking him, heads respectfully inclined, waiting solicitously on him with facts and figures, murmuring approval as things proceeded in such an orderly and unemotional manner.

They were three of his Trade Commissioners, young, meticulously groomed, eyebrows properly arched in just fine fainted hint of sophisticated boredom; and his Chief Information and Public Relations Officer, suitably rumpled and professionally amiable.

They were ranged, crisply alert yet elegantly casual, in an impressively - tailored line across an executive conference table in the new, luxuriously-appointed $1,000,000 Belgian Square quarters of the High Commission, on Confederation Square here in the Capital.

Ranged before them were perhaps 36 of the big 147-member Parliamentary press corps.

But first, before gin-and-tonic and Scotch-and-water, there was business.

BLUE SKY HOPES

When all who were interested in the Commonwealth had outline Britain's "great new trade initiative" — particularly the president-incumbent of Lesconden's august Times, The Daily Express, The Telegraph and The Daily Mail — had assembled in the high-vaulted reception hall, Sir Henry entered, followed in file by his Trade Commissioned good morning, folded his lean self into a chair, shuffled his papers and intoned "Gentlemen."

With the discriminatory anti-dumping duties being removed by Finance Minister Walter Gordon's Budget, the British were confident that Sir Henry confidently was "a great trade drive to close the deficit gap with you people."

The gap, pointed out The Financial Times, had been pretty wide recently and growing wider annually, running upwards of $700 million by last count — so was that, then, the target?

Target, asked Sir Henry, was that the usual thing, a target? Good idea to have something definite to shoot at, some bull's eye on which to draw a bead, observed Sir Henry, although as a target you know how you're doing, how close you're coming. Splendid idea, then, to set a target.

Target, asked Sir Henry, was that the usual thing, a target? Good idea to have something definite to shoot at, some bull's eye on which to draw a bead, observed Sir Henry, although as a target you know how you're doing, how close you're coming. Splendid idea, then, to set a target.

What, asked the Financial Times, for this exercise, would be the target?

What of the old, old complaint about imports from Britain, asked the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., slow deliveries? Lack of spare parts? Uncertainly of service? Efficient salesmanship?

All taken care of now, smiled the High Commissioner. Deliveries? Prompt. Britain in 180 days for heavy stuff, he promised, when the best "the competition, the American, can do is 12 — we could often do was six months.

What about deliveries on small stuff, asked CBC News, and service on spare parts?

No problem there. Overnight service from Britain to Canada by fast truck or air.

Anyway, suggested Sir Henry, hitting a bill in understandable self-defence, deliveries hadn't been all that bad, nor service on spare parts that unsatisfactory.

THEN CRASH

"What about my space heater?" The Ottawa Citizen wanted to know.

Space heater, asked the High Commissioner?

"Yes," grumped The Citizen, "it's British. Won't work. Can't get the parts."

You could almost hear the discussion crash from the heady heights of high-level and well-intentioned aspirations to the down-to-earth level of such practicalities as the kitchen.

The newsmen waited . . . what would the High Commissioner say about the problem of a space heater that was intruding in unchallenged way when all had been going so splendidly?

"Not our problem, I'm afraid," he said, blandly.

"But I 'bought British' with that heater," persisted The Citizen, "and it hasn't worked for two years."

"A bit out of our field," countered Sir Henry.

"But it's a trade item, and Hees' stuffed shirt image is his political record. For it was Hees who was front man in the palace revolt against John Diefenbaker, the prime minister, which split the party and cost it all hope of power.

Not only was Hees guilty of disloyalty, but he lacked the political judgment to recognize in carry the thing through to a finish, running away out of the country on a "fact finding" rather than face up to the crisis he had provoked.

No doubt Mr. Hees personally is a fine fellow, an astute front man for a big business firm and kind to his mother, but politically he is a man of straw, all brains and no guts.

It takes courage and ruthlessness and hardhood, among other things, to lead a party back from the political wilderness, and Big George just hasn't got it in him to be the chief elected as dog catcher on a national vote, and every Canadian across the land knows it.

Principal booster for Mr. Hees would seem to be John Bassett, Toronto's sporting publisher. What with his hockey worries and the Argonauts both a ll squad, Mr. Bassett would seem to have enough losers on his hands without taking on another turkey.

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

June 1st, 1945

Munitions Minister Howe announced the removal of rationing of automobile inner tubes, effective June 1st, and a revision of tire rationing regulations bringing an estimated 35,000 vehicle owners into the category eligible for new tires.

The revision of tire rationing regulations also becomes effective June 1. The minister's announcement said the output of civilian passenger cars will have to be increased this year to meet essential demands. When manufacturing facilities can be switched from military to civilian production a further increase can be expected.

Removal of rationing of inner tubes was possible because manufacturing capacity was proportionately greater than tire manufacturing capacity and because no natural rubber was required for inner tubes.

Letter to the Editor of Hairdressers Have Their Own Union

Editor
Ontario Intelligencer

In a recent "Letter to the Editor" column there was a letter re the "Barbers' Union". In the letter it stated that the barbers and hairdressers of Canada were together in one union. I would like to state that the hairdressers in Belleville and district and all of Ontario have nothing whatsoever to do with the Barbers Union.

Belleville and District Hairdressers belong to the Ontario Hairdressers Assoc. which is the Canadian.

Our headquarters are located in Hamilton. Hall of our yearly duns go to Hamilton, half of it stays in Belleville.

Some people just never learn. Incredible though it may seem, there is a very strong move afoot in Tory circles — or that part of them centred on Bay Street — to put up George Hees as a candidate for leadership of the national Conservative Party.

How even the most bigoted true-blue, Ontario Tory could conceive of Mr. Hees as leadership material passes all understanding.

To begin with, any more appalling image for the leader of any national party in particular and Canada in general than Street plutocrat caricature would be impossible to imagine.

Nobody east of Oshawa or west of the Humber would cast a vote for a "Torontonian, let alone a stock Mr. Money bags with the brand of Bay Street clear upon him, yet the Old Guard reactionaries of the Tory party obviously haven't learned a thing since the fiasco of George Drew.

Toronto Stocks

Violamac jumped 40 cents to $4.95, trading 67,900 shares. Anglo United Development moved up 5 cents to $1.38, Tribag 2 cents to $2.90 and McAdam 4 cents to $1.22.

Bishops for New Church Would Act Democratically

TORONTO (CP)—Bishops of the church proposed today by the Principles of Union of the Anglican and United churches of Canada would function democratically, an Anglican spokesman said.

"There never has been, is not now, and prayerfully never will be a bishop of the Anglican Church of Canada who misuses his authority," he said.

"While in theory bishops are directly responsible only to themselves, in practice they rely heavily on the advice of counsellors and the wishes of diocesan synods in which both laymen and priests are represented."

The United Church of Canada has no bishops but agreed in 1950 to have them in a constitutional form. That is, they should receive their authority from area councils, or presbyteries, consisting equally of laymen and clergymen.

The spokesman explained that Anglican bishops have sole jurisdiction in both spiritual and administrative matters in dioceses or areas. (Jurisdiction in the United Church is vested in presbyteries which both laymen and clergy theoretically have equal representation.)

Many United Church ministers have said bishops would be a welcome innovation, especially in serving as confidants to pastors and speeding the work often done slowly by presbyteries.

Church Union Plans

Report Questions

them from agreeing on a common order and therefore coming together in one organization." The general commission recommended by the Committees of Ten would first have to report on details. Then the plan would have to be approved by most lower church courts and individual congregations before receiving final approval by general synod and general council.

What the committees have accomplished in preparing the document was described in Vancouver by Rt. Rev. Ernest M. Howse, moderator of the United Church general council.

"It sets forth terms on which we can begin to draft out a constitution. It's not a blueprint."

Most Rev. Harold Sexton, Anglican archbishop of British Columbia, said representatives of the churches have agreed on a measure of unity.

"We can all look forward to this statement," he said.

Copies of the 15-page document were sent to all clergymen of the two churches so that most would have them when the announcement was made here today at a press conference in United Church headquarters.

DEFINE CHURCH

The Committees of Ten said they agreed on what the Christian religion is and a definition of the church and its ministry.

While the United Church does not have bishops, the document said the church formed by union will have them.

"The United Church of Canada has however declared that in view of the fact that episcopacy was accepted from early times and for many centuries and is still accepted by the greater part of Christendom, it should be continued and effectively maintained in some constitutional form both at the inauguration of a union with the Anglican Church and there after."

The document made no mention of requiring re-ordination of ministers in either uniting church, a fear that in the past caused some ministers to turn against the talks on union.

The committees side-stepped the issue by recommending a special commission to draft the terms of a proposed act of ratification of ministries. All ministers of the uniting churches would be required to subscribe to the terms at the time of union.

The laity would be required to participate in congregational services in which they would reaffirm their faith and with prayer and blessing pledge themselves to the new church. Other recommendations by the committees included setting up commissions to find a name for the new church, settle money and real estate matters, including congregational boundaries, reach agreement on ordination of women as ministers, and to deal with regulations concerning church membership, marriage and divorce.

stacles to overcome?

(a) It was necessary to come to a mutual acceptance of one another as two churches and of each other's ministries and members as being truly ministers and members of the church of God; (b) the churches possess different concepts of the ministry—the Anglican with its recognition of three orders of bishop, priest and deacon —and the United Church with its one order, minister or presbyter; (c) a different concept of the place of the laity; (d) underlying the difference in the concept of the ministry, different concepts of apostolic succession and therefore the validity of regularity of ministries; (e) relation of the authority of Scripture and of tradition.

7. Who will be the head of the future church, what will his title be and how long will he serve in office?

These matters will be determined later by appropriate commissions.

8. Will there be bishops?

Yes, "in some constitutional form," as stated in the document. The United Church of Canada agreed to this in 1950. The precise function of the bishops and their relations to the various levels of government in the church will require a great deal of thought, and will be worked out by the commissions to be appointed.

9. Will women be eligible for ordination to the ministry?

This question will be referred to the doctrinal commission to be set up.

10. Will there be a common service?

Doubtless there will eventually be one Book of Common Prayer for the two churches. But unity does not mean uniformity. The document calls for a liturgical commission to be set up to deal with this matter.

11. Will any existing churches be closed?

Not necessarily and not immediately. Eventually neighboring congregations may decide (they) . . . should unite in one building be closed. This would be done under consultation and with under compensation.

12. What is expected to happen to some of the present realty?

Presumably all property now belonging to the two communions would be vested in the new church. Should some property not be required, its disposition would be determined by the responsible church bodies in accordance with whatever trusts it may have to pertain.

13. Will the two present national boards come together under one roof?

Eventually this may be so. Merging of the administrative machinery of the two churches will take some time and full facilities for such merging will be needed. However, there might well be rearrangement of offices and some offices such as those of the general secretaries would have to be brought under the roof in the outset.

14. What will be the relationship of the new church to the See of Canterbury?

It is hoped that, as would be the case in North India and Ceylon, the new church would be recognized fully by Lambeth.

15. What will be the relationship of the new church to the world Anglican communion?

If Lambeth recognizes the new church, it presumably will be in communion with the worldwide Anglican communion and every part of it.

16. What will be the relationship of the new church to present United Church overseas affiliations?

It is equally important to the United Church of Canada that the new church should continue to be accepted by its worldwide confessional bodies and members of them. These include the International Congregational Council, the World Methodist Council and the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, leading to belief the new church will be in communion with Congregational, Methodist, Presbyterian and Anglican world bodies.

17. How many members will be in the new church?

Total constituency (on church rolls) of the United Church of Canada is 2,654,375. Total constituency of the Anglican Church of Canada is 1,358,434. The last Canadian census gives the United Church of Canada 3,664,008 and the Anglican Church of Canada 2,408,088 persons. It would therefore seem that the total constituency of the new church would be 6,073,076 persons.

18. Would this be Canada's biggest single communion?

No. The Roman Catholic Church now is more than 46 per cent of Canada's population. The new church would run it a close second and will outnumber it in most provinces except Quebec.

19. What will happen to those who dissent from this plan?

If and when it union takes place, there will not be dissenting splinter groups that break away from the merged churches. If there should be they will be free to seek membership in or affiliation wherever they wish. . . .

20. Who can still block this plan? . . .

The general council of the general synod by disapproving. So, too, if the plan failed to receive approval from the majority of the presbyteries of the United Church as required by law and from the majority of the Anglican dioceses, when the actual plan of union is brought before them, this, too, would block the plan. To be carried through, the plan will require acceptance by both communions. The task now to be undertaken is not only to work out details of the plan itself, but to gain general acceptance throughout the churches.

21. When will there be complete union?

No one knows, but not for some years. Granted acceptance of these principles in 1965 by the general synod and in 1966 by the general council, the detailed work of the commissions will require a minimum of four years to complete their task. Indeed, it may take much longer than that. Then the task of informing the churches concerning the issues and details of union will take time, as will also the making of the final decisions in the various courts of the church.

22. What will be the new church's stand on divorced persons?

This question will be decided by the new church itself after union. Many such questions will arise that will require re-thinking and a common mind on the part of the United Church with respect to the status of divorced persons, the new church will take this issue, and all the many relevant factors —sociological, scriptural, ecclesiastical.

23. How will the two new curricula be fused?

For the long interval between now and the actual consummation of union, the two new curricula will continue in their respective churches, with revisions, as at present planned. Even after union, local congregations will be free to decide what curriculum they would use in their Sunday schools. Both denominations may continue to be used for the next 20 years or more. Eventually a new curriculum will be built for the new church.

24. Will missions be run jointly?

Yes.

25. Overseas, the United Church of Canada works only in cooperation with indigenous churches such as the Kyodan in Japan, the United Church of Canada-Presbyterian Church in Korea and the Methodist Church in Brazil. It would be unlikely in accord with today's understanding of missions if the new church were to work overseas with Anglican, United and other indigenous churches anywhere in the world as well as through the increasing number of ecumenical agencies with which both now cooperate.

In Canada — in inner city work, church extension, rural and frontier areas — the new church will co-ordinate its work in all these areas and so be able to do more, and do it better, than now.

Elks Hold District Meet At Picton

On the weekend nearly 100 Elks and their wives gathered in Picton for fun and frolic and to transact the annual business of District No. 2.

On Saturday evening a very successful dance was enjoyed by all, the highlight of the evening was a make-shift hill-billy band made up of Picton members and their wives.

Sunday morning members assembled at the Legion hall and paraded to the Salvation Army for church service. In the afternoon Belleville's drill team thrilled the meeting with a very polished performance. Team consists of ladies of OORP and members of the Elks and is a very impressive display. The public will have their first chance to see the team in action on June 26th at the Elks' picnic, Belleville Fairgrounds.

The afternoon was directed to business of the district with members of Belleville, Bellaville, Kingston, Toronto and Trenton attending.

Following the meeting the ladies of Picton Order of the Royal Purple catered to a highly successful banquet at which members returned to their various cities and towns, making plans to hold next year's annual meeting to be held in Belleville.

Still Seeking Dominican Solution

From AP-Reuters

SANTO DOMINGO (CP) — The Organization of American States planned more negotiations with the Dominican Junta today in an effort to extend the international security zone around the National Palace's block from rebel lines.

The junta president, Gen. Antonio Imbert Barrera, declared that his regime would never let the OAS take control of the battered Iorame seat of government now held by about 330 junta troops.

Col. Francisco Caamano Deno, chief of the rebel force, held a press conference he had agreed to extend security zone boundaries to take in the three-story structure occupied briefly and sacked by insurgent troops when the civil war started in April.

Latin - American soldiers in the Inter-Americas force could patrol the security zone, Imbert said in the palace, he said. But he demanded that only a token force of junta troops be allowed to remain inside.

"Highway of Life" Talk Given At Albert College Convocation

By RETA LAWRENCE

On Monday afternoon, after posing for mass pictures under sunny skies, the academic procession entered Memorial Chapel at Albert College for the one-hundred and eighth convocation of the College.

Young ladies in white formals, carrying multi-colored nosegays, and young gentlemen in the traditional navy school blazers glowed with the realization of having completed a successful year and with great curiosity about the winners of prizes, scholarships and award.

Prior to the processional, organ music was furnished by Mr. Angus Macleod, A.T.C.L., L.R.A.M., and Miss Marjorie Woodard, A.Mus., R.M.T.

Rev. H. M. Davis, B.A., B.D., of Bridge Street United Church pronounced the Invocation.

FORMER PRINCIPAL

Mr. R. E. Simpson, B.A., principal and headmaster, presided over the exercises. Mr. Simpson welcomed back to the College for convocation, Dr. Howard, former Principal of Albert College, and Mrs. Howard.

He thanked the students and staff for their co-operation and dedication throughout the years and wished them a happy and healthy summer vacation. When the school opens in the autumn, there will be a full staff and Spanish will be added to the curriculum from Grade XII upward.

GUEST SPEAKER

The guest speaker, Rev. Robert B. Craig, B.A., B.D., was introduced by Mr. T. K. Frankin and after his address appreciation was expressed by Mr. Kenneth MacNeil. Rev. Craig is pastor of Trinity United Church, Peterborough.

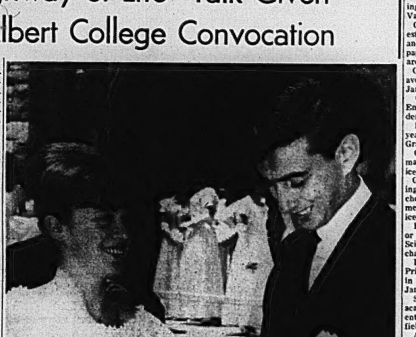
He chose as his topic, "Highway of Life." After reminiscing about the traffic on Highway No. 2 leading past Albert College, during his stay, he proceeded to stress the meaning of highway traffic signs in connection with the Road of Life. The traffic signs generally in use today were chosen by Rev. Craig to demonstrate their meaning not only to busy throughways but to the path travelled each day.

The "U" Turn — There has never been as challenging and as wonderful an age. Young people must drive well and live well. There must be no backward turns. Decide where you are going and make sure you get there. No man who looks back is worthy of the Kingdom of God.

"Keep off the Median" — The middle-of-the-roader has no convictions. Don't sit on the fence. Believe and stand up for your beliefs. Take a definite stand in life.

"Deer Crossing" —The driver must be prepared for the unpredictable and the unexpected. Prepare yourself, be confident and plan well for the unpredictable, which is sometimes pleasant and sometimes unpleasant. Don't ever be hasty in love and marriage. Take your time and when it is the right time you will know.

"Merge" — On the Highway of Life, we must learn to live with others. Learn to share the Road of Life. Discrimination of any kind is disastrous. People cannot live in isolation. They must merge in order to have a good life.



"Accommodation — Rest and Fuel" —All work and no play makes dull people. Don't live for your work — live by it. Man is a living soul so must have time for spiritual worship and for study. One must turn aside at times to recreate, because man cannot expend energy and ideas unless he takes time to create more. Replenish the spirit, re-energize and renew with confidence on the road of life. Live for God, Country and Family."

After the presentation of awards, scholarships, prizes, certificates and diplomas, the Women's Guild entertained the guests at luncheon at Ackerman Hall.

Names of graduates and those receiving scholarships and awards will be printed in tomorrow's issue of The Ontario Intelligencer.

NAME AMBASSADORS

OTTAWA (CP)—Appointment of new ambassadors to the United Arab Republic and South Africa were announced Monday by the external affairs department. Ralph Edgar Collins, 50, at present Canadian ambassador to South Africa, is going to the United Arab Republic. His post in South Africa will be filled by Charles James Woodsworth, 56, who has served as deputy head of the United States division of external affairs since 1961.

Miss C. Kayler Albert College Valedictorian

Miss Catherine Kayler delivered the valedictory address at the convocation at Albert College as follows:

"Man is part of all he meets," she said. 'To each person or experience encountered, we give something of ourselves, and from each association we take something away. During our stay at Albert each of us has left behind some indelible mark of our particular personality. Yet far greater than our meagre contribution, is the essence of Albert which we take with us when we leave.

Every facet of life at Albert is permeated by a far more subtle benefit than the mastery of a dead language or algebraic theorems. On the playing field, in the classroom and residence life we are shown the necessity for self-respect, for satisfaction in what we are and in what we have accomplished. Mediocrity is not accepted by this school. Study is not directed toward a particular profession but toward one's development and worth as an individual; the ability to recognize and comprehend things of value in life; the deepening sensitivity to the myriad of ideas which beseige the educated mind — in short, the ability to live a life on the level for which the human mind was created. It is for this ultimate achievement tomorrow that today we study.

It is when our schooling adopts this attitude, that study is no longer drudgery but a free ticket to the fascinations of life. Botany and zoology reveal the mysticism of creation and, in a sense, the absence of death. English Literature, the complexity and wonderment of human emotions; chemistry and physics bring an exposure to the fascinating order and logic of our physical universe. It is the comprehension of these forces and components of life that give us a greater sensitivity to our world, and as a result, a greater satisfaction of being part of this world. For the man who finds in each moment of life a new lesson, and a new experience, there can be no drudgery, no boredom, no lack of purpose. It is perhaps this attitude at Albert to which we owe our greatest thanks.

A valedictory speech is considered to be a message of farewell. Yet, when all has been said about Albert, all values recognized, all thanks given, one sees that there can be no farewell. Albert College is everything that has made our present attainment possible. She is maturity, the change from the irresponsible youngster to the graduate. She is students, the class of 1965. To these go farewell can be said."

RISK CANCER

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Five Swedish scientists said in a report Monday that pipe and cigar smokers, as well as cigarette smokers, risk cancer. The researchers said lip cancer is linked with pipe smoking and that cancer of the oral cavity and pharynx (throat) is statistically linked to cigar and pipe smoking.

Broad, Liberal Education Said Best for Students

By JEAN SHARP

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) — A broad, liberal education may be the best equipment for schools to give students in today's world, says Mrs. Frank M. Ross, chancellor of the University of British Columbia.

Mrs. Ross was addressing the 120 delegates attending the five-day annual meeting of the National Council of Women Monday.

Discussing the problems of education today, Mrs. Ross said knowledge and its application is changing so fast that some educationists are coming to think "a broad and liberal education, based upon the understanding of general principles and general concepts, is the only kind of learning which will permit man to accommodate himself to the new and novel frontiers of tomorrow."

She said there are 189,000 students registered in Canadian universities, twice as many as there were in 1957, and that there will be about 340,000 in 1970.

REJECT RESOLUTIONS

During the day two Indian members of the Nanaimo Council of Women spoke against resolutions concerning Indians, and delegates voted the resolutions down.

They adopted a resolution that the NCW ask the federal government to appoint a committee to study the problems of causes of impaired driving, lack of convictions and proposals for correction.

They passed resolutions asking local councils to study safety regulations at public swimming places and to study the use of life saving devices in small boats.

They approved a recommendation that the National Employment Service be urged to make counselling services and more information available to mature women entering or re-entering the working field.

A recommendation that the federal government be urged to ratify UN conventions on refugees, traffic in women and children, marriage, and road signs and signals, was approved.

YWCA May Accept People Of All Faiths

SASKATOON (CP)—The problem of accepting women of all faith other than Christianity into the Young Women's Christian Association is being studied in the United States, Mrs. Earl D. Thomas of Kansas City said Monday.

Mrs. Thomas is vice-president-at-large of the U.S. YWCA. Mrs. Thomas said in an interview the American YWCA has appointed a committee to study ways of resolving the question of "how we in the YWCA can be Christian and at the same time accept women of all faiths into our membership."

The committee will make a recommendation to the 1967 national convention of the American YWCA at Boston, where she will be convention chairman, Mrs. Thomas added.

Many problems, such as lack of communication, understanding, differences and religious interpretations evident in YWCA work in Canada are similar to those in the U.S., she said.

WOMEN OF THE MOOSE

The last regular meeting was held in the Moose Hall with Senior Regent Neil Shandraw presiding.

Names of the new officers were read. Voting took place prior to the meeting.

The dinner donated by Olive Hansen was won by co-worker Gladys Ritch.

After the meeting lunch was served by Olive Hansen and her committee. Those who remained enjoyed playing cards.

Next meeting there will be a penny sale and everyone has been asked to contribute.

Home and School Association News

GLEN MILLER SCHOOL

On Friday evening despite the cool weather a good crowd came to the Hootenany Fun Fair at the Glen Miller School and grounds. The musical program was held outdoors on a stage set up in the baseball diamond. The children were under the direction of the Sidney township music teacher Mrs. M. Margetson and teachers Miss Donna Mathews, Mrs. Myrtle Sine, Mrs. L. Hill, Miss Ann Downing and Principal Mr. Gene Berbasson.

A barbeque was held outside with Mr. Ken Noel as chief cook for the evening assisted by Mrs. Bruce Layne, Mrs. Evelyn Pearson, Mrs. Angus Kormos, Mrs. Mary Bowman. Tickets for the hot dogs and hamburgers were sold by Mrs. Ann McLean, and Mrs. Rose Poirier served coffee.

Busy outside were the penny candy table with Mrs. Barbara Wickens and Mrs. Audrey Moore, the coke van with Mrs. Aidie Anderson and Mrs. Marg Parkhurst. The fish pond stock was handed out to the waiting line of children by Mrs. Ken Noel and Mrs. Betty Roberts. After the program the teachers held games outside for the children.

Inside the school was: the home baking table with Mrs. Peggy McFayden, Mrs. Yvonne Anderson, Mrs. Monigue Pitt; candle treasure table with Mrs. E. A. Chamberlain and daughter Evelyn; sewing table by Mrs. W. Munroe and Mrs. H. Collier. Mrs. Mary Gagan had the touch and take table.

Mr. F. Holt, Mr. J. Bigney and Mr. E. Pederson ran the fancy games room. Mrs. Jean Holt was the treasurer for the evening. The proceeds from this event will be spent on class awards, world book payment, Volley Ball trophy for the Sidney Township area, film strips, field day expenses.

The field day is planned for the 24th of June and it is hoped that as many parents as possible will attend.

Lab Instructor Honored at Farewell Party

The School of Medical Laboratory Technology, Class '65, held a going - away party for Mrs. Janet Becker on Friday.

Originally from Guelph, Mrs. Becker came to Belleville General Hospital in 1961 and has been Chief Instructor since that time.

On leaving the hospital she will travel to Germany for three weeks and return to reside in Ottawa.

Dr. A. N. Rola, Chairman of Laboratory Medicine at the Hospital, gave a short farewell address on behalf of the staff.

DESERONTO — A euchre and bridge party was held at the Deseronto public school last Wednesday to provide funds for a trip to Ottawa and a graduation banquet for the grade 8 pupils.

Many tickets were sold by the students and a large number attended.

The prizes were donated by merchants and citizens of Deseronto and the lunch was provided by mothers of the students.

Mr. Roach thanked those who had donated to this event and remarked how pleased he was with the interest that was shown.

The prize winners for euchre were: Mrs. V. Gilbert, first, and Mrs. E. Roach, second, and most lone hands. Mr. G. Dermott, first, and Mr. M. Tucker, second, for the men euchre.

Bridge winners were: Mrs. G. Hazard, first, and Mrs. E. Grey, second. A lucky coin prize was won by Mrs. Fern Cole.

Husbands Can Be Made to Eat All Foods

EDMONTON (CP) — Persistence, psychology and feminine wiles can persuade husbands to eat everything, says a Canadian cooking authority.

"Put a carrot on his plate. When he says 'I don't like that' tell him he doesn't have to eat it. Keep this up and eventually he will eat it," says Jehane Benoit of Montreal.

"When a man likes something such as cinnamon or nutmeg, he'll put it on everything — so put it on everything you serve."

This will lead him to other foods, says Mrs. Benoit, author of Encyclopedia of Canadian Cuisine.

"Trust your husband you are serving a particular food as others are so expensive and he will be impressed, she says.

Every woman can be a "fairly good cook." She says women should first learn how to shop, then about the basics of cooking, and not worry about recipes.

"If you learn how to make an omelet then it's easy to do thousands of things with it."

Susanna's Family Fare

HOW ZOO YOU DO?

Dear Susanna: Any more dreary-afternoon ideas for small fry, Susanna? — S. Smith

A rainy day with nothing to do? No need to cause a hullabaloo. Just sit down and make a spectacular zoo!

Things we'll need (or some reasonable facsimile): A stack of colored paper, paints, brushes, crayons, scissors, glue and a box of straws.

Each one present is to paint, draw or cut out their favorite wild animal. The animal you have chosen goes right onto the sheet of colored paper. Add a border around the edge for the outside of the cage. Dip the tips of a few straws into the glue and stick them parallel to one another vertically across the face of the colored paper. These make very realistic bars. Aren't you surprised how "zooey" these cages, replete with occupants, look?

If this becomes tiresome, how about making a few porcupines? Shape a shapeless sort of fellow out of play dough (I have a good homemade recipe if anyone needs it), fill his back with tooth picks for quills, and cover him with black and white paint. —SUSANNA

GREEN WITH LOVE

Dear Sussanna: Recently I've been reading a lot about people talking to their plants and even playing music to them so that they will flourish. I don't do either of these things, but I do believe there is a lot in what they are saying.

I have wonderful success with growing things and I have a firm conviction why. I really care about my plants, and feel tenderly towards them. I'm positive this is the reason they do so well. It isn't enough just to indifferently toss some water on them now and then because you're supposed to. I'm sure they won't respond to this kind of treatment — green things really like to be fussed over. — J. L. J.

Ann Landers Child's Cough May Become Chronic Nervous Habit

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our seven-year-old girl has a recurring bacterial infection of the sinuses which causes her to cough a great deal. She is under a doctor's care.

My husband is high-strung and unreasonable. He has decided nothing is wrong with the child, that she coughs just to get on his nerves. When he yells at her to stop coughing she becomes nervous and coughs more.

Last night the girl had a coughing spell at the dinner table and her father said, "I'll bet you never cough during the day. You save all your coughing until I get home." The child began to cry and her father ordered her to leave the table.

ANN LANDERS

Please suggest something I can say so my husband will understand what he is doing to the child.—MEMPHIS MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER — It is difficult (if not impossible) to reason with someone who according to your description is "high-strung and unreasonable." Your best bet is to enlist the help of your physician.

Ask the physician to telephone or drop your husband a note explaining the child's problem and urge him to be patient and gentle.

A cough can become a nervous habit that lingers long after the infection is gone. If your husband doesn't stop picking at the girl her cough could hang on for years.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My boy friend is 20. (I will call him Willard.) He dropped out of high school during his senior year because he was offered $50 a week to be the assistant manager in a bowling alley. The job lasted six weeks and he has gone from one thing to another ever since. Willard hasn't had any kind of job for the past two months and this is what worries me.

Two weeks ago he drove over in a new car. He had on a new suit and new shoes. He had bought me a beautiful pin with real diamonds in it.

I don't like the fellows he hangs out with and I'm afraid they are up to no good. When I asked Willard where he got the money for the car and clothes and my gift, he said, "I hit a lucky streak at the track."

My folks say I should report him to the police but I can't bring myself to do it. I am worried sick. Please advise me. — BLUE EYES.

DEAR BLUE EYES — Return the pin and tell Willard you can't accept a gift from a fellow who is not employed.

Tell him you think he is involved in something shady and that you don't want to see him again until he proves he is interested in continuing his education, or getting a steady job. If he doesn't straighten around, I advise you to stop seeing him or you might get into trouble.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I have a friend who is attractive, dresses in fine taste and gets many compliments. Why is it that she is unable to accept a compliment graciously? She always replies with some stupid remark such as, "Oh, this dress is four years old" — or — "Do you really like my scarfe? I took it off an old suit."

Yesterday when I admired her hat she said, "It's not one of my favorites. I wore it because my hair looks so terrible." It made me sorry I had said anything. Why is she like this? — BAFFLED.

DEAR BAFF — Some people can handle an insult much better than they can handle a compliment. Praise makes them uncomfortable because they are insecure and not sure they deserve it.

* * *

No teen-ager is as confident as he appears. Get clued in. Send for Ann Landers' booklet "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed stamped envelope.

Red Cross Society Plans For Water Safety Week

At the regular monthly meeting of the Belleville Branch of Red Cross a letter from Mr. Stringer of the Ontario Division, was read asking for a delegate from each of the secondary schools to attend a conference to be held at Albert College. It was moved that the four principals of the second ary schools be approached to see if they were interested in having a representative attend the conference.

The next Blood Donor Clinic will be held at the Kiwanis Centre on June 10 from 2 to 4 and 6 to 8 p.m.

The Homemaker's report showed that the supervisor had made 224 calls to the end of April. 104 cases had been cared for as well as 43 senior citizens, 183 children and 48 individual cases. The Homemaker had worked a total of 1064 days.

Mr. Murray Workman, chairman of Red Cross Water Safety said that Water Safety Week will be June 13 to 18. He will work in conjunction with the YMCA and the Kinsmen's pool to advertise the week and will act as Red Cross chairman to set up advertising for this program.

A delegation from Read, Roslin and Shannonville as well as a letter from Tyendinaga township asked for support to help set up a course in swimming lessons for this area. It was felt that water safety instruction was needed in the rural areas. It was agreed that assistance would be given to set up a program at the Tops Motel.

At the graduation for the Home Nursing Class held last month in Eastern Education Hall, Mrs. Fletcher had been complimented for the fine work accomplished by she and her assistant.

IODE Project Aimed At Curbing Dropouts

By ANNE MASON

WINNIPEG (CP)—An ambitious project aimed at curbing school dropouts was started by New Brunswick and Nova Scotia chapters of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire and national officers hope the idea will spread.

Details were given to about 300 delegates at the IODE's annual meeting in Winnipeg Sunday by Mrs. George E. Tait, national educational secretary.

After school hours members of the Saint John, N.B., chapter work twice a week with students in the junior grades who have difficulties in basic school subjects.

In an interview, Mrs. Tait said she project was intended to keep potential drop-outs interested in school and off the streets and, through this, combat delinquency and possible future unemployment.

Educational authorities termed the project so successful that IODE members have been asked to continue and expand the pilot project.

HOPES FOR SPREAD

Mrs. L. as Beattie of Saint John, New Brunswick's IODE president, said the project began in a small way last year. "It is just a beginning. We hope the idea will spread."

Mrs. Tait added that she hopes IODE members across the country would take up the idea if they see a need in their area.

In Nova Scotia, some primary students in spring gave help to high school students having difficulty with school subjects.

Mrs. Tait told delegates this is only one of many facets of the order's work in education—a primary field of service for the organization.

Of the $1,123,510 spent by the order last year on charitable work, more than $350,000 was for education.

2,000 BENEFIT

Mrs. Tait, a former teacher who was awarded a life membership in the IODE for outstanding service in the educational field, said most of the scholarship was given in bursaries and scholarships to more than 2,000 students in Canada and overseas.

Mrs. Donald M. Brown, secretary of the First World War Memorial Fund, said that this year eight scholarships will be offered under the fund. The scholarships will be worth $2,300 for study in overseas universities and $2,000 for study in Canada.

In other business Monday, National Secretary Mrs. F. C. Woolley of Toronto said the Union Jack will remain the flag of the order.

"It has always been the order's flag and there is no reason for it to be changed," she said.

RAISIN BREAD AND EGGS

The little story I am going to tell you took place over 30 years ago.

The Westlake family were victims of the depression. He was a lawyer. She was an ex-teacher. They had three subteenage children. His clientele dwindled and she wanted to go back to teaching. He objected and suggested they try to live on and be content with his fees which did trickle in. She was game, and their Sunday routine was typical of their program.

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

Roast Picnic Ham; Candied Sweet Potatoes; Creamed Frenched Green Beans; Relish Tray; Spiced Crabapples, Carrot Sticks, Dill Spears; Mocha Date Layer Cake; Coffee.

On Sunday afternoon the five of them would go for a walk to the edge of town. On their way back each would collect some wood. The little girl gathered kindling in a 6-quart basket.

On their return home Father would lay a fire in the fireplace with the kindling and wood. Mother would go to the kitchen and make Raisin Bread (below) and Buttered Eggs (below). The children laid the tea table with great ceremony with the best china and silver in the living room in front of the fireplace.

About 15 minutes before the bread was baked Mother would start the concocted Buttered Eggs. When they were done to smooth buttery perfection they and the hot raisin bread were taken to the fireside table, the fire was ignited and supper and fun started. While they ate they played a game similar to "Information Please" on subjects relating to their walk in the woods.

Right now I know the kindling-gathering, one of the most charming women of my acquaintance who claims the Sundays of the depression years were the happiest of her life.

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ cup shortening, ½ cup sugar, 1 cup raisins, ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1 egg, ½ cup milk, ½ cup water.

Measure sifted flour into mixing bowl and add baking powder and salt. Stir. Cut in shortening with pastry blender. Stir in sugar, raisins and grated lemon rind. In 2-cup measure, measure ½ cup water and ½ cup milk. Add egg and stir to blend. Add to dry mixture and stir well to blend. Turn batter into buttered 8¾ x 4½ x 3" loaf pan and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 40 minutes. Test with toothpick at centre if you are in doubt.

BUTTERED EGGS (serve 4; 5 if 3 are children):

In top of double boiler over boiling water melt 6 tablespoons butter. Add 6 eggs with ¾ cup milk and ½ teaspoon salt until mixed and foamy but no more. Turn into top of double boiler and cook, stirring constantly, until it is softly set. This takes at least 10 minutes' constant attentive stirring but the velvet smooth results are worth every second of your time. Serve at once on hot toast or toasted English muffins or with hot buttered Raisin Bread (above).

Tells of Two-year Hospital Nursing Course in Regina

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS — You told "Loving Nursing" of the two-year nursing courses offered at the Nightingale School in Toronto and Hamilton and District School, but did not mention Regina, so thought I should tell you that we have a two-year course being conducted here.

This is offered by Regina Grey Nuns Hospital School of Nursing. The first class was graduated last November, with 16 registered nurses. I did a considerable amount of research on nurses' training when this was started in 1962 and unless things have changed, Regina is the only hospital school where girls can become registered nurses after two years.

We are rather proud of the Grey Nuns School's accomplishment and since you are read across the country, thought it wouldn't hurt to mention this. — D.W., REGINA LEADER-POST.

DEAR D.W. — Thank you. I'm glad to be able to publish this information.

Perhaps we should make it clear that the two not-hospital schools are affiliated with hospitals, where student nurses get practical experience while in training.

DEAR DORIS — My problem is: Who provides the food for a large sit-down wedding reception? I have attended several weddings of daughters of close friends and nieces, have happily given shower and wedding gifts but was also asked for quite large quantities of dainties, pies and salads.

I didn't really mind, but now it is my turn to marry off a daughter and I really don't feel right about enclosing a list of food to be brought with each wedding invitation! — IN DOUBT.

DEAR IN DOUBT — Parents of the bride are hosts at the reception, taking care of all expenses.

When it is a home wedding, others sometimes help out by contributing home baking or other dishes. But it is far from proper to include a request for such with a wedding invitation.

If close relatives ask to help, then they could be given special assignments. You need to be sure about their willingness, first.

DEAR DORIS — My girl friend and I are 15. We both look older than our age (at least 16 or 17.)

Our mothers say we can have boys phone us and walk us home once in a while. But when the boys do walk us home or phone, our mothers nearly explode. What should we do? — LONELY.

DEAR LONELY — Listen, dears. Give your mothers time to get used to the idea that you are growing up. It's all very well in theory, but when a sheltered little girl suddenly shows signs of spreading her wings the shock can be just too much. Handle Mom gently.

Fact is, you really are just 15, you know.

Confidential to M.K. — You did not enclose the stamped envelope so I do not have a complete enough address to answer you privately. You did not want me to answer in the column. Sorry.

DEAR DORIS — Would like to know what this spot increasing exercise is. — GRATEFUL.

DEAR GRATEFUL — "Spot increasing" is not a term I use. Do you want to round them out or trim them down? If the first, write in for my "Chart for Curves," which has help for the underweight. If the second, ask for "Be Figure Perfect," which contains spot reducing exercises. In either case, enclose ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR DORIS — I was tremendously attracted to George even before our first kiss. Before he came along I was the really cool one. I have put about a half dozen boys in their place, quick-like.

Can you please give me some advice as to how to slow myself down other than to quit seeing him? The more I think of this the more I know it must be love or a very good substitute for it. I can't even think about school work. — CRAZY ABOUT HIM.

DEAR CRAZY — For the first time you are getting the full impact of the physical attraction between the sexes. It's little credit to you that you have resisted those who did not attract you.

Now show your will power. Avoid lengthy kissing sessions; avoid long, lonely car rides; have your dates in foursomes. If you have dignity and self-respect prove it now.

This is not love.

PEC Student Taking Trip To West Coast

PICTON (Staff) — This year the Prince Edward Collegiate and Vocational Institute has been selected to take part in this Youth Travel Program sponsored by the Centennial Commission of the Federal Government.

The basic purpose of the program is to provide an opportunity for students to visit a region beyond the border of their respective provinces. The experience is expected to provide the participating students with a broader outlook and increased knowledge and understanding of a sister province.

The Prince Edward Collegiate was invited to nominate one girl 15, 16 or 17 years of age in Grade eleven to participate in this plan.

Darlene Coward, age 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Coward of 16 Pitt Street, Picton was the girl chosen to go from this area. She will leave from Belleville on the 5th of July and will travel by rail with girls from the other districts in British Columbia for a period of approximately two weeks. The Centennial Commission will underwrite all costs for the living and travelling expenses for the student. The only cost to parents will be pocket money and travel to and from the rallying point. It is the present plan of most of the provinces to billet visitors in private homes. Miss Coward, needless to say, is thrilled with her good fortune to be selected and has always wished to travel to Canada's West coast. She plans to become a school teacher following her education.

Two Actions To be Heard By Court

PICTON (Staff) — Only two actions were scheduled for today's hearings of the non-jury Supreme Court which opened here on Monday.

The Hon. Mr. Justice Richardson presided over the sessions.

One action was to recover damages for trespass with H. J. McFarland Construction Co. Ltd. of Picton, as the plaintiff and Smith's Construction Co. of Arnprior as defendant. The only other action to be heard was a divorce case.

Only Minor Damage In House Fire

PICTON (Staff) — Fire caused only minor damage in the home of W. VanDusen of 42 Washburn St. on Sunday morning. Fire Chief Nelson Bell said only a small area of the kitchen ceiling was involved, although he added the blaze could easily have been serious. Firemen said the elderly Mr. VanDusen who lives in the house alone, proved quite resourceful and tried fighting the fire himself before calling for assistance.

Transplant Contained Cancer Cells

CHICAGO (AP)—A man died of cancer because a kidney transplant he received apparently contained unsuspected cancer cells.

The case, in which the recipient survived five months with satisfactory kidney function, is reported in the current Journal of the American Medical Association.

Doctors gave this account:

When kidney failure threatened his life after a long downhill course, a kidney transplant was decided upon. The transplant operation occurred Aug. 25, 1964. A kidney taken from a 28-year-old man who had just died from lung cancer was used.

GAINS STRENGTH

The transplanted kidney began functioning immediately after the operation was performed and the patient gradually gained strength.

However, last December the patient complained of pain and tests in the area of the transplanted kidney disclosed some cancer cells. These cells were identical to the cancer cells found in the lung of the kidney donor.

The patient died Jan. 23, 1965. The doctors said:

"Despite the shortage of suitable organs for homotransplanting (of human organs), it appears inadvisable to use organs and tissue from patients dying from widespread cancer due to the hazard of inadvertent transplantation of neoplastic (cancerous) cells."

ution of late literature and Attorney-General Arthur Wishart has discussed it with J. C. McRuer, former chief justice who is conducting the human rights inquiry.

WILL INCLUDE ROUTE

Education Minister William Davis told the legislature his proposed system of community colleges would include some recognized route through which students could go on to university.

Mr. Davis was replying to Liberal criticism of his bill, which passed second reading.

The Liberals criticized the bill as not providing adequate liberal arts courses in the colleges to allow students to transfer to universities except in rare individual cases.

Mr. Thompson said the proposed name for the new institutions—colleges of applied arts and technology—indicated that Mr. Davis had placed the emphasis on know-how instead of know-why." He suggested Mr. Davis had heeded the cry of university presidents in favor of making the colleges educational dead-ends.

Mr. Davis said there was no need in Ontario until at least 1970 for the parallel courses found in some junior colleges in the United States, whereby a student can take the exact courses he would be taking in a university.

NEED PATTERN

But noting that he had named a committee to set up a system of student movement between various institutions, he said: "There must be some recognized pattern—not just ad hoc university admission of a student."

In an interim report submitted to the legislature, a select committee of the legislature studying problems associated with aging asked that it be re-appointed to study a series of specific proposals.

No firm recommendations were made to the government because the committee wishes to complete its investigations, Alec Carruthers (PC—Durham) chairman of the committee, told a press conference.

The interim report suggested immediate provincial action is needed to define and enforce nursing home standards in Ontario, but Mr. Carruthers said nothing so far seen in nursing homes or homes for the aged indicates an emergency situation.

The report also suggested establishment of an "institute of gerontology" to co-ordinate and support all provincial activities offering service to older persons; the setting up of geriatric consultant clinics, and services to the aged in their own homes.

Mr. Carruthers said the committee expects to finish its work by next fall and suggest at least some legislation in the next session of the legislature.

As rescue workers toiled in the darkened gas-filled mine galleries Japan's trade and industries minister, Yoshio Sakurauchi—who is responsible for mine safety—handed his resignation to Prime Minister Eisaku Sato.

Sakurauchi told a press conference he had handed in his resignation because he felt his office had failed to bring in effective safety procedures to prevent coal mine disasters.

The prime minister's office said Sato had not yet decided whether to accept the resignation.

The explosion occurred at the Yamano mine in Fukuoka, on Japan's main southern island of Kyushu.

A series of mine tragedies in Japan this year provoked considerable public disquiet about the efficiency of Japanese safety regulations.

PC Nominee Supports U. S. In Viet Nam

TORONTO (CP)—A Progressive Conservative nominee said Monday night he was dismayed by the passive attitude of young Conservatives toward anti-United States demonstrations.

Victor E. Colebourn, federal nominee in York Humber, told young party members in his constituency that it would have been commendable to demonstrate their support of Adlai Stevenson and U.S. policy last week.

"It is understandable that the young New Democrats would oppose U.S. policy in South Viet Nam and use the occasion of Mr. Stevenson's visit (to Toronto) to receive an honorary doctor of laws degree from the University of Toronto) to confirm their position," he said.

He said that NDP Leader T. C. Douglas' policy on Viet Nam is in direct conflict with that of the British government.

"The solution to end the fighting in South Viet Nam lies mainly in the withdrawal of Communist troops from that country," he added.

Canada should decide "on a policy of common objectives with the United States" to preserve independence in other countries and to defeat communism as a political threat to the democratic system, Mr. Colebourn said.

Metro Subway Workers Start Strike

TORONTO (CP)—Picket lines were established at construction sites on Toronto's east-west subway project early today after a last-minute hitch in negotiations between contractors and Local 183 of the Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers Union (CLC).

The breakdown—over control of a welfare fund covering subway concrete workers—came just as union and company representatives were writing a memorandum of agreement that promised a peaceful settlement of the dispute.

All other issues between the union and the contractors had been solved.

William Gibson, chairman of the employer negotiating committee, said the break in talks came as a complete surprise. The employers had assumed that the laborers would go along with the practice of other unions in the industry, under which welfare plans are jointly administered.

Gerald Gallagher, business manager of the union, said the international union and the local council advised that the union should press for sole control of the fund.

SOMETHING FOR ALL

LONDON (CP) — Organizers here think they have a fair chance of persuading Lord Snowdon, the Beatles, Peter O'Toole, Rudolf Nureyev and Sean Connery to appear together in a film. It would be a 90-minute charity feature, from which all the proceeds would go to the United Nations Children's Fund.

on a specific bill. The debate would be set at six days unless the parties agreed on a different time allotment or the Speaker allotted extra time for amendments.

Mr. Nowlan represented Digby-Annapolis-Kings in the House for more than 15 years. He represented Nova Scotia in the Diefenbaker cabinet from 1957 to 1963 and later became the Conservative financial critic.

GOES STRENGTH

His death reduced Conservative strength in the 265-seat commons to 93.

There are 129 Liberals, 19 New Democrats, 13 Creditistes, nine Social Credit MPs and two independents.

The prime minister, recalling that he entered the Commons in 1940 at the same time as Mr. Nowlan, described him as "one of the tall men of the House of Commons in every sense of the word." Mr. Nowlan was six feet, five inches tall.

"I am proud to say—and I think every member of the House can say this—that political differences never hindered the development of a warm and friendly association with the member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings.

"He was a doughty opponent, but he was always a fair one. He was a warm-hearted, human and generous friend. He was a memorable figure, a great patriot and a distinguished parliamentarian.

"His devotion to his native Nova Scotia was rewarded only by his devotion to Canada; and we will all greatly miss him."

PRAISED BY DIEF

Mr. Diefenbaker, who appointed Mr. Nowlan to his cabinet in 1957, said he served Canada with "courage, integrity and ability."

Noting his service in wartime and his interest in education, Mr. Diefenbaker said "as one looks over the record of his life the impression left is of a man who in dedicated service gave of his best."

The Opposition leader said it was one of his great sources of pride that he had been minister of finance.

"He had a love for his province that was unusual on the part of one who had a national viewpoint as well.

"Of Celtic origin, Irish and French, he approached the problems of our nation in a spirit of generous tolerance and cooperation.

"The prime minister has spoken of him as a tall man. Mr. Speaker, he was a giant, not only in stature, but also in those dividing things that make for greatness.

"His humanity, his friendship with people in all walks of life, was the embodiment of that principle which is so often enunciated: While he walked with kings he kept the common touch. In war and peace he gave his best.

Conjecture in Britain

Exile of the Windsors ---Is It Nearly Over

By GODFREY ANDERSON

LONDON (AP)—He is 70 now.

Sitting there in his red pyjamas, his eyes bandaged after his second encounter with the surgeon's knife in a matter of months, he seemed a weakened old man.

He seemed only a shadow of the dazzling Prince of Wales who gave up the crown to marry the American woman he loved.

But now they were in London. In a dimly lit hospital room, an aging Duke and Duchess of Windsor. There also was his niece Elizabeth, wearer of the crown that once was his.

They talked for perhaps half an hour—but it was more than the visit of the Queen to a sick relative. For the duchess, it was the first time she had seen the Queen in person since Elizabeth was a story-book princess of the realm, aged 10.

This year, 1965, almost sad, meeting at the London Clinic was officially announced in advance by the people of Britain, it meant a public reconciliation was being effected, and the British Family wanted it known.

They still talk about that meeting, and they ask:

"Does it mean an end to the long exile and a return to England for the Windsors?"

WISHES UNKNOWN

One thing that makes conjecture difficult is that no one knows what the Windsors really want. And few know how really deep the estrangement has been between them and Britain's reigning house.

Publicly, the break seemed total and neither the duke nor duchess has hidden some feeling of bitterness about it. But private contacts have always been kept.

The Windsors have no official standing in England. The duke's position as an abdicated king is unprecedented. The duchess is junior to all other duchesses in the land. And her husband's dukedom was the last created.

The granting of royal status to the duchess, such as a permanent return of the Windsors to England, could result only from consultations between the Queen and Prime Minister Wilson. It is doubtful if either the Labor or the Conservative party would raise strong objections.

How would the public react? Some of the older generation in Britain still resent the way the duke threw up his job as head of what was then still the world's greatest empire in order to marry a twice - divorced woman from Baltimore, Walls Warfield Simpson. They see this still as failure in his duty.

PREPARED TO FORGIVE

But most people, after nearly 30 years, are prepared to let bygones be bygones. The duke's recent illness and surgery in the United States and at home has brought him much sympathy and goodwill, even from those who opposed him.

And the youngsters of 1965 just don't care one way or another.

The question still unanswered is: Are the Windsors willing to forgive? Twice, they have made their home near Paris. To move at 70 is a big uprooting for any man and Britain must hold many painful memories for him. It may be too late now.

The duke's determination to

marry Mrs. Simpson provoked a crisis of unprecedented potentialities in 1936.

There had been commoner queens before — the present Queen's mother was one—but a divorced woman as queen was out of the question. At that time no divorced person had knowingly been received by the monarch at court. Very few divorcees get into Buckingham Palace even today.

BACKED BY CHURCHILL

There were days of drama. It was known that Winston Churchill was standing by the King and there was even talk of him forming "a King's party." But Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin had the backing of his cabinet and the dominion premiers. He stood unshakeable as a rock and most of the cards were in his hand.

Refusing to give up the idea of marriage, unable to contract it against his ministers' advice, Edward VIII was forced—in the road to abdication.

At two o'clock on the morning of Dec. 12, 1936, a Royal Navy destroyer slid unescorted out of Portsmouth harbor for France. An era had ended in English history and mild-mannered King George VI was on the throne.

But it was by no means the end of the story. Almost three decades later, the final chapters are still being written.

Mrs. Simpson, escorted by one of Edward's most trusted aides, had preceded him to the Continent.

They were married near Tours in the French chateau country on June 3, 1937, with only a few friends present.

OFFERED SERVICES

When the Second World War burst upon Europe on Sept. 3, 1939, the Windsors were basking by a French Riviera swimming pool. The duke offered to return to London at once to serve his brother, the king. By the end of the month the Windsors were home—their first return since the abdication almost three years before.

The war office assigned to the British military mission at Vincennes on the outskirts of Paris.

Meanwhile the duchess, in blue uniform, was doing her bit. She joined a French relief organization at Versailles and spent hours packing up soap, knitted sweaters and cigarettes for the troops.

When Paris fell, the Windsors crossed into Spain. Again they were homeless, the duke without a job.

They moved to Portugal and stayed there until warned by British intelligence of a Nazi plot to kidnap them. Churchill, now prime minister, found a job for his old master. The Windsors were whisked across the Atlantic to the sunny Bahamas, where for the next five years the duke, who had ruled an Empire, ruled a tiny colonial territory 3,000 miles from the war. That was his last job for Britain.

RETURNED TO PARIS

September, 1945, saw the Windsors back in Paris, trying to reorganize their lives.

Their days have followed a regular pattern ever since. Spring and summer see them in Europe, fall and winter in the United States.

The duke's staff say he receives no public money but lives on his Royal inheritance and royalties from his book.

The duke has been to Britain somewhile like times since his abdication day, sometimes with the duchess, sometimes without.

The visits have always been brief and private. Often they are for Christmas shopping or medical treatment.

What does that future hold for the Windsors now?

There is no question that most in Britain who lived through the abdication crisis would welcome them home if they were to come. The British of 1965 is no longer the Britain of 1936.

NEW ARMY EQUIPMENT—The first of the Canadian army's M113 armored personnel carriers rumbles out of the Severn River near Orillia, Ont. The carriers are undergoing final testing by the army and are being used to train instructors. The army has ordered 1,000 of the U.S. vehicles which have a top speed of 40 miles an hour on land and 3.6 miles an hour in water. (CP Photo)

New Amphibious Carriers Used on Severn to Train Camp Borden Instructors

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP)—Amphibious vehicles that give the infantry mobility undreamed of by Second World War foot-sloggers are being tested at Big Chute on the Severn River 25 miles northwest of here.

The first of the 1,000 new M-113 armored personnel carriers recently purchased by the Canadian Army are being used to train instructors from Camp Borden. They have been making their way across granite and marsh—terrain that is impassable to most other vehicles.

The M-113 is currently in use in Viet Nam. It has a top speed of 40 m.p.h. on land and 3.6 m.p.h. in water and can carry 11 fully equipped combat troops plus a driver and crew commander.

Hatches are closed tight when entering or leaving water so that if the carrier strikes an obstacle or suddenly drops off a ledge it won't be flooded.

Built of aluminum except for the steel tracks, the carrier has armor plate 1¾ inches thick to protect the infantry against small-arms fire until they are into battle. A full-width ramp at the rear permits the men to get out quickly.

Nine of the vehicles are being used for five courses on the Severn River for instructors-to-be from the 4th Canadian Infantry Brigade Group in Germany, the 2nd Battalion Royal 22nd Regiment, 2nd Royal Canadian Regiment and Royal Canadian School of Infantry.

The courses are under direction of Maj. Harry Watson of the Royal Canadian Armored Corps school at Camp Borden and the men teaching the instructors are also from the school, having been trained themselves at San Jose, Calif., where the carriers are made.

The major trouble with an alliance is that the countries forming it soon discover that they have outgrown it—just as a youngster outgrows his suit of clothing.

The alliance must therefore be altered occasionally or even replaced to meet the challenge of the ever-changing state of international affairs.

The defence ministers attending the current two-day meeting in Paris of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization are doing some re-measuring of the NATO suit to see how it can be altered to keep it from splitting at the seams.

And Chancellor Erhard was flown to the United States to try to find out from President Johnson just what minor alterations can be made to help him win the forthcoming West German election during which the reunification of Germany could be an issue.

FLEX MUSCLES

Thus from both sides of the Atlantic busy men are trying to reinforce the seams of the NATO alliance, whose threads let go a few stitches at a time wherever the United States, or France, flexes its muscles to reassure itself, and the world, of its power.

Johnson, meanwhile, has altered practically single-handedly the structure of the Organization of American States by sending U.S. forces into the revolution Dominican Republic contrary to the alliance's charter which says in part:

"No state or group of states has the right to intervene, directly or indirectly, for any reason whatever, in the internal or external affairs of another state."

The OAS agreement was signed 17 years ago to deter one Latin American country from assaulting another and before communism was considered a problem in the Western Hemisphere. Johnson took little time in reshaping the role of the OAS to blend it with U.S. policy, and apparently succeeded to a large extent.

FRANCE TOUGHER

But the readjustment of the Atlantic alliance poses a more delicate problem because of the increasing independence shown by President de Gaulle in his pursuit of greater glories for France.

Any alteration to suit the United States as well as France and West Germany will have to be more subtle than the handling by the U.S. of the Latin American alliance.

France has shown that she would risk the break-up of the NATO alliance to preserve her growing independence and, to make her point, she has reduced her participation in the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization and announced refusal to take part in NATO military exercises next year.

NATO was formed at a time when the U.S., Canada and Western Europe feared Soviet expansion after the Second World War. It gave birth, as a counter-measure, to the Warsaw pact under which the Soviet Union and the Eastern European Communist nations banded together.

The two pacts brought stability to Europe to the extent that fear of a Soviet push into Western Europe, or an attack on the Soviet Union from the West, has diminished from the European scene.

But the Warsaw pact and the NATO alliance have undergone gradual change since their beginnings. And today a few world figures, including External Affairs Minister Paul Martin of Canada, foresee the possibility of some sort of understanding between the two blocs in the future.

Institutions Overcrowded Says Report

TORONTO (CP)—A report issued Monday on conditions in three mental hospitals in the Toronto area says the institutions are overcrowded, understaffed and inadequately equipped.

It was submitted to Ontario Health Minister Dymond.

The report, part of a continuing study by the committee for survey of hospital needs, was headed by a hospital consultant, Dr. Harvey Agnew and deals with the three mental hospitals in the area: 399 Queen St. W., Toronto; New Toronto and Whitby.

Population in the hospitals was listed as 1,643, 1,236 and 2,251, respectively.

Because of the setup of the buildings, it is difficult to segregate types of patients with the result that "psychotics, psychoneurotics, alcoholics, mental defectives, epileptics and old and young patients with various other diagnoses are often grouped together."

The committee recommended the reduction of the capacity of the Queen Street hospital by 400 beds. It also recommended the treating of mentally ill in their own communities where they can be given follow-up care.

The survey suggested an increasingly greater number of mentally ill and alcoholics should be treated in general hospitals. Financial inadequacies made it almost impossible to recruit and maintain enough staff to care for mental patients.

Pearson's Assistant Denies He Ever Was Willing to Aid American Millionaire

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hal Dornan, a special assistant to Prime Minister Pearson, has denied he ever was willing to assist in achieving landed immigrant status for American millionaire Harry Stonehill.

He made the denial as the forgery trial of Vancouver public relations man Al Williamson opened before Mr. Justice F. C. Munroe and a 12-man jury in assize court here Monday.

Williamson, charged with sending Dornan a letter bearing the forged signature of Premier W. A. C. Bennett and with attempting to have him deal with it as if it were genuine, pleaded not guilty to both charges. The letter purported to seek support for the landed immigration status sought by Stonehill.

Stonehill, who made a fortune in the Philippines before coming to Canada, was subsequently denied the status and left the country. He now faces charges in U.S. in connection with smuggling to the Philippines.

Defence Counsel Lloyd McKenzie asked Dornan:

"I don't you agree that as of March 28, 1964, you agreed to assist in getting landed immigrant status for Stonehill"

"I beg your pardon," Dornan replied. "I agreed to make inquiries about an alleged injustice."

MADE NO JUDGMENT

After McKenzie insisted that Dornan had been willing to assist, the witness snapped: "No, definitely not. I made no judgment on the material given me. I merely sent it to the minister (of immigration)."

Earlier, Dornan tstified under Crown examination about a meeting July 2, 1964 in Ottawa with Williamson and Raymond Denis, then executive assistant to the then minister of immigration.

He said that during discussion of Stonehill's investment plans Denis had remarked it was too bad "he wouldn't invest in us, or in me." Dornan said the sum of $20,000 was mentioned and the remark was followed by embarrassed silence.

Dornan said he broke the silence by saying: "I find it difficult to differentiate between Quebec politics and Quebec humor."

Dornan said that after Stonehill's immigration application had been turned down, the Denis remark came up again.

He said Williamson told him Stonehill felt he had a bad deal and wanted to tell his story. Williamson had suggested giving it to Time magazine.

Dornan said Williamson told him the remark could embarrass the government, even the prime minister, and that "he was telling me this to give me an opportunity to tell the prime minister about it."

Dornan continued: "I became rather angry and said I certainly wouldn't carry such a threat to the prime minister and that they couldn't influence government policy in this way. Dornan also testified that among material sent to him by Williamson regarding the Stonehill case was a letter purportedly signed by Senator Lyndon B. Johnson, now president of the United States.

Major Percy J. Gray Retires

25 Years With Hasty Pees

Major Percy J. Gray, CD and Clasp, of Marmora, literally talked his way out of the army at the Fair Grounds on Sunday.

Commentator for the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment's "Trooping the Color" ceremonies, Major Gray ended 25 years of service with the regiment with his microphone stint of duty.

Major Gray joined the NPAM battalion of the regiment as a private in 1940. Two years later he was commissioned after attending an officers' training school at Gordon Head, B.C.

Named a reinforcement officer for the overseas battalion, he attended the Peterborough Training Centre, and Camp Borden before proceeding overseas in 1943.

He graduated from two battle drill schools in England and was posted to "B" Company of the regiment in Italy in 1944.

Battle-scarred in several engagements he was taken prisoner by the Germans in December 1944, ending in a prison camp at Chrismas Day.

MAJOR PERCY J. GRAY

Four months later he was liberated by the American Third Army and sent to England and thence to Canada.

He was discharged from the army in February, 1946, and returned to his former civilian position as an office staff member of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company.

The lure of the army was strong. On the re-organization of the regiment he "joined up" again and was posted as second-in-command "B" Company at Madoc. He became company commander in 1957 with the rank of major and awarded the Canadian Decoration.

He feels the breaking up of sub-units in town where there were armories, is a severe blow to the regiment.

"After 25 years' service with the regiment it is rather hard to sever connections," he said. "However, I shall always maintain my love for it, and interest in all its activities."

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (Reuters)—Astronomers on a tiny Pacific atoll Monday cursed or sighed in frustration as clouds eclipsed a total eclipse of the sun.

Tantalizing glimpses of the spectacle were just enough to show it would have been one of the most interesting eclipses in the history of astronomy — if only they could have seen it.

It was the biggest assembly of scientific talent and equipment ever to study a solar eclipse.

Astronomers from six nations had almost $3,000,000 worth of instruments, festooned in vain with good luck dolls and charms, gathered around them on Hanase atoll in the Cook Islands.

The flags of Britain, the United States, Russia, Japan, Australia and New Zealand fluttered from mastheads beneath a clear sky when the sun rose. Covers came off the instruments.

Then, as the vital moment of total eclipse by the moon approached, a rising bank of clouds blotted out the view.

Half an hour after it was all over the clouds vanished.

The eclipse, viewed as a 100-mile-wide band from the northern tip of New Zealand 9,000 miles eastward to the coast of Peru. The eclipse, the 38th and third longest total solar eclipse of this century, was visible only from a few sparsely inhabited South Pacific isles.

Thirty minutes chased the eclipse across the Pacific in a jetliner transformed into a flying observatory.

This gave them 10 minutes of viewing time through peepholes in the top of the fuselage and they reported 100 per cent success.

Obvious visible phenomena, a spokesman said, were large prominences on the sun; the hantily-shining Jupiter on the sun's corons; long, flashing corona streamers and the corona's great vale of gas, extending millions of miles from the sun's surface.

FOR EFFICIENT SERVICE — Four officers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and a CWAC lieutenant were honored at the "Trooping the Color" ceremonies Sunday. They were presented with the Canadian Decoration symbolic of twelve years' consecutive service with the regiment. Lieut. General Howard D. Graham in his final appearance as a soldier pinned the decorations on: left to right — Captain W. L. Rothwell, Campbellford; Sergeant C. H. Drummond, Norwood; Lieut. Kay Kokesh, CWAC, Belleville; WO 2 F. M. Hamilton, Napanee and Captain K. G. Rose, Port Hope.

Pravda Claims Discontent Of Canadian Foréign Policy

MOSCOW (CP)—Pravda, the Soviet Communist party newspaper, says in a dispatch from Ottawa Monday that there is growing discontent in Canada with the foreign policy of the Canadian government, reports the official Soviet news agency Tass.

V. Ozerov, Pravda's Ottawa correspondent, says that persistent demands are raised in Parliament for a broad debate on the Canadian government's foreign policy in connection with Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic.

These demands are the result of the criticism levelled recently at the Canadian government, Ozerov writes.

"Canadians want to receive a more coherent explanation of questions agitating them," he says. "They refuse to be content with vague arguments advanced by Prime Minister Pearson's Liberal government to justify its unconditional support of the American aggression in Viet Nam."

SAYS WE'RE PUZZLED

Canadians also are puzzled, says Ozerov, by the government's "stubborn silence" on the U.S. intervention in the Dominican Republic, which, he adds in his dispatch, in the final run also involve Canada's foreign policy.

Tass report continues:

"The armed intervention in the Caribbean, Ozerov writes, caught Canada unawares, having thrown the Canadian political circle into confusion. The Canadian government is actually the only one in the Western Hemisphere which failed to state publicly its attitude toward the American aggression."

The Pravda article, Tass reports, says that the U.S. intervention in the Dominican Republic "has clearly demonstrated that the Organization of American States is nothing else but the colonial office of the U.S. department of state and that by becoming a member of the organization, Canada would be involved in the American game."

In his article, Tass reports, Ozerov "notes that the arguments against Canada's joining the OAS outweigh those in favor. The fact that Canada is outside of this organization enables her to follow an independent policy."

The Tass report concludes:

"Naturally, Ozerov writes . . . the public wants to know what is the viewpoint of the Canadian government."

May Remove Arthritic Turk by Force

TORONTO (CP)—An arthritic Turk ordered by the Ontario Supreme Court to vacate his $34.60-a-day room at St. Joseph's Hospital by the end of May was still there Monday and showed no signs of leaving.

Kirkor Horborani, 37, of Istanbul claims to have spent the $10,500 he was allowed to take out of his homeland to come here for treatment of arthritis.

He has been at the hospital since last July and demands either relief for his ailment or compensation for his medical expenses.

The hospital asked him to leave last March after Dr. George Pennal ordered his discharge. He was ordered April 7 to leave the hospital by Mr. Justice Samuel Hughes of the Ontario Supreme Court.

But a hospital spokesman said Monday: "He's still here and he shows no signs of intending to move."

Hospital counsel B. A. Monaghan says if he does not leave the hospital will not have him removed by force, but will obtain a court order.

SPORTSLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

A bunch of the boys were whooping it up at a sports hull session the other night and the question popped up what is the most popular sport?

The baseball bug yelped out his favorite. The guy with no shirt picked horse racing. The puck bucker murmured skiing and the golf nut birdied his choice. The married guy thought he was home and kept his mouth shut.

I don't know about the overall popularity of any sport, but to my mind the most universal is the prosaic, plodding pedestrian game of golf.

Let the scoffers scoff. Let the sceptics ridicule the guys and dolls that hit a little white ball with a great big club and try to get it out of sight as soon as possible with a minimum of effort.

It's a fry cry from that day in Bonnie Scotland when two ancient Jocks toddled over the Highland moors batting stones out of the way with their clan truncheons. When one stone that (s) disappeared from sight in a hole, the said Scotties thought it was a bit of a game.

They took a wee nip of Highland dew and when they sank the ninth stone the flagon was half empty. So they turned back home, sunk nine more stones, threw the empty crock away and thus was born the 18-hole golf course.

It has developed into a game, spake the golf bug, in which all men speak the same tongue and none quarrel. They get mad at the game not with each other.

The ball session developed into a golf gab. Someone suggested that it is the uniquely personal feature of its challenge that makes the game so popular.

Then there's the fact that you take all the credit and satisfaction for a good shot yourself and are correspondingly frustrated when unable to pass the buck for a bad one.

Or it may be the fact that golf is about the only outdoor game you play to the end of your days. Or it may be merely the nineteenth hole.

"What's more thrilling than seeing a guy blast a home run with the bases loaded in the last of the ninth in a world series?" questioned the baseball bug.

"You can't beat a photo finish horse hassle especially if you've got the next month's rent riding on the winning nag's muzzle," yelped the shirtless one.

Each to his own. Take it any way you like.

The fact remains that over the past few years golf has mushroomed into a popularity by the sheer force of impact on those between nine and ninety.

I don't know about lady golfers. They are a bit catty-wampus when playing with themselves but they are fast as good sports when golfing with the man-of-the-house—hell—because mainly they win the arguments at home anyway.

Brother, wait until the "Betty's" of the Country Club read this. And it includes an ex-president whose name is not "Betty" but always accuses me to calling her such.

On the whole, however, the golfing Joe is a genial sort of fellow who plays the game more for the fun, the fresh air, the scenery and the company of his friends than to see who wins.

At the beginning of the century he was doing it in a hardly a half dozen countries. It was the veteran Harry Vardon who with his tours in the United States, lit the flame that spread so rapidly across the American continent and thence around the world.

Now nearly everywhere you go there is a golf club where men of all nations, almost alone among their points of contact, not only play the same rules—but stick by them.

Canadian Owner Likes Colt For Derby

LONDON (CP) — Canadian publisher Max Bell says he is confident his colt Meadow Court has a good chance of winning the £65,301 ($185,963) Derby at Epsom Wednesday. No Canadian-owned horse has yet won this classic, first run in 1780.

"I feel certain this argosy from Canada will wrest the golden fleece from the other contenders this year," Bell told the 37th annual London Press Club Derby Luncheon Monday.

Meadow Court, an Irish-bred chestnut trained by Paddy Prendergast, was tied for third choice at 12 to 1 among the 22 horses still remaining in the 1½-mile turf run for three-year-olds.

Canadian industrialist E. P. Taylor, whose derby entry Nentego was scratched Sunday, told the gathering that after 30 years of racing and breeding thoroughbreds he is used to disappointments.

"I know many of the owners and trainers present here . . . but my sentiments must be with the Canadian - owned horse," Taylor said, adding that he hopes some day he and Bell will each bring Canadian - bred horses over to win the Derby.

Sea Bird, owned by French clothing manufacturer Jean Ternynck, remained the bettors' choice Monday at 9 to 4, followed by the British-owned colt Nikzar at 9 to 1. Gulf Pearl, owned by New York publisher J. H. Whitney, dropped to 12 to 1 from 11 to 1 Saturday to share third choice with Meadow Court.

Jimmy Clark Sets Record In "500"

INDIANAPOLIS (CP - AP)— The bagpipes played long and loudly for Scotsman Jimmy Clark's record-smashing victory in the 43th Indianapolis Speedway 500 mile race Monday in which tiny rear-engined Lotus cars powered by Ford V-8 engines took the first three places.

The 29-year-old former world champion and star of the road-racing circuits of Europe earned a winner's slice of about a $600,000 purse which he will get at tonight's victory party. Last year, the winner's share was $153,650, based on a total prize molon of $506,625.

Clark led for 190 of the 200 laps over the 2½-mile course in the U.S. Memorial Day classic before a crowd of more than 200,000. He averaged 150.686 miles an hour, a record, and finished more than a lap ahead of Parnelli Jones of Torrance, Calif., also in a Lotus-Ford.

The Scotsman picked up an extra $20,500 in lap prizes based on $150 each winning lap and unofficially had won $163,000 in prize money with Jones earning $60,000.

Clark's victory was the first for an overseas entry since Italy's Dario Resta turned the trick in 1916.

FOSTER FAILS

This year's 500 was a mechanical disappointment for many drivers including Billy Foster, the first Canadian to qualify for the race.

Only 11 of the 31 starters were around at the end. Foster, 27-year-old Victoria, B.C., car dealer, was one of the 10 rookies who qualified but he was forced to drop out at the 90th lap when his $40,000 rear-engined Offenhauser Special broke a water line.

Foster was shadowed by ill luck from the start of the race. His car wouldn't start but he finally got off to the roar of the crowd and caught the field before the parade lap was completed.

The Canadian was in eighth place at the 50-mile mark but lost ground after that and by the 100 - mile mark was not among the top 10.

He started from the second row, a spot earned when he was sixth among 19 in qualifying runs when he averaged 158.416 m.p.h.

Despite his Indianapolis showing, Foster plans to join the big-time racing circuit full time.

While Foster didn't make it big here, other rookie drivers turned in their greatest showing in 500 history, winning five of the first nine places in the methodical grind.

Italian - born Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., gave Ford a 1-2-3 sweep with a brilliant driving performance that brought him an overwhelming vote as the outstanding rookie of the race.

Jones' time of 149.200 m.p.h. and Andretti's clocking of 149.121 also shattered the previous mark of 147.350 set by last year's winner, A. J. Foyt of Houston, Tex.

The new breed of rear-engined speedsters, 27 in all against four front-engined Offenhauser roadsters and two ill-fated Novis, was far less durable than the new breed of drivers.

Nine of 17 rear-engined Fords and nine of 10 rear-engine Offys limped off the track. Two of the four Offy roadsters finished, but neither Novi did.

Luckless Foyt, Monday's pole driver and also 1961 champion, virtually handed the race to Clark when the transmission failed on his modified Lotus-Ford after he battled the Scotsman closely for 290 miles.

Then, all the slick driving bachelor farmer from Dunn, Scotland, had to do was keep his smarting green and yellow Lotus-Ford on the beam for a no-contest triumph.

That set off a screeching band of bag-pipers.

Winner of the race in 1963, Jones loaded only 25 gallons in his 55-gallon capacity car this time during his third and last pit stop. He ran out of fuel on the post-finish lap.

Behind Andretti, other placing rookies were Gordon Johncock, Hastings, Mich., fifth; Mickey Rupp, Mansfield, Ohio, sixth; Bobby Johns, Miami, Fla., eighth; and Al Unser, Albuquerque, N.M., ninth.

Fourth went to Al Miller, "sophomore" driver from Standish, Mich., while Don Branden, Champaign, Ill., making his seventh start, was seventh; Eddie Johnson, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, 52-year veteran, 10th; and Len Sutton, Portland, Ore., starting a seventh time, was 11th.

The race was free of serious accidents and injuries, a drastic but happy contrast to last year's race when two drivers, Eddie Sachs and Dave MacDonald, were killed.

Clark led the field across the line on the first lap, gave way to two-time winner Foyt on the second and then returned as the pace-setter until it was time for refuelling after the 66th lap.

Foyt then moved in front for nine laps, but when he went into his pit for more fuel, Clark got the lead back and kept it.

On the 115th lap, Foyt rolled to his pit, got out of the cockpit, and walked away.

"Transmission trouble," the pit stewards announced.

The word was flashed to Clark by way of a signal board that Foyt was out.

Clark now could relax a bit, for he was more than two minutes ahead of Jones, the man who had beaten him in a close and controversial finish here two years ago.

There were no tire changes on Clark's car, the Firestones carrying him all the way.

Hull, Hay Pallbearers For Balfour

REGINA (CP)—Bobby Hull and Bill Hay of Chicago Black Hawks will be among pallbearers Wednesday at the funeral of Murray Balfour, a former linemate who died Sunday while recuperating from an operation to correct a respiratory disease.

Balfour played on a line with Hull and Hay during much of his five-year National Hockey League career with Chicago. He is 28.

Bob Turner, a former Montreal and Chicago player, and Doug Kilbh, a former Saskatchewan Roughrider player in the Western Football Conference, also will be pallbearers.

Crothers 'Tough' Says Snell

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP)—New Zealand's Olympic champion and world record-holder Peter Snell is not underestimating the opposition in his clash with Bill Crothers at Toronto June 10.

Told here that Crothers was working on strategy to defeat him after a series of Snell victories, the New Zealand champion acknowledged that Crothers was a tough opponent.

"Crothers has improved since 1962 and it looks as though he could now be as tough an opponent as George Kerr—and I had some great tussles with George," Snell said.

"Crothers is very nearly as fast as Kerr and he finishes better. He is very much aware of his own strengths and weaknesses and mine. I will be running against somebody who will be thinking during the race and will have thought it all out.

"I know I haven't as much basic speed as Crothers. The key to my success is basic stamina."

But Snell still thinks he can hold the Canadian off. Referring to his victory over Crothers in a 1,500-yard race at Los Angeles last month, Snell said: "In that last race I was still able to wait for him and he wasn't able to pass me as people thought he would."

Giants Stretch String To Five

Three Off Pace

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Gaylord Perry, best known for the pitch he made against a dugout wall, has found he's more effective aiming at the catcher.

The 26-year-old San Francisco right-hander allowed two hits in the first inning Monday but held St. Louis Cardinals hitless over the final 8 2-3 innings as the Giants stretched their winning streak to five games with a 4-1 triumph.

It was the best performance of the season for Perry, who last year precipitated the zany case of the many-splintered bat.

In a game at Houston, he was tagged for a game-winning hit by Nellie Fox and immediately stormed off the mound, picked up Fox' bat and threw it against the concrete dugout.

The concrete dugout didn't give. The bat did. And so did Perry — eventually. He was billed by the Houston club for the cost of the bat, $2.98 and paid up by order of National League president Warren Giles.

In his last three starts, he has allowed only five runs for a 1.80 earned-run average while bringing his record to 5-3.

CHASING DODGERS

The Giants' victory moved them within three games of the National League lead as Los Angeles Dodgers split a doubleheader with Cincinnati, winning the opener 4-3 before Joey Jay ended the Reds' six-game losing streak with a three-hit, 6-1 nightcap triumph.

Pittsburgh Pirates, meanwhile, ran their winning streak to 11 games by defeating Philadelphia Phillies 5-2, Houston Astros topped Milwaukee Braves 7-2 and New York Mets downed Chicago Cubs 5-2 before their game was halted by darkness after nine innings with the score tied 3-3. It will have to be replayed.

Perry got the only runs he needed against the Cards in the sixth inning when Willie McCovey hit his 11th homer, a two-run shot off Curt Simmons.

Maury Wills was the key to the Dodgers' first-game triumph. The little shortstop stole second and third in the fifth inning and scored the tying run on Ken Fairly's single. Then, in the ninth, he stroked his fourth single, driving in the winning run.

SPOIL SHUTOUT

Jay, now 3-1, allowed only Jim Gilliam's third-inning double over the first eight innings of the nightcap before the Dodgers broke his shutout bid in the ninth.

Don Clendenon tripled home two runs and scored o n Bill Mazeroski's single as the Pirates jumped on Chris Short for five runs in the third inning and put the game out of the Phillies' reach.

Bob Aspromonte's bases-loaded single in the eighth knocked in the first two runs in a six-run explosion that carried Houston past the Braves in a night game.

The Mets won the opener behind Jack Fisher's three-hit pitching and a three-run homer by Jim Hickman.

They seemed to have the nightcap tucked away too as Gary Kroll went into the eighth with a three-hit, 3-0 shutout. But Billy Williams tied it with a homer and each team scored in the ninth.

Leafs Take Pair From Red Wings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Reliable relief pitching and timely hitting continued to be the source of Toronto Maple Leafs' success in the International Baseball League Monday as they took two games from Rochester Red Wings 3-2 and 1-0.

The results put the Leafs 1½ games ahead of the second place Atlanta Crackers who split their doubleheader with Columbus Jets, winning 3-0 and losing 9-7.

In single games Syracuse Chiefs downed Buffalo Bisons 6-3 and Jacksonville Suns defeated Toledo Mud Hens 8-6 in 12 innings.

Pete Charton won his fifth game for the Leafs against three losers with relief help from Guido Grilli and Bob Heffner in the nine-inning opener. The second game, which also was decided by catcher Russ Gibson's one - out homer in the seventh inning. The hit won the game for Jerry Herron, who has won five and lost one.

ALTOBELLI INJURED

Herron hit two Rochester batters and one of them, Joe Altobelli, the Red Wings' leading hitter, was forced out of the game. His right shin will be x-rayed today.

Jack Smith pitched and hit his way to victory in the first game for Columbus. He allowed only six hits and walloped a two-run double.

Columbus overcame a 5-0 Atlanta lead in the second game with two-run rallies in the second, third and fourth innings.

Three more runs scored in the fifth inning and one more in the eighth on a triple steal.

A two-run homer in the 12th inning by Jim Napier gave the Suns their victory.

Minor Softball Results

Runs were numerous in the Belleville Minor Softball Association's tyka division last night.

On the West Hill, Kinsmen Bobcats tamed the Bears by a 45-13 count and Wings stopped the Rangers 29-7.

In East Hill action, Canadian Legion whacked the RCA Rockets 38-33, Barons downed the Kinsmen Hawks 36-13 and Bowl-O-Drome Bruins nipped the Leafs 18-15.

TIPS FOR CHIPS

You will note in the illustration that the left leg and foot are heavily shaded. This is to emphasize that your weight should remain primarily on this side of your body during short chip shots.

Address the ball with most of your weight on this foot and keep it there. This will accomplish several things for you, all of which will improve your chipping.

First, since you will be less likely to move your body unnecessarily during the back or through stroke, you will be more likely to contact the ball squarely.

Second, you will be more likely to meet the ball with your hands leading the clubhead. This also helps insure solid contact.

Third, you will be less likely to "look up" on the shot.

Firemen Going Strong

Miller, Radatz Still Twinkling

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

The limelight has fallen lately on Stu Miller and Dick Radatz, a couple of short-term relief pitchers who need a week to put together a nine-inning effort. But the truly unsung hero among American League pitchers is Hoyle Kuzdle.

He has a seven-game winning streak over the last five years.

Kuzdle's latest was a relief triumph of 1965 as Washington Senators defeated Kansas City Athletics in the first game of a 5-3, 5-1 doubleheader sweep Monday.

The 27-year-old right-hander first reached the majors with Detroit Tigers in 1961, winning two games in four appearances. The next season, he pitched in 10 games with the Tigers, winning three.

As two-year exile in such minor-league towns as Syracuse, Tacoma and Toronto followed, and Kuzdle didn't get another crack at Major League hitters until the Senators purchased him from Hawaii earlier this season.

BEGIN TO WONDER

American League hitters, meanwhile, are beginning to wonder whether there's any chance of exiling Miller and Radatz.

Miller extended his shutout streak to 29 scoreless innings in 15 relief appearances in Baltimore Orioles' 5-4 second-game triumph over Minnesota. The Twins won the opener, 5-3.

The 37-year-old relief ace hasn't given up a run since April 24, recording his earned run average from 7.36 to 1.70.

Trailing Miller by three relief shutouts is Radatz, who didn't permit a hit in 3 2-3 innings before Boston Red Sox defeated Angels 3-0. The Angels took the first game 5-4.

Radatz, who earlier this season had a 7-0 e.r.a., hasn't allowed a run in 16 2-3 innings, lowering his average to 2.51.

Elsewhere in the American League, Chicago White Sox nipped Cleveland Indians 4-3 in 10 innings before losing 4-3 and Detroit defeated New York Yankees 5-1 after dropping a 9-1 decision.

Sam Bowens' leadoff home run off Johnny Klippstein in the ninth brought Miller and Baltimore a second consecutive win. Jim Kaat halted the Orioles on three hits in the opener.

KNOCKED IN RUN

Injury-plagued Dennis Bennett pitched 3 1-3 innings before leaving with a 3-2 lead in the sixth inning of the nightcap. Felix Mantilla knocked in two Boston runs with a sacrifice fly and a double.

Bob Lee saved Dean Chance's fourth victory in the doubleheader in the first game, coming on in the eighth inning.

Koplitz sealed relief help from Mike McCormick and Steve Ridzik in the eighth before extending his scoreless record. Pete Richert became the second Senator pitcher to complete a game this season, outpacing the Athletics on four hits in the nightcap.

The White Sox edged the Indians in the first game on Don Buford's leadoff homer against Floyd Weaver in the 10th inning. The Indians won the second contest when Vic Davalillo, who had doubled, raced home in the ninth as relief pitcher Bruce Howard picked up Joe Azcue's a c r i f i c e bunt and threw the ball into left field. Joe Sparma stymied the Yankees on five hits, only two after the second inning in the second game. Tom Tresh drove in all his runs with eight innings of the opener, bringing his record to 4-6.

DeMille One-hits Lombanks

MADOC (Special) — Kenny DeMille pitched Bloomfield back into sole possession of first place in the Belleville and District Softball League here last night, stopping Tweed Lombanks 9-1 on a brilliant one-hitter.

DeMille lost both his no-hit bid and his shutout in the sixth inning after Bloomfield had built a 4-0 lead.

After fanning the first man, Terry LeSage cracked a solid double off DeMille. The Bloomfield pitcher got the next man swinging but LeSage had stolen third base and raced home when Guernsey, failing to hold the third strike, threw to first base for the putout.

DeMille struck out 14 Tweed batters and issued a single base on balls. He mafes had just two errors with the one costing him the shutout. It was DeMille's third straight complete game.

Blaine Healey started and took the loss for the Lombanks, giving way to Joe Barrons in the top of the eighth inning. They were touched by 11 hits. Healey whiffed six and walked three while Barrons fanned three and walked two.

Bloomfield took a 1-0 lead in the first but it was a pair of big home runs that sailed away the club's fourth victory in five starts. Leo St. Denis crashed a three-run homer in the fourth and Ron Weese smashed a grand-slam job in the five-run eighth frame.

Gene Yorke rapped three singles for the winners while Ron Weese had his four-run homer and a single. Bob Fawcett hit a double and single, Keith MacDonald two singles, Leo St. Denis his home run and Ken DeMille one single.

The Lombanks travel to Belleville tonight for an eight o'clock game against Ellis Juniors, at the Fairgrounds. Tonight's winner will share first place with Bloomfield.

Manager, Coach Juniors

Hamilton Signs Pilous

HAMILTON (CP) — S. J. Ribby, president of Hamilton Red Wings of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A Series, announced Monday the appointment of Jacky Pilous as manager-coach of the club. He succeeds Danny Lewicki who quit after the 1964-65 season.

Pilous, c o a c h of Victoria Maple Leafs in the Western Hockey League last season and former coach of Chicago Blac' Hawks in the National League, quit the Victoria club in April.

Pilous, who never missed the playoffs as coach of St. Catharines Teepees for eight years, was named coach of the Hawks midway through the 1957-58 season and lifted the club from last place to a fifth-place finish. He was reinstated in that capacity later after compiling the best coaching record in Chicago history.

Hawks, under Pilous, won the Stanley Cup in 1961 and finished second, one point behind Toronto Maple Leafs, the yer he was let go.

At Victoria, Leafs general manager Buck Houle said Pilous will quit "due to personal family obligations."

Pilous guided Denver Invaders to a first-place WHL finish in 1963-64 and stayed with the team when it moved to Victoria last season.

The leafs finished fourth last season but made the WHL finals against Portland Buckaroos.

Houle said no replacement as coach has been found yet.

British Like French Horse

Our Derby Entries Ignored

By RON HOWARD

LONDON (CP)—A lingering bout of influenza has raised doubts about the condition of Nentego, a Canadian - owned colt entered in the June 9 Epsom Derby, the $150,000 British thoroughbred classic for three-year-olds.

Nentego showed some promise last year as a two-year-old but this will be his first start in the 1965 season.

"It's just a matter of whether we can get him into condition for the race," said trainer Sir Gordon Richards in a telephone interview from his home in Rockbourne, Hampshire.

Sir Gordon, who retired from the saddle in 1954 after 30 years and 26 British jockey championships, emphasized that the colt's new, Never Say Die, won the derby in 1954.

GETS BETTER

"This bloodline usually improves with the age of the horse and Nentego was useful as a two-year-old. There is no reason why he shouldn't be as good this year."

The English - bred chestnut, purchased for $13,860 as a yearling by industrialist E. P. Taylor of Toronto, ran four races last year, turning in a first, a third in the Dewhurst Stakes at Newmarket and a close fourth in the highly-rated Timeform Gold Cup Stakes at Doncaster. Sir Gordon said Taylor, who is expected to attend the race at Epsom, Surrey, will make the final decision on whether to run the horse.

Nentego's jockey for the race, first run in 1780 and never won by a Canadian-owned horse, will be Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Imbert, who brought in last year's derby winner — the favored Santa Claus.

BACK IN SADDLE

Breasley, who was knocked unconscious when his mount fell May 21 at Lingfield, Surrey, returned to riding several days later.

The veteran, who has told reporters he will "race until he is 60," has won the British jockey championship four times, including 1961, 1962 and 1963, and has ridden in 13 derbys, winning for the first time last year.

Bookmakers, quoting odds of about 100 to 1 on the Taylor entry, said there was reluctance on the part of bettors to wager on an untried horse just recovering from the flu.

And British racing writers, overwhelmingly behind the French colt, Sea Bird, currently favored at about 9 to 4, have virtually i g n o r e d Nentego's chances in the race.

WON'T PLAY SINGLES

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) Chuck McKinley will play only in the doubles in this week's opening Davis Cup sone tennis matches against Canada, U.S. captain G e o r g e Mccall announced Monday. The matches start Friday.

Cycling Student In Sixth

LONDON (CP) — Cheruble Joe Jones, a cycling science student who paid his own fare from Canada to compete in the Tour de France bicycle race, features weekend practice runs north of Toronto have made the going easy on the south downs of England.

"I did about 4,000 miles from the beginning of January in preparation for this," Joe said in an interview Monday night after the second leg of the 14-day tour over 1,400 miles. He finished sixth Monday and holds the same place in over-all standings among 72 riders.

"So far I think there hasn't been bad — higher than Canadian standards in general but not as high as the Tour de St. Laurent," Canadian equivalent of the European cycling marathons in which Jones placed 24th as a 19-year-old last summer. The Tour de St. Laurent is held every August in Quebec's St. Lawrence Valley.

Harness Meets Open at London Track

Officials said the sessions, which extend to July 17, already have drawn nearly 500 horses to the grounds and more are expected within the next few days.

Sharing top billing on the inaugural program was the Invitation Pace and the Forest City Pace.

Patrick Signing Denied

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A Los Angeles Blades official Monday denied reports that the Western Hockey League team has signed Lynn Patrick of Boston Bruins as its manager-coach.

"Since his name has arisen, I can say that we have talked to him," general manager Sam Blades general manager Jack Geyer. "But at the request of the owner, he has not been given jobs elsewhere, I can't give their names."

All Blades' two-year contract as Blades coach ends in September. The management recently announced that the contract is not being renewed. The team finished the season sixth and last in the league.

WIN FIRST LEG

MANCHESTER, England (Reuters) — Manchester United defeated Ferencvaros of Hungary 3-2 in the first leg of their Inter-Cities Fairs Soccer Cup semi-final Monday night. The score was 1-1 at half-time.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and greatly relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly dissolves dead cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

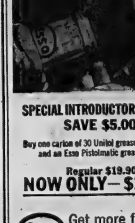
Nichols Defeats Venturi

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP)—Bobby Nichols fired a two-over-par 71 Monday and beat Ken Venturi by one stroke in the National Golf Day target score match.

They were even at the end of 17 holes at the par 36-35—71 Laurel Valley Golf Club course, and Venturi took a bogey 5 on 18 after hooking his tee shot into high rough.

With Nichols finishing two over, it means duffers throughout the United States will have to shoot at least one over par to win National Golf Day awards. The round netted Nichols $10,000; Venturi $5,000.



Duffers throughout the U.S. will match their scores, minus their handicaps, against Monday's winner. Those who better the winning score will be given certificates.

National Golf Day is sponsored by the PGA and costs $25 to enter. The proceeds go to a variety of golf projects. A total of 75,963 took part last year.

The Tracks

With Avelino Gomez in the saddle, Good Old Mort, carrying 126 pounds, finished the mile race two lengths behind Victorian Era, a colt carrying 10 pounds less.

Most of the $7,741 fans thought Victorian Era with Wayne Harris in the saddle would defeat Good Old Mort and he went off the odds-on choice, returning $3.50, $2.20 and $2.10.

The quinella of the Victorian Era and Good Old Mort returned $18 while the daily double of Fielder's Choice and Spice Bandit paid $205.50.

Terms Not Revealed

Blake Signs For Year

MONTREAL (CP) — Hector (Toe) Blake, who threatened to retire while still piloting a winner, signed a one-year contract Monday to coach Canadiens and guide the fortunes of the Stanley Cup champions for the 1965-66 season.

Blake, 52, entering his 11th year at the helm, is the National Hockey League's most successful coach, guiding Canadiens to a Stanley Cup championships and seven first-place finishes in 10 seasons. A recent clean bill of health, coupled with the team's success last season, were contributing factors in his decision to return.

Terms of the contract were not revealed but following his meeting with general manager Sam Pollock, Blake said he is "very happy with the conditions" of the pact.

Blake, who took over from the late Dick Irvin in 1955, promptly led the Canadiens to five consecutive Stanley Cup years. Throughout the season just ended, he had been reported undecided as to his future with the club.

Nurse Gave Dressen The Heave-ho

NEW YORK (AP) — They used to say of Ted Williams that he could roll out of bed, step up to the plate in the dark of night, and get a base hit.

The great hitter has nothing on Charlie Dressen. The Dandy little manager of Detroit Tigers can get out of a hospital bed at midnight and yank a pitcher.

Dressen, back on the job for the first time since a heart attack felled him in spring training March 8, was talking about it Monday before splitting a doubleheader with New York Yankees.

"I usually don't dream," he said. "But this one night, at the hospital, I was dreaming that I was back managing the ball club. I must have been a little delirious because I was tossing from side to side and making noises. Finally, I pulled myself out of bed. The nurse rushed over and grabbed me. 'Mr. Dressen, Mr. Dressen, what do you think you're doing?' she said.

Except for a little less vibrancy in his voice and a bit less poundage around its waistline, there appeared little change in Charlie despite his enforced layoff of nearly three months.

Mary Poppins Carries Disney to New Heights

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Walt Disney picked up the telephone and asked a studio executive: "What's the latest projected gross on Mary Poppins?"

Disney listened for a moment, a faint smile on his face.

"Forty million, huh?" he said. "Well, we're getting right up where Sam Goldwyn said we'd be."

The movie maker put down the phone and explained: "After Sam saw Poppins, he called me up to say how much he enjoyed it and how it was the kind of picture the industry should be making. He said he was going to take ads saying so. I told him he needn't, but he went ahead with full-page ads in all the trade journals.

"He also told me that the picture would bring in 50 million in rentals. I thought he was exaggerating at the time. Now I don't think so."

Mary Poppins is indeed one of the success stories of recent Hollywood times, demonstrating.how a single film can buoy the financial fortunes of a company. Disney was already a highly profitable operation; Poppins's success has lifted the firm to new heights.

HAS DRAWBACKS

But such a triumph also has its drawbacks, Walt commented.

"Now, whenever we discuss new projects, the people here say, 'it'll be another Poppins.' I have to keep telling them, 'Don't say that. Each picture has to be different.'"

"The same thing happened to me with Snow White. It was a big success, and people kept expecting more of the same. We brought out Pinocchio, and it flopped. Then came Bambi, and it did nothing. The war came along and took away our foreign market, and we were in trouble. It wasn't until after the war when Pinocchio and Bambi were re-released that we began to get our money back from them."

Why is Mary Poppins so successful?

Disney reasons that it was a combination of many factors, but principally the fantasy and the winning characters, as played by Julie Andrews and Dick Van Dyke. Most other studios would be plotting a sequel to cash in on the film's success. But the Disney philosophy is anti-sequel.

"Poppins also said we should do another picture with the dwarfs," he explained. "They were good characters to work with, but I said that the picture would be its own sequel. You bring it back every few years for the new generations. We've done that, and it has worked out fine.

MADE ONE SEQUEL

"I did make one sequel. After The Absent-Minded Professor, I made Son of Absent-Minded Professor. I thought that was because we had a lot of gags left over; having done a basketball game in the first one, I wanted to have a football game, too."

Will Mary Poppins?

"Mary Poppins might have stellar complications. Dick Van Dyke is back on the lot in 'Lt. Robin Crusoe, USN, and would probably be available for a re-do as the animated chimney sweep. That film is priced out of my range," Walt grinned. She played Poppins for $150,000. Julie is now quoted: $750,000 plus 10 per cent of the gross.

"I have an idea she might come back (for less) if I had something for her." Disney added, "but I don't think it would be a sequel."

Meadow Court Given Chance In Epsom Derby

By RON HOWARD

LONDON (CP)—A Canadian-owned colt named Meadow Court has what his trainer describes as a fighting chance to win Wednesday's $150,000 Epsom Derby, a top event in the British racing season.

"Everything is competition in the Derby, but I think he has a good fighting chance," said 35-year-old Paddy Prendergast in a telephone interview from his home in Curragh, Ireland.

Dramatic upsets in Derby trials and an unexpected scratch have boosted chances that the stretch-driving son of Court Harwell may be the first Canadian-owned winner of the race, first run in 1780.

The Irish-bred chestnut, purchased for $12,450 as a yearling by publisher Max Bell of Calgary, jumped to fourth choice among bettors less than a week before the 1½-mile classic for three-year-olds.

MAIN ENTRY

Prendergast focussed racing eyes on Meadow Court when he announced last week that the colt would be his stable's main Derby entry. His said Hardicanute, winter favorite for the event, had not responded to enough treatment and was being scratched.

Throwing full support behind the Bell entry, Prendergast the trainer engaged 30 - year - old jockey Lester Piggott, 1964 British champion, to ride Meadow Court. Piggott has won the Derby three times since 1954.

In the same race, fans switched in a mutter-mob as two Derby favorites — Look Sharp and Silly Season—finished well back in the field.

The combination of Piggott in the saddle and the colt's showing in the Dante Stakes sent the odds tumbling to 14 to 1 from 25 to 1.

ODDS MAY DROP

Bookmakers predicted further falls before race day when Bell's racing manager Frank O'Farrel disclosed at a Derby luncheon that Meadow Court had turned in a "sizzling," full-scale gallop workout over 1½ miles in Ireland, handily beating Dilettante, now a three-year-old and third in last year's Derby.

British racing correspondents were calling the French - owned favorite, Sea Bird, in one of the early leads at 4 to 4. But at least two have given Meadow Court more than a passing glance.

Writing in The Observer, Richard Baerlein said that with Piggott riding, Meadow Court could easily become third favorite behind Sea Bird and the American-owned Nikata, rated at about 9 to 1.

And Clive Graham noted in the Daily Express that most bettors are placing money on the Bell entry "with the certainty that he will be Lester Piggott's partner in a fourth Derby-winning effort."

Berlin Wall Opened Again

BERLIN (AP) — The East German Communists opened the Berlin Wall for the 6-7 second time this year to allow West Berliners to visit relatives in the other half of the divided city.

The Communists have issued passes to 5,000 West Berliners for the two-week period. The occasion is the annual Whitsun holiday June 6-7.

About 1,000 persons had crossed over to Essel Berlin shortly after the two hours after the wall was opened.

Each West Berliner with close relatives in East Berlin is limited to one visit. A visit is valid from 7 a.m. until midnight.

The visiting period is the last of four agreed on last fall by the West Berlin and East German governments.

Golf Association Sets Up New Committee

MONCTON (CP)—The Royal Canadian Golf Association plans to set up a greens study committee and will act on a recommendation by the New Brunswick - Prince Edward Island Golf Association for establishment of a set eligibility date for junior golfers.

This was announced Monday by association president Bruce Forbes of Brantford who is on a tour of provincial golf associations in the Atlantic provinces.

Appointment of a greens study committee will enable the RCGA to send a man to provincial clubs to assist them in their problems, Forbes said.

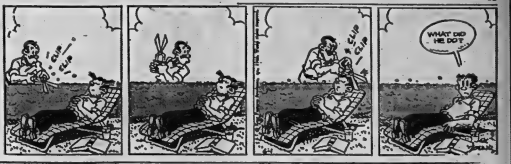
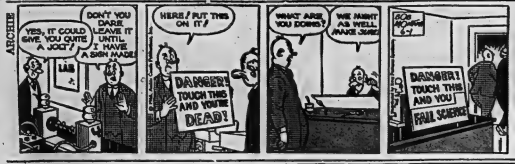
THANK YOU . . .
FOR PAYING YOUR CARRIER PROMPTLY



Collections by your Ontario Intelligencer carrier are timed to provide you convenient service and best meet his school and study schedules. He may begin collections Thursday and complete his collections on Friday, so that he can pay for his papers on Saturday morning.



Your thoughtfulness in paying him the first time he calls to collect will encourage him in giving you prompt service. It will save him extra work for which he would receive no additional profit.

It will give him more time for school and other activities . . .

Astrological

By SYDNEY OMARR

For June 2

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Best: to consolidate resources, conserve strength. Don't go too far afield. What you need comes to you . . . If you are available. But have plans organized and know the answers!

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Good lunar aspect accents journeys of the mind. Your ideas begin to click. By setting up a solid base, you can build. Superior is impressed. Fine day for enhancing ambitions.

Gemini (May 21 to June 20): Money question needs to be settled. Vacation travel plans in spotlight. Express yourself in understanding manner. Pull out of emotional rut. Have ideas ready!

Cancer (June 21 to July 22): Cycle continues high. Extremely good for gaining prestige. Look your best! Member of opposite sex may express affection. Be gracious . . . and use judgment.

Leo (July 23 to Aug. 22): Emphasis on self-analysis. Find the reasons for recent actions. Probe deep. Be perceptive. Use best efforts. Obtain needed privacy, get proper rest. Big things ahead.

Virto (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22): Don't press. Instead, relax . . . be natural. Friends prove helpful. But you must provide your own incentive. Challenge and responsibility mingle. You make headway now.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Cycle is completed. New phase begins: roll bows out. Don't hang on to dead past. Welcome new persons, situations. But stress greater leadership. Walk straight ahead with firm step.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Many offer opinions. But in the end your own decision prevails. Plan accordingly. Travel could be involved. Have confidence . . . and faith. Goal is in sight!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Don't give up! What you require is "coming your way." Key is patience . . . ability to produce. Money will be available if your plan is right. Use initiative.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): Deal with public indicated. Offer alternative methods. Key is versatility. Stress partnership activities, but best to postpone legal decisions. All facts may not yet be revealed.

Stittgen Jewelry Finds Ready Market In Vancouver Area

By DENNIS ORCHARD

VANCOUVER (CP)—Half a dozen years ago Karl Stittgen's creations had little market on the west coast at any price.

He believes it's one measure of a cultural revolution in Vancouver that his jewelry now is much in demand.

As for price, you pay for his ideas. And his ideas are expensive.

"Twenty dollars and up," he says. "Up anywhere.

"I have quite a few stock items over $200 but most of them run between $100 and $250."

Karl's pieces have a compelling texture and bold structure —rings woven around the flowing shape of baroque pearls, brooches in abstract configurations of gold.

Above his workbench he has written:

"The call of the unborn shapes

"Leads us to the forms we seek."

He says: "As long as I make abstract pieces it's very hard to say where the ideas come from. By the time a shape comes to mind you've forgotten what you started from. . . .

PROSPERITY IMPROVED

"Most of my ideas lately come from plant forms. I've done a series of pieces lately I call 'lichen' and they have sold well. I like moss. And I love seaweed. I also made a whole series on seaweed."

For all custom designs, whether it's a gold ring or a $1,000 necklace, Karl wants to talk it over with the client and make a sketch or two. For this purpose he shows up at one of his two downtown shops four hours a week. The rest of the time he can ignore merchandising, draw inspiration around his West Vancouver home, sleep in and work late.

The hours haven't always been so good It took almost a decade for his craftsmanship to click after he emigrated from Ludwighaven, Germany, 13 years ago.

He met and married Hamburg-born Gabriele Pontopidan and she now oversees his two shops.

Karl believes something happened to the west coast about five years ago. A city in which you could hardly find a piece of abstract art went through an awakening. Art galleries flourished and a potter or sculptor could come here and earn a living.

For most of his custom jewelry Karl uses a "lost-wax process" in which he can model the item to hair's-breadth precision in wax, using dentist's tools. Through a series of steps he reproduces the model in exact detail in gold or silver.

Karl has recently been turning down business rather than compromise on the design he envisages for a customer.

"When I make a piece of jewelry I please myself first, the customer second."

For Kalahari Bushmen

Life Is Primitive -- But Still Content

BUSHMEN LIVE IN STONE AGE — The wild bushmen of the Kalahari desert live much the same as they did 15,000 yeas ago. The natives of the vast game-filled desert that includes most of Bechuanaland and part of south Africa are untouched by civilization. (CP Photo frim British Information Services)

By BRIAN BARROW

CAPE TOWN (CP)—With every emergent African nation making a desperate bid to catch up with life in the 20th century, there remains one group of people quite content to go on living as it did 15,000 years ago.

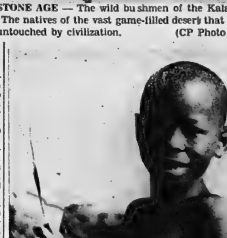
The wild bushmen of Kalahari Desert, a vast game-filled stretch of country that includes most of Bechuanaland and part of South Africa, are untouched by civilization.

Some fascinating facts about these little people have come to light in a report released by the Bechuanaland government. It was written by George Silberbauer after he had spent six years with the wild Gwi bushmen in the central Kalahari.

The Gwi bushmen are the real-world closest link with the stone age and Silberbauer found they are determined to go on living as they have always done.

A nomadic people, they have the most remarkable talents, including an uncanny sense of direction. If one were blindfolded and transported hundreds of miles from his home across the harsh Kalahari he would, on being released, make his way unerringly back to his tribe without any aids over the featureless desert.

SHARP EYESIGHT



Silberbauer found they have incredible eyesight. They can distinguish the four major moons of Jupiter with the naked eye and can spot an aircraft 15 miles away.

Coupled with this is an acute sense of hearing. On one occasion two bushmen were able to hear a twin-engined Cessna aircraft when it was 70 miles away.

They are still the world's greatest trackers and hunters, dependent for food on what they can shoot with bow and poisoned arrow and on a variety of plant life.

The poison they use for their arrows is taken from the larvae of a beetle. Arrow heads are made of antelope horn. The poison is highly toxic and can fell the largest and strongest of the African antelopes, the eland kudu and gemsbok. The hunters are remarkably accurate up to 30 yards.

The bushmen's diet would shock most civilized people. They like rodents, lizards, tortoises, birds and, of course, buck. Snake, incidentally, has a delicate taste of roast chicken. They also eat a wide variety of herbs and succulent plants.

NOMADIC LIFE — A bushman boy by the Thamalakane River in Bechuanaland. The aborigins bushmen of the Kalahari desert lead a primitive nomadic existence, living on wild roots and fruits and game which they shoot with poisoned arrows. (CP Photo from British Information Services)

In their world, man and beast are closely related and even share a certain sympathy and understanding. When the animals are weak and in poor condition, the bushmen are also listless and unable to take advantage of the animals' weakness.

RUB STICKS

Bushmen are never wasteful in their hunting and kill only as much as they need. However, when hungry after travelling far in search of food, they will sit down to enormous sheals of cooked meat, some adults consuming as much as 40 pounds at a single sitting.

Their economy is stable and static. They do not take away from their assets, nor do they add to them. Their existence is entirely nomadic and, in the continuing search for food and water, they seldom stay in one place more than a few days.

The bushmen still make fire by rubbing two sticks together, producing a flame in 45 seconds.

Life expectancy of the average male is 45 and anyone of this age is regarded as quite old. Girls marry between the ages of seven and nine but intercourse between marriage partners doesn't take place until after the puberty ceremony for the women.

The bushmen have a high moral code and their social habits are commendable. Theft and dishonesty of any kind are unknown. Life is precious and violence, except for the occasional wife-beating, is too dreadful to contemplate. Murder is unknown.

Bad manners, persistent laziness and bursts of temper are also taboo. The offender is not actually expelled from the tribe but is made to feel that he is not decent enough to associate with.

The need for companionship is so strong in the consciences of the Kalahari that sending someone to Coventry is the worst punishment. The offender soon feels his loneliness and, after making a public apology, is forgiven.

Divorce is almost unknown. The main cause is incompatibility of temperament. Adultery is regarded as a private matter between the parties involved and usually ends up with some amicable agreement or a sound wife - beating. Husband - beatings also occur.

The religious concepts of the bushmen are confined to two beings — N'Odima and G'Awama. N'Odima lives in the sky, has human shape and is invulnerable and invisible. He was the creator of the world and now takes little part in its activities. G'Awama is the evil spirit.

Many bushmen have never seen a white man and were terrified of Silberbauer when they first saw him.

The bushmen, having chosen their aminute - to - minute existence, would virtually fade away if their lives were disturbed in any way, he says. As a result he has recommended to the Bechuanaland government that they be allowed to continue their stone age lives, with assistance but not interference.

Ottawa Expected To Unveil New Short-Term Program To Stockpile Uranium

OTTAWA (CP)—The government is expected shortly to unveil a new program for stockpiling uranium oxide, sources said. An announcement by Trade Minister Sharp, may come by the end of the week.

Informants indicated the program, like a previous one, will be a short-term measure designed to keep existing mines in operation until the forecast resurgence in world demand.

The stockpiling program comes in the midst of touch-and-go negotiations for a major uranium sale to France. This deal, apparently locked in a dispute over use and inspection of the uranium, is said to involve 100,000,000 pounds of uranium oxide for more than $700,000,000 over 25 years.

Sources said the government decision to introduce a new stockpiling program, while tied indirectly to the French sale, does not mean the Paris deal has fallen through.

It is understood the new stockpiling program will follow along the general lines of the previous one-year plan which ended July 1, 1964.

Under it the government, through the Crown-owned Eldorado Mining and Refining Ltd., purchased uranium oxide from three Ontario mines—two at Elliot Lake and one at Bancroft—as a stopgap measure to allow for employment adjustments brought on by dwindling demand.

The program cost the government about $25,000,000 for which it is believed to have received and stockpiled more than 7,000,000 pounds of oxide. The purchase price was never disclosed but it has been said to be between $3 and $3.50, just enough to cover operating costs.

Sources said the new stockpiling program will be designed more to maintain existing mines than to aid them in a gradual cutback. It is based on the government hope that world demand will recover to the boom levels of 10 and 15 years ago by the late 1970s or early 1970s.

Eldorado President W. M. Gilchrist said in his 1964 report that renewed world demand is "on our doorstep" with the size and urgency of delivery of expected contracts "much greater than had been contemplated."

The new stockpiling program, sources said, is tailored to carry existing mines over the interim period until these new commercial vistas open up, while, at the same time, avoiding building up large supplies that could depress the market.

U.S. Doubling Its European Atomic Arsenal

PARIS (AP)—Defence Secretary Robert McNamara says the U.S. nuclear stockpile in Europe will be twice its 1961 size by this time next year.

"We are now shipping such substantial amounts (of nuclear warheads) that within 12 months the stockpile will be 100 per cent greater than in 1961," McNamara told reporters Tuesday after the meeting of defence ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

He said in December, 1961, he told the NATO ministers there were "thousands" of nuclear warheads on European soil.

He branded as "absolutely untrue" reports that the United States is planning to withdraw its nuclear muscle from Western Europe.

"There has been a steady increase in the stockpile over the last four years," McNamara said, adding that since January the number of nuclear weapons in Europe had increased by 10 per cent.

McNamara said the stockpile buildup was a need for U.S. forces and those intended for use by Allied forces in case of war. Any attack on the country or U.S. troops as required by U.S. law.

The NATO meeting agreed to give further study to a U.S. proposal to share some nuclear controls with other NATO members through a committee of four or five defence ministers.

FRANCE REJECTS PLAN

A committee presumably would include the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and one of the smaller NATO countries.

The proposal falls short of French President de Gaulle's demand for a U.S. - British - French directorate for NATO. But French Defence Minister Pierre Messmer said France would study the U.S. proposal attentively.

The NATO ministers again endorsed a "forward strategy" for the alliance, which means active defence at the NATO frontiers and precludes any sacrifice of soil in central Europe. The question is of great concern to the West Germans who are in the potential front line.

Defence Minister Paul Hellyer of Canada described the meeting as "very successful—more so than I had hoped for."

Medicare Program Approved

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government's controversial medical services insurance bill moved a step closer to final passage late Tuesday.

Approval in principle was sandwiched between two procedural arguments that included a challenge to a ruling by Speaker Donald Morrow. The sitting finally ended at 12:20 this morning as Premier John Robarts intervened in the argument, cooled tempers and moved adjournment until this afternoon.

Before the vote on second reading, a Liberal amendment that would have referred the bill to a standing committee to be rewritten as a universal, comprehensive medical care scheme was defeated on a roll call vote, 66-24.

The Conservative majority in the house voted against the combined forces of Liberals and New Democrats to defeat the amendment and pass the bill.

SPARKS FIGHT

Kenneth F r a d e n (NDP — Woodbine) sparked the procedural hassles when he tried to speak on the bill after the amendment was defeated.

Mr. Morrow said that this was not done since defeat of the amendment meant approval of second reading of the bill.

Then Mr. MacDonald served notice that his party will once again fight for a compulsory, comprehensive plan when the bill reaches clause - by - clause study in committee of the whole house.

Labor Minister Leslie Rowntree rose to say that Mr. MacDonald had given notice to the press gallery of this action but did not give the courtesy to inform the government.

The hassle went back and forth across the floor for about half an hour until Mr. Roberts intervened.

Last Day Before Takeoff For Gemini Spacecraft Crew

IT ISN'T ALL SERIOUS—Gemini co-pilot Edward White smiles during session at Cape Kennedy where he and command pilot James McDivitt were given thorough physical examinations in preparation for their four-day orbital mission set for tomorrow morning. White plans to leave the orbiting Gemini spacecraft early in the flight for a solo venture into space. (AP Wirephoto)

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) The man who will float alone in the heavens Thursday, and his space buddy who will pilot him there, today started their last day before takeoff with good news and great expectations.

Command Pilot James A. McDivitt said: "We've got a good spacecraft and it looks like we're going to have a good mission. We're ready."

"We" are McDivitt and fellow air force Maj. Edward H. White II—the man who will step out of the Gemini IV spacecraft and waltz in weightlessness on their second orbit of the earth.

There was the change, too, that these two American astronauts would get close enough to their booster rocket on their maneuvering early orbit to enable White to touch the booster during his weightless walk.

ISN'T RIGID

The space agency had said earlier that they might get as close as 20 feet to the booster—but Mission Director Christopher C. Kraft said "there is nothing holy about 20 feet."

If all goes well in the count down, takeoff is scheduled for 10 a.m. EDT Thursday.

Would the mission last four days as intended? Kraft said that the decision would be made sometime after the first 24 hours of flight—when the astronauts had a chance to evaluate their fuel supply for their maneuvering jets, and experts looked at the decay of the orbit.

The Titan II rocket that will propel the two new astronauts into space was tested as ready, but the spacecraft itself.

Pre - flight countdown was scheduled to start at 3 p.m. today. Propellant loading was set for 9 p.m.

Home and School, PTA Back National Plan for Medical Care

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Home and School and Parent Teacher Federation, representing 250,000 members across Canada, wants a national medical care plan.

Delegates at convention here Tuesday, delegates also reached a compromise on a controversial submission to the royal bilingualism and biculturalism commission and a proposal for a major project on integration of Indians into Canadian schools and culture.

The national health resolution was submitted by the British Columbia association, whose president, Mrs. H. L. Steeves, said it was necessary because present plans fail to cover so many people. The resolution passed.

After a second day of debate, delegates finally arrived at a compromise on the problem of presenting a brief to the royal commission. Defeated was a motion to shelve a projected national brief preamble, to which several provinces had objected because of clauses recommending French - speaking schools and a universal history course.

William Abserman, Germanborn Montreal importer who was chairman of the brief committee, said it had been virtually impossible to devise a brief which would recognize the views of Quebec and the western provinces.

His brief was finally adopted on a majority vote but with the proviso that provincers objecting to any clause in it should submit their objections to him in writing for inclusion when it is put before the commission.

The Indian project provides for the promotion of the welfare and integration of Indians, concentrating mainly on getting full citizenship rights, getting more Indian children into public school, more native Indian teachers and more Indian members in PTA.

Rule Changes Debated

By BOB MacKENZIE

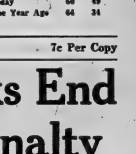
OTTAWA (CP) — Discussions on streamlining rules and procedures for the Commons returned into a debate on freedom of speech Tuesday.

The issue was asked whether experienced members really needed more time to state their cases than inexperienced backbenchers, whether a clear definition of the term "party" should be included to identify party leaders and how the right of backbenchers to speak could be guaranteed.

The problem is centred on the proposed "guillotine rule" which would enable a minister, with consent by a majority vote, to limit debate to an hour on any item of debate bogged down.

Andrew Brewin (NDP — Toronto Greenwood) last week moved an amendment to the bill which would reduce time limits on speeches to 20 minutes from 40 when the guillotine rule was invoked. Only exceptions would be for the prime minister, all party leaders and the minister whose estimates or legislation. They would be allowed 40 minutes.

WOULD SET LIMIT



Gordon Aiken (PC —Parry Sound - Muskoka) introduced a sub - amendment Tuesday that would limit the exceptions to the prime minister, Opposition leader, cabinet ministers and first Opposition speaker, restricting leaders of the minor

Temple Seeks End Of Death Penalty

OTTAWA (Special) — Robert Temple, MP Hastings South, has introduced a bill in the House of Commons that may finally resolve the controversy over capital punishment.

Mr. Temple's bill links abolition of capital punishment with amended parole procedure that would substitute mandatory life imprisonment for persons convicted of capital crimes.

ROBERT TEMPLE

The government already has announced it will allow a vote free of party lines on capital punishment — whenever the issue is brought before the House.

Mr. Temple's bill now goes in the bottom of the list of private members' bills. However, one report said the government might initiate debate on the issue by mid-month. The government could also introduce a bill of its own — or allow a special debate on Mr. Temple's measure.

EXPECTS APPROVAL

Mr. Temple is confident any vote in the House will approve abolition.

Speaking from Ottawa last night he said: "I think there will be opposition to it from all parties and here also will be people in favor of it from all parties and the final result will be a bill to be known as 'capital punishment.'"

Copies of a White Paper on capital punishment were given representatives of other parties on Monday by Mr. Favreau, Justice Minister Guy Favreau said the other parties were being given an opportunity to check out the objectivity of information in the document before it is printed and tabled in the House. This process may take up to two weeks.

Mr. Temple's bill amending the Criminal Code would abolish the death penalty for capital murder, treason and murder while committing piracy. In each case the minimum alternative sentence would be life.

"There cannot be — as there should not be in my opinion — parole for those convicted of crime of a capital nature," Mr. Temple said last night.

His bill also broadens the range of penalty for treason under some sections of the Criminal Code. Where the Code presently imposes 14 years maximum, Mr. Temple's bill would provide for life imprisonment.

Cabin Cruiser Ousting Cottage Among East Ontario Families

KINGSTON (CP)—The cabin cruiser is replacing the family cottage in eastern Ontario, James Auld, Ontario tourism and information minister, said Tuesday.

Mr. Auld told the annual meeting of the Kingston Chamber of Commerce that there now are "nearly a quarter as many cruisers as there are cottages" in eastern Ontario.

But he said there is an imbalance between the number of private boats and the public boating facilities—such as slips and docks — to accommodate them. He suggested parties particularly the Rideau Canal and the Trent Canal system as waterways where shortages exist.

But he said facilities will have to be built with boaters bearing a portion of the cost, "possibly through such means as toll charges on canals and reduced gasoline tax rebates on annual licencing fees."

He said "we may now be reaching the point where it may be necessary . . . to license all boat operators, or perhaps operators under 16 years of age, and to require boat owners to carry liability insurance on their craft.

Because of a lack of patrols boaters have found themselves unprepared on many lakes, the minister noted.

"Because of a minority of sloppy, slipshod and sometimes downright dangerous boaters, a suspicion has grown up in some circles that boaters will destroy the beauties of the waterways.

FIRST CALL with Bon-Ami

Anglican and United Churches Talking With Other Denominations About Union

TORONTO (CP) — Both the Anglican and United churches are participating in conversations with other denominations in Canada, spokesmen for both churches said Tuesday.

They commented during a press conference at which a document of basic principles of proposed union between the Anglican and United churches was made public.

Rev. Ernest E. Long, secretary of the United Church general council, said his church is talking about union only with the Canadian Conference of the Evangelical United Brethren.

Canon Ralph R. Latimer, general secretary of the Anglican general synod, said his church is engaged in conversations on matters of faith and order with the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Rev. Leland Gregory, secretary of the general assembly of the Baptist convention of Ontario and Quebec, said outside the press conference he wishes current Anglican-United Church union efforts every blessing.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The head of an Anglican committee that is considering union with the United Church of Canada said Tuesday a possible union of the Anglican and Presbyterian churches is being discussed.

Rt. Rev. Godfrey Gower, bishop of New Westminster Anglican diocese, said in an interview here there has been no commitment between the Anglican and Presbyterian churches for merger.

But "our talks have been very happy and there is hope they will open doors."

Bishop Gower said he hopes the Principles of Union will be founded in the Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox faiths with a view to ultimate union of all Christian faiths.

"We have not merely drafted a bilateral plan for consideration of the Anglican and United churches," he said. "We hope that a document contains some essential of the Christian church which will be seen and accepted by other denominations."

'Dear Hal' Letter Takes on New Political Overtones

VANCOUVER (CP) — The "Dear Hal" letter case which brought public relations man Al Williamson into court on fraud charges took on some new political overtones Tuesday.

An RCMP Crown witness told a 12-man assize court jury that Williamson admitted he had written the letter at the urging of both Einar Gunderson, advisor and associate of Premier W. A. C. Bennett, and Hal Dornan, an aide to Prime Minister Pearson.

The letter was sent in the hope of helping American millionaire Harry Stonehill obtain landed-immigrant status in Canada. Stonehill, made a fortune before being expelled from the Philippines, was subsequently denied the status and left the country. He now faces smuggling charges in the United States.

RCMP Sgt. William Halloran told the court that Williamson once examined "Gunderson in just as responsible a] I am. It was done for him. I'm in a damn mess on this thing; I want to get it over with as soon as possible. This thing is pretty broad."

Later, the witness testified, Williamson told RCMP Superintendent Joseph Atherton that Stonehill had made a $1,000 contribution to Liberal-Credit political fund which he had turned over to Gunderson.

Williamson is charged with sending Dornan a letter bearing the forged signature of Premier Bennett and with attempting to have Dornan deal with it as if it were genuine. Williamson has pleaded not guilty to both counts.

MADE STATEMENT

Sgt. Halloran said Williamson made a formal statement in the RCMP on the whole matter, outlining how he had met Stonehill, how they had talked about investing millions in B.C., including a glass factory and starting a bank.

The sergeant said Williamson had first approached him last January about the case, saying Time magazine was publishing a story about Stonehill and asking a meeting with Supt. Atherton. They met at Atherton's home.

Williamson expressed the belief the Time story would deal with the whole complex subject of Stonehill's immigration application, including the fact that Dornan had received a letter from the premier of B.C.

"The premier didn't write the letter," the sergeant quoted Williamson as saying. The public relations man had then amended this to say: "The premier wouldn't write such a letter, Williamson claimed Dornan had insisted, reminding him that in the past he had written numerous letters for the premier.

The sergeant said Supt. Atherton asked: "You are going to tell the premier though."

Williamson had said he would do this, either in person or by telephone.

But later he said although he had not seen the premier, he had spoken to Gunderson, who had known about the letter for some time.

The trial continues.

The Kiwanis Club there was joined by several members from the Belleville, Illinois, organization and there are plans for these clubs to return the visit to this city next year.

Elks Plan Bigger Than Ever Picnic

At a meeting last night of the Elks' picnic committee plans were laid for a bigger than ever parade for the public. In spite of the financial loss suffered in the last few previous years it was even felt that the picnic was a worthwhile project insofar as it supplied a day out for the kids of the district besides introducing the Elks' Lodge and its work to the public.

Many of the plans are tentative as yet but there will be hay rides, pony rides and over the years of ridges and races. There is so much other entertainment planned for the picnic picnic will be a two day affair this year covering Saturday 26th of June and Sunday the 27th.

Anyone wishing to participate in the picnic or committee work is asked to contact the picnic chairman Maurice Sine at 962-7290.

Two American Planes Lost In Viet Nam

SAIGON (AP) — Communist anti-aircraft fire shot down two U.S. Navy planes during raids on North Viet Nam today. A rescue pilot said there was no chance the five American crew members could have survived.

Two more Americans were reported killed in a Viet Cong triple ambush near Pleiku, 220 miles northeast of Saigon.

An unknown number of South Vietnamese troops were killed or missing.

The total of U.S. dead in combat in Viet Nam rose to 403.

The planes were both from the 7th Fleet carrier Midway. They were lost in an attack on a radar installation on the coast about 70 miles south of Hanoi.

It was the heaviest loss of American air crews since the raids on North Viet Nam began in February.

In the ground war, the Viet Cong inflicted heavy losses on government forces in a triple ambush after the guerrillas overran a district headquarters near Pleiku. But U.S. paratroopers in another action Tuesday night turned the tables on the Viet Cong and ambushed them, killing four.

Lesage Hands P.M. Pearson Constitutional Problem

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Premier Lesage's Liberal government at Quebec has handed a serious constitutional problem to his political and onetime cabinet colleague—Prime Minister Pearson.

It arises from the address approved by Quebec's legislative assembly Monday asking to curb the powers of the province's upper chamber, the legislative council.

The address, along with a similar request from the province's lieutenant - governor - in-council—the provincial cabinet—arrived on Ottawa's doorstep Tuesday.

The problem which faces the federal cabinet is whether to pass the addresses along to the Queen.

Mr. Lesage told the legislature they will be passed along by the federal government with favorable advice."

Mr. Pearson confirmed in the Commons Tuesday that he had advised Mr. Lesage they would receive "favorable advice" but he added the addresses—"if the addresses were received in be normal fashion."

OPINION DIVIDED

There are two schools of thought here about what those words "in the normal fashion" mean.

One is that they related to two sections of the British North America Act, the basic Canadian constitutional document.

Section 92 of the act says only the legislature of a province may amend the province's constitution, but not the powers of its governing bodies.

And section 71 of the act says that the upper house of the legislature of Quebec consists of the lieutenant-governor, the legislative council only and the legislative council.

It is the latter body which has refused to pass the bills Mr. Lesage's plans to curb its powers.

So the addresses which arrived in Ottawa Tuesday seek to alter the province's constitution by action of only two of the three bodies designated by the British North America Act as necessary to making such a change.

The argument here is that in the circumstances the federal cabinet must advise Gov.-Gen. Vanier that the requests of the Que bec legislative assembly and lieutenant-governor-council-vene the BNA Act.

SEEK ADVICE AFTER?

But there is another theory that the addresses may be sent to the Queen by the Governor-General, who will act only on the advice of the federal cabinet is obtained.

But even in those circumstances the two vital sections of the BNA Act would not be altered and, instead of Ottawa refusing to accept a constitutional amendment, it would consult because it violates the BNA Act, it would be a case of Lesage asking so after consultation.

Mr. Pearson apparently bases to the theory that his cabinet will be consulted first. He told the Commons that once Gov.-Gen. Vanier receives the address he "will then no doubt consult his federal advisers as to the advice which should be tendered by him in respect of them."

Thus he seems to be the man in the middle—either in refusing to agree to permit amendment of Quebec's constitution by two of the three bodies responsible for a like or the amendment or by agreeing to an action which could get him in constitutional hot water in Parliament.

Atty.-General Against Secrecy

WINNIPEG (CP) — Attorney-General Stewart McLean of Manitoba said Monday it would be "highly improper" to prevent newspapers from publishing names of accused persons before they are convicted.

Mr. McLean was commenting on a statement by Justice Minister Favreau in the Commons Friday that he is considering such a restriction.

"You just couldn't do it," the attorney-general said in an interview.

Blame No One For Epileptic Patient's Death

TORONTO (CP) — A coroner's jury Tuesday night attached no blame in the death of an epileptic patient 12 hours after a fall at the Ontario Hospital here Feb. 18, but called for changes in the operation of the hospital.

The man was discovered several hours later tied to an armchair. Dr. Bradley Quantz, resident intern at the hospital, said tying a patient to a chair with a sheet used as a restraint was "the accepted thing" for the epileptic patient.

The jury recommendations included: doctors be on immediate call in case of emergency; a doctors' public address system be installed; a manual of procedure indicating the chain of responsibility at the hospital, duties of all personnel, and emergency procedures be given all employees; attendants undergo compulsory tests periodically on methods related to epileptic duties.

CNR Pensioners Hold Annual Dinner in City

Over 300 people, CNR pensioners and their wives, plus a sprinkling of CPR pensioners, gathered at the Canara Club yesterday for the annual dinner of the CNR Pensioners Association, Toronto Branch.

Harry Town, president of the Toronto branch, said, "The dinner was held in Belleville because of the unique location. It is holding something like this in Toronto.

"To find facilities comparable to the Canara Club in Toronto, we would have to pay a fortune and many of our pensioners have very small incomes now and just couldn't afford it."

Everyone at the dinner was over 65, with many well up in their eighties. Pat Garvey, 85, of Campbellford was the oldest in attendance.

Joseph Hunter, president of the Belleville branch of the association, welcomed the Toronto Club to Belleville.

Guests came from such varied points as Hamilton, London, Toronto, Smiths Falls, Brockville, St. Catherines and Ottawa. One man came all the way from Kamloops, B.C. for the dinner. He had been visiting in Ottawa so he would be able to attend.

Mayor John R. Ellis and his wife attended the dinner. The mayor officially welcomed the visitors to Belleville.

The three door prizes were distributed in a novel way, in connection with CN's red, white and blue theme. There were three colored ribbons, red, white and blue, tied around chairs at random throughout the hall. The people sitting in one of these chairs won a door prize. Winner of the red prize was Miss Hannah Harrison, the white, Mrs. Sarah Morgan, and the blue, Mr. Milton Quirt.

Newt Thompson, vice-president of the Belleville Association, was Master of ceremonies for the dinner. Entertainment was provided by Mrs. Hazel Anne Reid and Alec Gordon. Mrs. Reid sang three songs, "I Could Have Danced All Night," "Climb Every Mountain," and "I Feel Pretty." Then Mr. Gordon played two tunes on the piano, "I've Been Working on the Railroad," and a waltz that he had composed himself.

The Association gives any member over the age of 80, the title of Senator. When Mr. Townes asked the Senators to rise, at least a dozen men stood up, some of whom had travelled all day to attend the dinner.

Provincial Civil Defence Parley Called

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — What ever happened to civil defence?

The public may get a chue June 17 from a one-day federal-provincial conference on the subject, the first since 1962.

However, officials said Tuesday that the agenda for the meeting has 'not yet been approved or sent to the provinces. Industry Minister Drury will act as chairman.

Explaining lack of any federal - provincial meeting in three years on emergency planning, one authority said simply: "Disaster is not saleable."

The federal defence department is expected to come in for some criticism at the meeting for its apparent switch in plans on survival operations.

Under the Conservative government, some 200 mobile columns, drawn mainly from the militia, were organized to enter nuclear - devastated centers to rescue the injured and restore order.

MILITIA REDUCED

But under the Liberal government, the militia has been reduced to 30,000 men from 47,- 000 and the annual civil defence training reduced. Moreover, most of the army's 16 target - area brigades in the major cities across Canada have been abandoned.

Civil defence expenditures have declined to about $20,000,- 000 a year from a peak of nearly 100 million in the civil year of the last major Berlin crisis.

Canada has a warning system, not yet completed: a system of regional emergency headquarters in six provinces; a signals system; underground and other emergency shelters built mainly by city officials to assure continuity of government; more firefighting equipment in municipalities; stockpiles of medical and other supplies, and plans for 450,000 persons trained in emergency planning.

Authorities said the next move is a country-wide survey —one has already been carried out in Alberta — after which could be used as public fallout shelters.

TO START SURVEY

This survey is expected to start this summer and may be completed until 1967. After that, appropriate buildings may be marked as shelters. Even then, after an official said - the buildings may be stocked with food and water.

Planning does earn rewards, officials said. Nearly 400 civil defence workers turned out to help when an explosion ripped apart a Ville la Salle, Que., apartment building earlier this year.

MR. ERIC DALTON

H. S. Principal Outlines School Curriculum at Ratepayers' Meet

CAMPBELLFORD — A meeting was held in the parish hall, Campbellford, on Monday evening by the Campbellford Ratepayers' Association. This is the second meeting of the organization since it was organized last November. For various reasons the association has been passing through a period of inactivity. President W. J. Smith presided.

Guest speaker of the evening was Principal Lorne Caughill of Campbellford District High School. Mr. Caughill spoke of the past, present and future status of the local high school. In defining the aim of education he stated the purpose of education is to assist every person to find a productive place in a given society. This involves personal satisfactions, national policies, philosophic ideas and political beliefs.

SOURCE OF LEADERSHIP

The class room is a reflection of society and also a source of leadership in society. Education is costly in Ontario, in fact important it is superseded only by health. It requires a lot of time, teachers with vision and imagination, who should be given a free hand to teach without interference from wrongly motivated people.

High school education for many years remained static and unprogressive, a one purpose academic course with few options resulting in many drop-outs. There was not enough emphasis on individual difference in ability, the program was not flexible from grade to grade or school to school, and no levels between grade 13 and university.

The new program has two definite courses, a five-year and a four-year which subdivide into what really constitutes six courses, with greater flexibility for individual differences and creates numerous options.

SIMILAR COURSES

The five-year and four-year courses are similar to a point, each having an arts and science course, a business and commerce course and a science, technology and trades course.

The five-year course includes grade 13 and gives entrance to university, the four-year course ends at Grade 12 and gives entrance to a Community College.

Principal Caughill stated it was possible a Community College would in the not too distant future be established within 30 miles of Campbellford.

In C.D.H.S. the four-year course science, technology and trades can be taught only until the end of Grade 10 because of lack of space and facilities, with the result pupils who wish to complete Grades 11, and 12 in this must be transported to Brighton High School by special bus.

SCHOOL INCREASE

While area populations in some cases remain almost static, school population increases approximately one class a year. This is due in part to the greater number of options offered, giving greater choice of training, pupils stay in school longer, also business and industry demand higher educational standard in employees, and school amalgamation. Small high schools will no longer be given government grants thus forcing amalgamation.

The future needs of C.D.H.S. as outlined by Principal Caughill are more class rooms, more vocational training space, better library and more library space need for a seminar study room in connection with the library, improvement made to the playing field, more availability for training in practical subjects for the ten per cent slow learners.

CLOSER SUPERVISION

Principal Caughill closed his address by stating a gradual but strong emphasis was placed on the upgrading of C.D.H.S., by closer supervision of teaching methods, pupil progress, more options and additional requirements in building space and teaching facilities.

Appreciation was expressed to Principal Caughill by the president W. J. Smith.

There was no announcement of any future meetings of the Ratepayers Association.

PROPOSE NEW PROVINCE

OTTAWA (CP) — The maple leaf on Canada's new flag has 11 points so why shouldn't the national capital area become Canada's 11th province. That was part of the case put forward Tuesday by property owners in the federally-administered green belt that encloses Ottawa. They told the Jones commission, reviewing local government, the new province should include all 1,800 square miles of the national capital area.

Brick Layers, Stone Masons In Demand

TRENTON — J. K. White, manager at the Trenton unemployment office said on Tuesday that as of May 31, there were 319 unplaced male applicants for employment and 341 females. This compares with 325 unplaced males and 204 females at the end of May 1964.

Mr. White said the increase in unplaced females was due to layoffs in industry. At the end of April this year there were 340 unplaced males and 350 females.

The shortage of machine shop operators continues, said Mr. White and there is also a shortage of brick layers and stone masons.

There is a good demand for agricultural workers, domestics, construction workers and during May there was a call for young male factory production workers.

To Honor Pauline Jewett

TRENTON — On Saturday, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., area Liberals will meet in the Glenburnie Restaurant, west of Trenton, at a reception for Dr. Pauline Jewett, Liberal MP for Northumberland.

Expected to attend are Andrew Thompson, Liberal leader for Ontario; Robert Temple, MP for Hastings South; Ben Benson, Minister of Revenue, Kingston and Russell Honey, federal MP for Durham County.

A panel discussion will explore the Canada Pension Plan and water pollution.

RAISE $4,400

The Salvation Army Red Shield drive reports total collections to date at $4,400. The objective was $5,000 and the Trenton area chairman, E. M. Parker Jr., said Tuesday several of the outlying areas had yet to report.

Tony Daicar, Batawa, Named New President

TRENTON — At the annual meeting of the Canadian Czechoslovak Association in Toronto this week, Anthony Daicar was named national president. Mr. Daicar is one of the founders of the community of Batawa.

The Canadian Czechoslovak Association is dedicated to the preservation of the freedom and democracy. At this week's 17th annual meeting, Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson was represented by the Hon. J. Haidas, parliamentary secretary; the Ontario government by Allan Grossman, Minister of Reform and the city of Toronto by Controller Dominic Liberati. Leader for Ontario, Andrew Thompson also attended.

Guest speaker at the meeting was Dr. F. Swarzenberg, a distinguished diplomat of the former democratic Czech government, under the leadership of Thomas Masaryk, and now a professor of political economy at the University of Chicago.

SURE OF OBJECTIVE

James Campbell, area chairman for the 1965 Canadian Cancer Society campaign, said yesterday the drive had reached $5,300 on its way to the $6,000 objective. With the industries of Trenton yet to be canvassed, Mr. Campbell said he felt sure the objective would be reached.

LBJ Looks To OAS for Solution

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson says the aim of U.S. policy in the Dominican Republic is the establishment of a broadly based government —one that represents the people and does not include extremists.

To accomplish this end, the president told a press conference Tuesday, the United States is looking to the Organization of American States while keeping in touch with Dominican leaders.

"We have no desire to insist on our particular brand of military solution or political solution," Johnson said. "We think it is an inter-American matter and we want to co-operate fully with them (the OAS)."

Again and again, the reporters returned Johnson to the Dominican problem. One revealed that he had said earlier this month that Communists were seizing control of the revolution and asked if that was "the Communist threat in the Dominican Republic is now over."

REDS JOINED

Said Johnson: "No, no . . . the Communists did not force our judgment originate this revolution, but they joined in it and they participated in it. They were active in it, and in a good many places they were in charge of it.

"We think that following the action that this nation took . . . more moderate forces took leadership. The Communist elements have not been so active, although their presence is still noted hour by hour. . . ."

875 Service Personnel Have to Retire

OTTAWA (CP)—A total of 875 military personnel—311 officers and 564 men—are being compulsorily retired because of integration of the armed forces' command structure.

The defence department said today this represents less than nine per cent of the total planned reduction of some 10,- 000 personnel. The remainder of the reduction is being achieved through normal retirements.

The department said that in the last week 11 officers and 554 men have been notified individually of their compulsory retirement this year. Two hundred officers and 110 men were notified earlier.

There will be no further compulsory retirements among officers of army captain or equivalent rank or below, or among men. A few officers in the rank of major or equivalent, and above, may still be retired compulsorily.

Officers and men forced to leave the services before normal retirement age are granted special cash benefits up to a maximum of 10 months' pay for 15½ or more years service.

Soviet Views on Crime

This is a permissive age—or so we are informed by the pundits of social behavior. And this is often cited as a factor in delinquency in the young. Other scapegoats for the cult of "way-out" activity in our midst are lack of exercise and recreation; or conversely, overwork, either at school or university.

At least one policeman thinks too many excuses are made for criminal and delinquent elements in society. He is Lt.-Col. Vladimir Chvanov of the police department in Moscow. The colonel has strong criticism for those who tend to soften the criminal's personal guilt by emphasizing extenuating circumstances.

In an interview published in the newspaper Literaturnaya Gazette, he said: "Lately, you read in the newspapers that a 19-year-old blockhead has committed a murder. Who is guilty? The director of the community centre because he does not organize interesting evenings for the youth?

"Some juveniles savagely outraged a girl and the brunt of the journalist's anger is hurled at the head of the director of the neighborhood athletic organization because he did not equip a playground and the poor boys had no place to work off their excess of youthful energy . . ."

Colonel Chvanov's arguments are interesting not only for their western-style orthodoxy but for the fact they differ widely from the old Marxist explanation that crime in a socialist society is a survival of capitalism.

He rejects the idea that the primary blame for the criminal's behavior has to do with the imperfections of environment and society. And he goes on to use a term seldom heard today. A man, he said, should "cultivate himself."

A cultivated man is an educated person—often self-educated in the face of many of the kind of difficulties Chvanov mentions, environmental and otherwise, and as often as not because of them.

The Soviet police chief's views are valid in our own society. Men and women in our society do not necessarily have to turn to crime just because of this or that supposed cause.

A Heavy Loss

The unexpected death of Hon. George Nowlan on Monday will cause widespread regret in political circles throughout Canada.

When even the most outspoken partizan dies, his foes in the House and on the hustings bury the hatchet and pay him tribute.

In Mr. Nowlan's case, there was no necessity for hatchet burying. He was generally liked and admired, not only by his fellow Progressive Conservatives but also by members of other parties which sat in the Opposition when he so ably filled the positions of revenue minister and finance minister in the Diefenbaker Government.

Amiability in a politician sometimes goes with lack of drive and a tendency to be mealy-mouthed. Not so with Mr. Nowlan. He surprised many by the firm and energetic way in which he handled the finance minister's portfolio when Hon. Donald Fleming vacated the position of finance minister. Mr. Nowlan always spoke what was in his mind and always had a fortright opinion on any controversial issue. But he managed to denude his remarks of any touch of personal malice so that he was at once and the same time a party stalwart to the Progressive Conservatives and a reasonable man, (although, of course, a mistaken one), to those of other parties.

Men like Mr. Nowlan are the real workhorses of the Commons. They get things done. Canada can ill spare them, no matter what party they support. His death, at 66, is premature, but then, as far as his usefulness to the nation is concerned, it would have been premature at any time in the future.

A revolution, or anything that interrupts social order, may afford opportunities for the individual display of eminent virtues; but its effects are pernicious to general morality.—Nathaniel Hawthorne.

A democracy which despises the gifted as eggheads is a democracy which has abdicated to dictatorship.—Britain's Quintin Hogg.

Annual Bout of Headaches Trouble Young Man of 29

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: For the last 10 years, I have had a severe headache every year, starting in December and lasting until around April. It occurs almost every morning during this period.

I have had many examinations, including those by a neurologist. All proved negative. One doctor suggested histamine headache, so I received the full treatment of injections. However the headache returned.

Later I found I had an ulcer forming in the duodenum and was told by specialists that the ulcer were both products of nervous tension. The ulcer has been cured but I still have my headache — severe pain over one eye, with tearing and a running nose. — F. M. L.

I have an idea in your case. Two ideas, in fact. But I want to get one or two thoughts across before I give them to you.

First of all, headache isn't a disease. It is a symptom. There are ten lesion headaches, toxic headaches, migraines, histamine headaches, hangovers and a lot of other varieties, and it isn't always easy to pin down the cause in some severe cases.

Yet it is surprising to know how many of the severe, recurring headaches can be prevented or eased if we made less frequent by taking the time and trouble to study them until the type becomes recognizable.

To you, Mr. M.L., I will not suggest getting my booklet on "How to Tame Headache." You've evidently been through the mill, and have learned about the many types and the ways different kinds must be treated to get effective results. (Others tortured by repeated blinding headaches should read the booklet). Send 30 cents in coin and a self-addressed, unstamped envelope to me in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., for a copy, and it will tell you how to go about relieving such severe pain.)

Now back to your case, Mr. M. L. First, the tearing, the pain near one eye, and so on, strongly suggests a histamine headache. So does the occurrence in the morning. But there is a significant sentence in your letter. You say you had "the full treatment of injections" but that the headache returned.

There isn't any fixed "full treatment" that I know of. (It is a desensitization process). The treatment depends on how much is necessary for a given patient. Like desensitization for hay fever, some people need more than others; some need treatment repeated at intervals.

Your comment, "However, the headache returned," indicates that it stopped for a time. But if it stopped, the logical course would be to repeat the desensitization process, perhaps several times.

My second, and considerably different thought: The calendar may be significant. You get this headache in a certain season of the year: From winter through spring.

If, as seems likely, this is a histamine headache, what touches it off? What allergy? My first suspicion is a trace of carbon monoxide, from a flaw in the furnace or flue. Too much carbon monoxide is poison for anybody; however, a trace of it may bother some people but not others. Have you lived in the same place for as long as this headache has been afflicting you? If so, heed the clue.

Dear Doctor: I had an operation on my knee for osteochondritis dissecans of the medial condyle, and two pieces of loose bodies were removed. Will you explain the cause. — R.

It is a disorder involving the ends of bones and cartilage. A disturbance of circulation causes the area to disintegrate. A locked or "trick" knee results. (Or other joints, such as hip or ankle can be involved instead.) The condition is fairly common in younger people, and often is related to some injury to the joint.

The "loose bodies" that were removed were fragments of bone.

Not All Beavers Eager

National Geographic News Bulletin

Beavers don't live up to their public image. Some are clumsy tree-cutters and careless dam-builders. Worst of all, a few are not eager.

A beaver's sharp incisors and strong jaws enable it to gnaw through a six-inch birch tree in just 10 minutes. Making good use of the tree is another question. A mammalogist estimated that a beaver cannot use one out of every five trees it cuts.

Hard-working Canadian beavers felled a cottonwood 37 inches in diameter and 110 feet high. The rodents bit off more than they could move, however, and failed to budge their massive prize. Falling trees often become lodged against those still standing, but the animals are not intelligent enough to cut down the support, too.

Contrary to popular belief, beavers cannot control the direction of trees they are cutting. Most severed trees plunk conveniently into the water because they were growing toward the stream. Occasionally, a beaver is pinned beneath a falling tree.

Beavers often start building their dams and colonies at random to look for the best location. They may block a wide stretch of stream, even though it narrows nearby.

Inexperienced beavers frequently build dams that quickly wash away. A few old beavers without mates and no family to provide a habitat for a family seem to make only half-hearted attempts at dam-building. Leonard Lee Rue, a long-time student of beaver behavior, has seen dams where "the entire mass of material looked as though it had drifted there."

The best beaver dams, however are sturdily constructed of tree trunks, branches, twigs, stones, and mud. The engineering is sound: the dam are broad at the bottom, narrow at the top, and often bowed upstream to withstand the force of current.

A 200-foot dam is a routine project. One on the Jefferson River in Montana reached 2,140 feet. The longest on record, one in Wyoming, was more than what is now Berlin, New Hampshire, stretched 4,000 feet and created a lake that held 40 beaver lodges.

Besides providing a safe home for beavers, their ponds may have side effects beneficial to man. Writing in the National Geographic Society's book, "Wild Animals of North America," Willis Peterson told of the changes beavers created in a rugged Arizona region:

"Where aspa trickled in springtime, beaver dams now store water. Where topsoil washed away, lush meadows now grow. Where grass previously withered in midsummer heat, the water table has risen and keeps the soil wet. Where wildlife and livestock once watered at stagnant pools, they now drink from fresh streams."

On the other hand, beaver-damming of culverts beneath railroads and highways is a nuisance. Workmen have laboriously breached such dams, only to have the persistent beavers repair the breach the same night, incorporating into the structure tools left behind.

Childless

St. Thomas Times-Journal

Scientists say the average person spends a third of his life sleeping. They must be referring to childless couples.

Once Bright, Now Trite

By Walter Monfried in the Milwaukee Journal

"Sir Thomas More is a man of angel's wit and singular learning . . . A man of marvelous mirth and pastimes and sometimes of as sad a gravity: A man for all seasons."

Thus did schoolmaster Robert Whittington write, as an exercise for translation into Latin. Four centuries later it would be the English dramatist was studying all the old writings about Sir Thomas in preparation for a play on the martyred chancellor of King Henry VIII. He found his title in Whittington: "A Man for All Seasons."

In the few years since the play has come out, the phrase has become commonplace. John Connell, biographer of Gen. Wavell, now calls his hero "a man for all seasons."

When young Ernest Hemingway was lazing through the "Oxford Book of English Prose" he was struck by these lines from the "Devotions" of John Donne, 17th century poet, cleric, divine: "No man is an island, entire of itself . . . Any man's death diminishes me, because I am involved in mankind; and therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee."

There was the title for his novel of the Spanish civil war, "For Whom the Bell Tolls." Actually the anthologist, Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch, had discovered it but Hemingway made it known to the world.

It is unfortunate that the finest of phrases lose their lustre through overuse. Perhaps is no more vivid line in all drama than King Richard II's "A horse! A horse, my kingdom for a horse!" Alas, it is now a laugh.

Lord John Russell, a prominent 19th century English politician, in a London campaign speech referred to somebody as "conspicuous by his absence." When he was congratulated on such an apt phrase he modestly disclaimed originality: "It is taken from one of the greatest historian of antiquity." He referred to Tacitus, historian of ancient Rome, who described a state funeral thus:

"The images of 20 of the more illustrious families were carried before the bier, and Brutus and Cassius were not displayed; but for that very reason they shone with the greater lustre."

Russell, when he paraphrased the Roman so cleverly, could not realize that eventually "conspicuous by his absence" would be consigned to the limbo of expressions which writers should avoid.

Deems Taylor, the veteran American composer and commentator, used to give the intermission talks of the New York philharmonic broadcasts. He once played for his radio audience not to groan when an ultra familiar work was programed. Words of introduction to Schubert 'Unfinished' (or the Beethoven fifth, or whatever) hundreds of times, he explained, "but remember, it was written to be heard a first time."

And so it is with our classic phrases in words. Each one was uttered for a first time by its master. It is to our fault that his expression is so good that it has become a cliche.

One can't write but death and taxes" we owe that to good old Ben Franklin.

"One swallow does not make a summer" —Aristotle discovered that 2,200 years ago.

The name of Achilles (sic) Syrus, a Syrian and former slave who lived in Rome 2,000 years ago is not well known, but see what he coined: "A rolling stone gathers no moss" and "strike while the iron is hot," "better late than never," "similarity breeds contempt," "never look a gift horse, etc.," "you don't know what you can do till you try" and many more.

The Bible and Shakespeare, of course, have contributed hundreds and hundreds of familiar sayings. But Cervantes, the "Don Quixote" author, who was Shakespeare's contemporary, was no mean phrase maker either. To wit:

"The sky's the limit," "a peck of troubles," "the proof of the pudding is in the eating," "more than enough is too much," "paid in his own coin," "a finger in every pie," "wild goose chase," "every dog has his day," "it will all come out in the wash," "raise a hue and cry," "plain as the nose on his face," "smell a rat," "ready cash," "make self a laughing stock," "turn over a new leaf," "on second thought," "honesty's the best policy," among many others.

Thomas Heywood, who was 67 when Shakespeare was born, circulated hundreds of what are now chestnuts:

"Look before you leap," "can't eat your cake and have it," "haste makes waste," "make hay while the sun shine," "better late than never," "better wouldn't melt in his mouth," "by hook or crook," "new brooms sweep clean," "the more the merrier," "soon to the purpose," "out of the frying pan," "soon is made of green cheese," "fit the nail on the head," "a pig in a poke," "tall tales out of school," "ill wind blows no good," "a cat can look at a king," etc., etc.

Nearly 90 years ago Chaucer, with all his bad spelling, came up with "in one ear and out the other," "a nine day wonder," "as good as new," "as virtue of necessity" and others. And many centuries before that the Athenian dramatist, Euripides, advised us to "leave no stone unturned."

As Deems Taylor would remind us: Remember, it was uttered to be heard a first time.

The discussion was quite lengthy and some aldermen alleged that a filibuster was being staged to keep from having the motion put. Forestry Club Visits Trenton Paper Mill

The members saw the pulp wood being put onto the conveyer by a crane and then carried into the mill to be processed into paper. Any wood over 19 inches was split into quarters before being put through the chipper. The chips went into a cooker and were there for a short period. A vacuum pump took some of the water off before the pulp was put onto rollers to be dried. The paper was rolled and cut to any required length.

Northern Electric Gets Half-million CBC Job

MONTREAL — A contract valued at some $500,000 has been awarded to Northern Electric Company by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation for the design, manufacture and installation of radio and television studio equipment for its broadcasting centre at Expo '67. Most of this equipment will be made in Belleville.

The centre, to comprise the most modern broadcasting facilities available, will be used by the radio and television networks of the nations taking part in the Universal Exhibition of 1967 as well as for special programs to be produced by CBC in connection with Expo 67. The latest techniques are being used in the design of the electronic equipment to be used in the centre.

Northern Electric will supply and install the complete master control equipment for the centre. This consists for the most part of switching apparatus to handle video, audio and control pulses. All video and pulse circuits will be handled by coaxial cable, also to be manufactured by the company, of the same type as the one used in the new CBS Broadcast Centre in New York. Northern Electric has supplied all the video switching equipment for the CBS Centre.

Committee Recommends 5 School Areas in County

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward Public School Coordinative Committee has recommended the establishment of five school areas. Only that for Sophiasburg would remain as an area defined by present township boundary lines. The others call for parts of townships to be added to others. Athol is an exception. Athol would have no school in its township, part of the area being included in Hallowell and part in South Marysburgh.

The Athol ratepayers vigorously object to losing the township school identity and to abandoning its plan to erect a new seven-room school to serve the township. County Council meets again June 14 and at that time will vote on by-laws which would set up the proposed areas. There will be separate by-laws for each area, and any, or all may be rejected or passed at that time.

The move heads off Athol's plans for their new seven-room school which has already been approved by the Ontario Department of Education, which at the same time, requests Athol to give consideration to the Committee's recommendations for a larger area.

The Athol delegation argued vigorously against the Committee's suggestion at the meeting and felt that they were being discriminated against as a result of having representation on the Committee. Concluding on behalf of the committee, Mr. J. Mason, who acted in the absence of committee committee chairman, Arthur Moore, said that the one purpose in the committee's mind was and is: "what is best for the child." He said, "we feel these changes would give Prince Edward the finest school system in Ontario with each unit large enough to offer all facilities and consolidated areas for minimum of transportation problems." He thought it would be a workable plan for the next 20 years. He said that the committee is unanimous in recommending the plan and H. L. Knight, public school inspector for this area is also in accord.

Warden Basil Ney Hepburn stated that the consultative committee was appointed by County Council and the council is in the habit of appointing anyone but reliable men to serve on such a body. He also assured the Athol delegation that no hasty decisions would be made.

New Library Proposed As Project

PICTON (Staff) — At a meeting in Bloomfield to discuss a centennial project for Bloomfield and Hallowell, the feeling of the majority of those present was that a new library be built, to include a small park. This would be located on the property opposite Henry Leavens' home.

It was felt that the mill pond park project might come about if a conservation club is established.

As for the use of the Quaker burying ground, it was stated this could not be used as a picnic area but that the stones could be used to form a memorial wall. Approximately $11,000 in Government and municipal grants is available for the project.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP) — The United States dollar in terms of Canadian funds was up 1-16 to $1.08 3-32. Pound sterling up 3-16 to $3.01 15-16.

The Rural Scene

PICTON (Staff) — On Thursday, June 10, 1965, the first general meeting of a new organization will be held under the name of the Rural Learning Association in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto. At that time a board of 15 will be chosen with eight to be elected from the general membership and seven appointed by the sponsoring bodies.

This association is the result of the merger of the Ontario Farm Radio Forum, Ontario Folk School Council and Ontario Rural Leadership Forum. The meeting on June 10 will consider and decide upon recommendations from the Provisional Board with respect to budget, program and by-laws. The Rural Learning Association objectives are to serve in the most effective way the needs of rural people in the area of adult education. The draft program suggests working in five areas as follows: 1. Through the use of Radio and TV; 2. Night classes; 3. Leadership training programs; 4. An information centre; 5. Liaison with farm organizations in Ontario and other rural adult education groups in other provinces.

FORAGE FIELD DAY

One Thursday, June 10th, for the second year in succession the Canada Department of Farm, Ottawa, will be the scene of the Eastern Ontario Soil and Improvement Association's Forage Field Day. This event is being sponsored jointly by the Canada Dept. of Agriculture and the Crop Improvement Association and will provide farmers of Eastern Ontario with an opportunity to obtain the latest information on forage crops. The day will start at 10 in the morning and will include a special program of interest to the ladies, including a visit to the newly constructed addition of the Food Section.

Last year the Prince Edward Soil and Crop Improvement Association sponsored a bus trip to this event and while no special arrangements have been made for a trip this year it is expected that a number of farmers will make their own arrangements and attend this event.

SAFETY WEEK

May 30th — June 5th. In keeping with Safety Week, Ontario Junior Farmers are promoting safe transportation and sale of "Slow Moving Vehicle" signs. These signs placed on vehicles in daylight hours are a means of preventing accidents.

Traffic studies show that two out of three highway accidents involving slow moving vehicles are rear end collisions. For this reason, when nearly all accidents involving slow moving vehicles occur, the bright fluorescent orange of the sign is the most visible color available. It gains the attention of motorists for distances exceeding one-fifth of a mile. At night the reflective red letter glows in the path of headlights.

POND PROGRAM

Water taking in excess of 10,000 gallons of water a day for certain purposes requires a permit issued by the Ontario Resources Commission.

The taking of water for ordinary domestic and farm purposes and fire fighting does not require a permit. The exempted taking may be from a well, spring, stream, dugout, pond or lake.

Water taking for other purposes, such as irrigation, commercial, industrial recreational, or any purpose, in amounts greater than 10,000 gallons of water a day (7 gpm over a 24 hour period) must be authorized by permit. Such takings may include the initial filling of on-stream reservoirs and the diversion of water from a stream to by-pass ponds, as well as the pumping of water from the reservoirs and their subsequent refilling. Included also are takings from dugout ponds where the supply is being replenished directly from ground water.

When damming or diverting water, it is essential that the flow in a stream is not shut off completely and that there is sufficient water remaining to meet the biological needs of the stream as well as to avoid serious interference with existing uses of the stream. These are the usual conditions attached to permit to dam or divert water from a stream and if these conditions can be met there should be no difficulty in obtaining the necessary permit. All correspondence regarding permits to take water should be addressed to: Director, Division of Water Resources Commission, 801 Bay St., Toronto 5, Ontario.

Lady Aberdeen Library To Be Housed at Waterloo

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) — An 1,800-book library by and about Canadian women will be housed at the University of Waterloo in Waterloo, Ont., as the centennial and now 75th anniversary project of the National Council of Women of Canada.

The decision was made Tuesday evening, third day of the five-day 72nd annual NCW convention. About 120 delegates are attending, representing 730,000 members of groups included in the council.

The collection, called the Lady Aberdeen Library, has been donated over several years by local council members and other interested people.

Miss Elizabeth Long of Winnipeg was responsible for the idea of now making such a collection and for its supervision. She reported to the convention that Waterloo has indicated an interest in taking over the collection as part of a women's library. Miss Long said such a library would be the most appropriate place for the collection.

"These books have been selected for a library on women. To be suitable books they must go to a library on women."

WILL RAISE MONEY

Delegates voted agreement and voted that councils should raise $1,000 during each of the two coming fiscal years for the care and cataloguing of the books. They voted that a committee be appointed to organize necessary financing.

Earlier, delegates heard a discussion of the problems of the provision of medical care by Dr. J. F. McCreary and Dr. D. H. Williams of the University of British Columbia.

Dr. McCreary said there may be a critical shortage of physicians for several years after government medical care plans are enacted. He suggested more medical schools, more students, more money for both and the acceptance of team medical care and team medical training all will be necessary.

Dr. Williams said it is becoming increasingly important and difficult for physicians to keep up to date in their studies.

Both men asked the help of the NCW in persuading governments and the public to do something about both problems.

Mrs. H. H. Steen of Vancouver was re-elected president of the NCW.

URGE DIVORCE CHANGE

Delegates passed a resolution that the federal government be asked to change the Divorce Jurisdiction Act so that petition for divorce may be filed in the province in which husband and wife were resident at the time of separation, rather than in the place where the husband is domiciled.

The convention tabled a resolution asking for the abolition of capital punishment, because of the number of differing opinions on the subject.

They will ask the federal government to continue its efforts toward the establishment of a United Nations peacekeeping force. They will ask also that Canada press for the appointment of a UN high commissioner for human rights.

They will ask the government to raise the age at which a minor can get a firearms permit from 14 to 16, and to require a permit applicant to pass a test proving he can handle a firearms safely.

They also seek legislation requiring registration of firms making, importing or selling drugs.

Delegates will spend most of today in small discussion groups. In the evening they will be guests of the province at a picnic dinner.

MR. AND MRS. MERVYN DARRYL PALMER

Palmer – Davidson

A lovely wedding was solemnized in Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, on Saturday May 29, when Judith Ann Davidson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Neil Davidson, Belleville was united in marriage to Mervyn Darryl Palmer of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Palmer of Vancouver, B.C. Rev. H. M. Davis, minister of the church officiated before a background of tall standards of yellow gladioli and white mums. The guest pews were designated with white satin bows accented with lily-of-the-valley. Mr. Alec Gordon played traditional wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father wore a floor-length gown of imported French peau de soie trimmed with self cord. The fitted bodice featured a portrait neckline and short bell sleeves outlined with cord. The full dome skirt with the hemline edged with matching cord fell into a sweeping Cathedral train. Her short bouffant veil of tulle illusion was caught by a coronet of matching peau de soie with bow and dotted with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of pink Sweetheart roses interspersed with white gardenias and trailing ivy.

Mrs. Ian McCrae of Montreal as matron of honor was attired in pastel yellow full length gown in shantastic fabric with a full skirt billowing out from the waist and dipping slightly at the back with matching jacket and elbow length sleeves. She carried a nosegay of white daisy mums and yellow roses. The bridesmaids, the Miss Judith Mash of Montreal, Miss Anne Greer of Truro, Nova Scotia and Miss Pamela Palmer of Vancouver were identically attired to the matron of honor but in aqua color. The attendants wore coronets of matching material with bows and each carried a crescent bouquet of white daisy mums.

Mr. William Edward as groomsman, and Mr. C. William Dibden and Mr. Gregory Welch as ushers were attired in formal wear consisting of striped trousers and dark jackets.

A reception following the ceremony was held at Sun Valley Motor Motel where the bride's table was centred with a four-tier wedding cake decorated with bells.

Tapering candles and the bridal bouquets lent colorful accent to the nuptial setting. The mother of the bride received the guests wearing a pale blue silk suit with matching overblouse, cloche style hat of varying shades of blue tulle with matching accessories and a corsage of pink carnations and Sweetheart roses. The bridegroom's mother also received wearing a beige pure silk dress with lace top and jacket, beige accessories and a corsage of buttercoloh colored mums and yellow roses. Mr. Edward Watt a classmate of the bridegroom at the Toronto University was toastmaster at the reception.

For the wedding trip to Nassau the bride wore a three-piece beige lace suit with large brown straw hat, matching handbag, beige shoes and gloves and a solitaire orchid corsage.

Previous to the marriage the bride was honored at various occasions when a crystal shower was given by Mrs. Ben Safe, a miscellaneous shower by Mrs. Wesley Monk; a kitchen shower by Mrs. Ian McCrae of Montreal. Mrs. Harold Emerson with Mrs. Robert Murphy as hostesses entertained at a tea hour and presented the bride with a gift. Mrs. Neil Davidson mother of the bride entertained at a trousseau tea just previous to the wedding with Mrs. H. Emerson and Mrs. Douglas assisting in the tea room. Mr. and Mrs. Donald Palmer entertained the bridal party at a rehearsal dinner in the Quinte Hotel.

Guests were present from Truro and Halifax, N.S., Montreal, St. Lambert, Ottawa, Kingston, Toronto, Vancouver, Victoria and London.

Mr. and Mrs. Palmer will reside at 8 Mallory Gardens, Toronto.

The Experts Say
Pioneer Techniques, Modern Foods Aid Outdoor Cooking

By JEAN SHARP
Canadian Press Women's Editor

TORONTO (CP) — Convenience foods and pioneer cooking techniques can be combined to take much of the work out of cooking outdoors on a picnic or camping trip. They also reduce the number of utensils you need to take along.

For example, you can cook a fish by simply rolling it in ordinary wet clay and baking it in hot ashes. A two-or-three-pound fish takes about an hour with this method.

Or you can split it open and place it, scales side down, on a flat rock in a bed of fire.

In either case, the clay or rock will peel off the scales and skin.

Another method is to steam it in aluminum foil.

If you want to make chowder or fish stew you can combine the fish with mashed potatoes, prepared seasonings, dried onion flakes and powdered milk.

These suggestions come from Frances MacIlquham, author of a book lavishly titled Canadian Game Cookery, to be published by McClelland and Stewart early in June.

If you choose convenience foods carefully, Mrs. MacIlquham says you can reduce carrying weight and space there often longer and brighten the menu.

"It is a fallacy that anything tastes better in the bush," she adds. "You can get awfully tired of canned beans. Instant cereals, soups, potatoes all help, and most of the preparation is left at home. If some of them don't suit your taste for bush living, they couldn't be better."

You can save fire space by using instant coffee and an Indian boiling method. "Heat stones and drop them in water in a pail. The water should boil in a few minutes. You get a little cash but it all floats to the top, and it's a good way to make coffee while you're cooking other things."

Mrs. MacIlquham says she personally favors peanut butter pails for this but any type of water-tight pail will do.

The convenience foods you use should be packaged in small quantities so that you don't have to leave a large package exposed to dampness. For instance, there is a powdered milk packaged in one-quart amounts. You can also use powdered fruit juices and dehydrated vegetables and fruits.

"Don't try to carry potatoes —they're heavy and have to be peeled. Take instant potatoes, spaghetti or rice. Include some dry cheese—probably good old Canadian cheddar—for eating and for sauces."

Since you can get water anywhere for making gravy or sauce, it's a good idea to take solid-pack canned meats and fish rather than the bulky kinds that are packed in gravy or sauce.

"Chipped beef in a glass jar is good. In a flat pack it has to be kept at a constant temperature, which is difficult."

Whole sides of bacon and rolls of salami and summer sausage will keep longer than sliced meats.

"Do try the mixes—biscuits pancakes, cookies. If you have children, these things are important. You can cook them on foil, shaping the wrap into a baking pan."

In fact, heavy-duty foil should be substituted for as much cooking equipment as possible.

"You can get elaborate cooking kits if you want to. I'd say an oven rack is a handy thing. You need one heavy kettle for an extended camping holiday, a frying pan, tin pails and long-handled spatula and ladle. "But all this has to be carried by somebody. Improvise what you can."

With a coil of wire, for example, you can construct long handles by wiring tools on a green stick.

"Always have some type of camp stove. You may hit an area where you cannot build a fire. And always check with local forestry authorities before you build any type of outdoor fire."

Wedding forms for write-ups are available at The Ontario Intelligencer and should be completed and returned BEFORE the ceremony, so a report can be published immediately after the wedding.

Canadian Flag Supported by IODE Chapters

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire is a "loyal Canadian organization which supports the Canadian flag," the national president, Mrs. D. W. McGibbon of Toronto, said Tuesday.

Mrs. McGibbon told delegates to the annual convention that last year, prior to the adoption of the maple leaf flag as Canada's national emblem, the IODE supported the Red Ensign.

"The order now supports the Canadian flag."

She said in an interview, the order will continue to use the Union Jack as its flag as a symbol of Commonwealth affiliation and "because we are a Commonwealth organization."

She added that at the cenotaph and church services Sunday both flags were displayed. Previously, at church services during annual conventions, Union Jacks were presented. This year there was no church parade of Union Jacks—the order's flag was dedicated and then displayed with the Canadian emblem.

She said that a Canadian Flag story May 31 on the use of the Union Jack gave an erroneous impression that the order still supported the Red Ensign as Canada's national flag.

"This statement, taken from the national secretary's report, applied to the stand of the order one year ago," Mrs. McGibbon said.

Wilma A. Roblin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roblin, Belleville R. Miss Roblin will teach physical education at North Park Collegiate in Brantford in September.

Rebekahs Honor Veteran Members

THOMASBURG — A number of members of Crescent Rebekah Lodge, Thomasburg, visited Quintena Lodge, Belleville, on Tuesday evening when Quintena Lodge celebrated its 82nd birthday.

Assembly president, Mrs. Pauline Taylor, Kingston, was present at the event and gave an interesting history of the order.

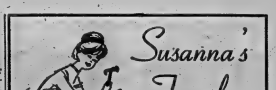
On Thursday evening, May 20, several members of Crescent Lodge attended a bazaar and coffee party sponsored by Laurel Lodge of Stirling.

The regular meeting of Crescent Lodge took place on Monday evening with a large number in attendance.

Sister Marion Morton, Noble Grand, welcomed everyone and introduced several members with the longest membership in the order. They were: Sister Irene Coulter, Sister Agnes Webb, Sister Pearl Porter, Sister Emma Kennedy, Sister Isobel Martin Sr., and Brother Harry Coulter. The Noble Grand gave an address and a corsage was presented to each of the veteran members.

All other members were introduced and their years of service in Rebekah Lodges noted. They were also presented with corsages by Sisters Lily Carleton, Isabelle Martin and Eva Farrell.

An appropriate poem was read by Sister Marion Morton.



The usual Lodge business was transacted and reports received from representatives on the Boy Scout group committee, the visiting committee, and others.

Those celebrating birthdays during the month of May were remembered and an improvisate verse was read by Sister Marion Morton.

The meeting was closed and a social evening followed.

UNCROSS YOUR WIRES

Dear Susanna: My electric blanket was a gift some time ago, and there are no instructions with it for cleaning and storing for the summer. Would you be able to supply me with this information? — D. L.

They tell me that an electric blanket must not be dry-cleaned because the fluids used during the process may injure the insulation on the heating wires.

On the washing and drying score, the local hydro offices have supplied me with explicit instructions for the washing and drying of these blankets and if you follow them carefully your blanket will be beautiful again. I'm delighted to send these to you by mail as they are quite long . . . and a wee hint in return sure wouldn't be refused! As for storage, here is what should be done:

After laundering, when the blanket is dry, brush it lengthwise with a soft brush to raise the nap. Press the binding only with a steam iron, or with a dry iron set at low.

Hold the freshly laundered electric blanket up to a strong light to make certain the wires are not clustered. If they are, do not use. Instead, send the blanket to the manufacturer for servicing.

If possible, store in its original box to avoid pressure on the folded wires. The material in these blankets is usually a blend of man-made fibres, and unlike wool, is both mothproof and resistant to felting. Moth balls, moth crystals, or any moth-proofing compounds are unnecessary, and could harm insulation on the heating wires."

Dear Susanna: A quarter or half inch elastic "garter" made to slip on snugly around the waist of a tailored blouse will keep it from pulling out of the wearer's skirt, shorts or slacks when she is engaging in activities which involve reaching, bending or stretching.—Georgina

Mother Seeks To Become U.C. Minister

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto conference of the United Church of Canada Tuesday put off until Thursday a decision on whether to permit a 35-year-old mother to become a minister.

The conference postponed action on the application of Mrs. William R. Bartram after heated debate on a recommendation of the conference's colleges and students committee that ordination be delayed two years.

The conference decided to refer the case back to the Toronto Centre Presbytery with a request for a definite recommendation.

Mrs. Bartram was eligible for ordination two years ago but withdrew when she married. She applied again this year and her application went through the Toronto central presbytery, which passed it on to the conference committee without recommendation.

The presbytery will consider the application Thursday and report to the conference.

OPPOSES MOVE

Dr. Steven J. Mather, secretary of the colleges and students committee, said the committee recommended against immediate ordination because it had doubts about whether Mrs. Bartram's home life would permit a full ministry and because it had doubts about her motives in seeking ordination.

He said the committee recommended instead that Mrs. Bartram spend two years in the lay ministry "in the hopes that the answer" to these doubts could be found.

Mrs. Bartram has a nine-month-old baby and a member of the committee said she had told them she intended to have more children "when God wills it."

The committee report said that Mrs. Bartram had also given members of both the presbytery and conference committees "the impression that her main reason for seeking ordination is not so much the glory of God as the need for self-fulfilment.

"She has already sought this in teaching and in writing without result and we cannot help wondering if the same result would accrue within the ministry and that even then she might not find the fulfilment she seeks with the result that in two years or so, she might also give up the ministry."

Church Groups

CHRIST CHURCH W. A.

Members of the Evening Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary of Christ Church gathered Monday evening for their closing meeting, a potluck supper with a wide variety of delicious foods.

The tables centred with low bowls of spring flowers, yellow and white candles in crystal holders, a large cake in the form of a calendar carried out the birthday theme.

Mrs. A. Bongard, president, extended a hearty welcome to the guests at the head table, Rev. Canon R. B. D. Wright, Mrs. Wright and Michael, Rev. A. W. Leader, Mrs. Everett Smith, Mrs. E. Hickey, Mrs. A. Hadley, Mrs. R. Hadley Mrs. H. Pitt and all the members.

Two members Miss Frances Reid and Mrs. L. Mason celebrating birthdays in May were honored and while cutting the birthday cake "Happy Birthday" was sung. Natal days of all members were remembered and appropriate verses were read for each month.

A minute's silence was observed for a departed member Mrs. H. Reid.

Mrs. G. Cherry mentioned the work and needs of the Anglican church camp Hyanto.

Discussion took place on bales to be forwarded to the Arctic and outstanding accounts to be looked after.

Following the supper a short but lively sing song was enjoyed with Mrs. L. Williams at the piano. Mrs. A. Hadley of Stirling presented most entertaining films and comment of her recent travels in Africa. Mrs. R. Sandford expressed the pleasure of the group and presented her with a token of appreciation.

Members look forward to the return to regular meetings in the autumn.

Malawi Women Have Right To Beauty Aids

BLANTYRE, Malawi (AP) — Negro women who favor short shirts, lipstick and nail polish may be frowned upon but they still are entitled to protection, says Aleke Banda, secretary - general of the ruling Malawi Congress Party.

Recently, in Zambia leader, Mrs. Margaret Mlanga, said Malawi girls were too beautiful enough with out copying Western fashions. As a result of this advice, Banda said, some people pretending to be party members had molested women so dressed in markets and torn their dresses.

Aleke said wearing artificial aids was the right of the individual "which some people intend upon but cannot prevent."

Raw, Frozen Trout Used As Appetizer

CAMBRIDGE SAY, N.W.T. (CP) — An appetizer of raw, frozen trout, followed by a main course of caribou ribs and Eskimo ice cream may not be everybody's favorite dinner menu.

But at a recent dinner sponsored by the N.W.T. Residents' Association in Cambridge Say many of the white and Eskimo diners had second and third helpings.

Purpose of the dinner was to raise money for a community hall and to introduce association members to some foods native to the area 1,000 miles northeast of Edmonton.

Residents of several northern communities helped gather food for the Arctic dinner. Hunters in Coppermine, N.W.T., several hundred miles distant, trapped the caribou. Flown late in the afternoon of the meal, two Arctic hare were shot and popped into the stewpot.

Association chairman Fred Ross almost caused several guests to lose their smiles of well-being following the feast when he disclosed that Eskimo ice cream was in reality a mixture of cooking oil, snow, sugar and berries.

Women's Activities

ST. MARK'S W.A.

BONARLAW — St. Mark's W.A. meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. Prest with an attendance of twelve, including one visitor.

Mrs. Barlow, president, opened the meeting.

After greeting the assembled members, the minutes of the last meeting were read.

The main item of the report consisted of the results of the catering of the W.A. at Monday night at the sale barns at Hoard's.

In the treasurer's report the cost of the new tables was listed. The labor was donated.

The other item of expense was the share of a life membership donated to Mrs. Godden, former dominion secretary.

Mrs. Heath in the Dorcas report, announced that the bale for the Arctic goes on June 14, and nine layettes are needed.

Mrs. Woodbeck was thanked for the gift and the making of the white altar hangings, which were ready for Easter celebrations. Mrs. Jones thanked the ladies for cards and flowers sent during her recent illness in hospital.

Mrs. Heath gave an interesting report of the Diocesan annual held in Kingston the first part of May. There was a noticeable decrease in the thankoffering, compared with last year; otherwise it was a most satisfactory annual, with progress generally evident.

NEW BUSINESS

New business concerned the need for new dishes and table linen for the Sunday School rooms. Mrs. Woodbeck was asked to get prices on dishes and Mrs. H. Jones agreed to do the same re table linen. The menus for the coming two weddings were discussed. An invitation to attend a regular meeting of the Campbellcroft U.C.W. at which they are having a special speaker was announced. A card of thanks had been received from Mrs. L. Tanner for flowers presented by the W.A. as a token of appreciation for her help at the oyster supper.

Mrs. Barlow closed the meeting.

A daintily lunch was served by the hostesses and a social half hour spent.

Ann Landers

Man With Blood Pressure Is Also Compulsive Eater

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband is 6' 3" and he says he weighs 265 pounds but I don't believe it. He refuses to get on a scale in my presence.

I had him on a special diet but gave up when I discovered the diet meal was just a snack and he was eating everything in sight when my back was turned.

The children hide their candy from him but he finds it. When I bake for my club he sneaks into the freezer and eats the desserts. I think he has high blood pressure, but he won't go to a doctor.

You told the other wife that some things are worth nagging about and a husband's health is one of them. Does this go for me, too? — OPEN FOR SUGGESTIONS.

DEAR OPEN — Yes, but change your tone and your tune. Tomorrow tell him you are making an appointment for him with a doctor. Ask which day and what time would be best.

A few days later ask him if his affairs are in order because the way he eats he's not going to be around to see his children through college.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I have a terrible problem. I'll bet you've never heard anything like this before.

When I was six years old I saw a tuba in the Labor Day parade. I said to my mother, "I want one of those when I grow up." For years I begged for a tuba and my mother said if I was still interested she would get me one for my 12th birthday.

Well, six months ago I reached my 12th birthday and my mother bought me a tuba — secondhand but very nice. Now, nobody will let me practice. Everytime I start to play my mother says she has a headache, or I will wake up my little sister. Or my Dad says he can't hear what's on TV and to play some other time.

The band leader who is also my teacher said if I don't start learning something pretty soon I will have to get out of the band. I'm ashamed to tell him my problem. What shall I do? — SAD KID.

DEAR KID — Every school has music rooms where kids can practice. Tell your teacher it is very difficult to practice at home and you'd appreciate it if he'd give you permission to use a practice room.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — We are having discussions in our Sunday religious instruction class. The subject under debate is "Should Sex Education Be Taught In Schools?"

Most of the kids I have talked to are for it. I am against it. I feel that a subject as intimate as sex should be taught at home, by parents. Do you agree? — AGAINST IT.

DEAR AGAINST IT — Sex education should be taught at home by parents. But too many parents are abysmally ignorant.

Some parents are incapable of discussing sex with their children because they are inhibited by age-old taboos instilled in them by their parents.

To those who are against sex education in schools I say this:

It is foolish and unrealistic to tell teen-agers to stop thinking about sex. They are thinking about sex and they are going to continue to think about it. What they need is correct information so they will know how to think about it. Nine out of ten teens who write to me about sex problems say they cannot communicate with their parents, which is a sad commentary, indeed.

When the information is not available at home, school is the next best place to learn.

Parents are people — they can be right and they can be wrong. To help understand their viewpoint and to promote harmony at home, write for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

THREE TASTY RHUBARB PIES

Time was when I could run out into my own garden and pull all the rhubarb I needed but the lilacs and tulips have crowded it out.

I hope many of you have your own to make these economical and luscious rhubarb pies.

NO. 1: TRADITIONAL TWO CRUST RHUBARB PIE:

Pastry: 2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour, 2/3 cup shortening, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ cup cold water.

Filling: 4 cups washed, trimmed and cut-up rhubarb, 1 to 1¼ cups sugar, 4 tablespoons flour, 1 tablespoon butter (to dot top).

To make Pastry: Cut the shortening and butter into the flour and salt until size of peas. Drizzle in water, tossing with fork until all is dampened. Press into ball. Roll out half on floured board and line 9" deep pie plate and trim edges. Roll out second half to fit top, gash at centre and have on board while you mix Filling: Stir sugar and flour into rhubarb and turn into pastry-lined pie plate. Dot with butter. Seal on top crust, crimping edges attractively. Glaze with mixture of 1 tablespoon each milk and sugar. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for about 50 minutes or until juice bubbles through gashes and rhubarb is tender.

NOTE:

You may want to reduce temperature a little during last 15 minutes.

NO. 2: OPEN OR TWO-CRUST (WITH CREAM) RHUBARB PIE:

Pastry: Same as No. 1 But if you plan to make it open, make only half the amount of pastry.

Filling: 4 cups washed, trimmed and cut-up rhubarb, 1 cup sugar, 1/3 cup flour, shake of salt, 2/3 cup 18% cream.

Mix together filling ingredients and let stand while you make pastry and line 9" deep pie plate. Turn in prepared rhubarb filling. If you are making a one-crust pie sprinkle top with 2 tablespoons granulated sugar and bake at 450 deg. Fahr. for 15 minutes, then reduce heat to 325 deg. Fahr. for 25 minutes longer or until rhubarb is tender. This open pie should be served cold to give sitting time to set. Delicious. If you are making a two-crust pie with this rhubarb - cream filling, cover with gashed top crust, seal and crimp edges. Brush top with mixture of 1 tablespoon each milk and sugar and bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for 10 minutes, then reduce heat to 350 deg. for another 30 or 35 minutes or until juice bubbles through gashes.

TRUDY

Bringing Up Baby

BIRTH COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GEORGE, MOTHER OF 8

The development of a baby's vision is a gradual thing but as all phases of physical and mental development. At birth, he can distinguish only light and dark and his eyes work independently. But along about 1 month of age eye muscles are sufficiently developed to focus both eyes at the same time. By this time, too, vision sharpens and he begins to distinguish shapes, responds happily to familiar faces and bright-coloured objects.

Eight-seeing ecology. Eye muscles need exercise to develop. You can encourage baby to exercise his eyes by providing things that will help him on his sight-seeing excursions. A gentle mobile . . . bright-coloured or glint n' glitter. A gay toy or two attached to his crib or hung out of reach to playpen bars. And, if you place the crib where he can follow your comings and goings, he'll get plenty of happy eyefuls.

Eye-opposed for a baby meal. We all know that babies react favourably to pleasing flavours but little appetites respond to pleasing colours, too. Gerber Strained Egg Yolks have the sunniest colour that ever lighted up a baby's eye. Add to this a dreamy, creamy texture and a delicious fresh-egg flavour and you've a delicacy fit for a little prince or princess. They provide a good dietary source of vitamin A, iron and protein for excellent nutritional benefits.

Juicy story with nutritional overtones. Gerber Strained Fruit Juices offer your baby sipping pleasures beyond measure with a good measure of vitamin C. Refreshing as you please for baby's "juice breaks" . . . a wonderful snack time pick-me-up for toddlers on the go. Five delectable varieties to choose from . . . all delightfully mild to please little palates. Pasteurized, of course, for your baby's protection . . . carefully strained for easy feeding. Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

Successful Living

Overwrought Plain Jane Told to Take New Look

DEAR DORIS — I don't have a boy friend. I am downright ugly. I wear glasses. I am under five feet tall, only weigh 80 pounds. I am skinny. I have teeth that protrude. I have freckles.

I am not very smart. I never got past grade ten and was 20 when I left school. I was kidded about my looks and called "Winnie the Pooh," which hurt me deeply.

I never know what to talk about with either sex. — S.O.S.

DORIS CLARE

DEAR S.O.S. — How can things possibly be that bad?

I know a tiny woman who stands four feet ten, is manager of a large office, sits on a high cushion and stands on a stool to reach her files. Is beloved by all who know her.

I know a mother of six who simply couldn't master maths at grade nine level. But when it comes to mastering child care and homemaking, she stars. Her family adores her.

I know a Sunday School teacher with a large mouth whose students think she is beautiful!

Moral: Personality and friendliness outrank looks and brain power when it comes to successful living. Even though, when your negative gifts seem limited, you get too discouraged to even try. You do have some special aptitudes, believe it or not!

Privately I am sending you ideas about mixing, putting on weight, help for protruding teeth, complexion care, grooming; in short, I am suggesting you take a new look at yourself and take action to improve the picture.

DEAR DORIS — I am greatly interested in becoming an air stewardess. My one problem is my age. I am only 18. And as I understand it, the required age is 21.

Please, if you know of any place at all that would take me, could you give me an address? — HIGH SCHOOL SENIOR.

DEAR SENIOR — The minimum reads as "over 20." Moreover, a girl 18 just isn't ready for the problems which fall in your lap with the job.

I'd suggest you occupy the next two years with work in the office of an airline or in a job where you will be meeting the public. This is the best equipment for coping with turbulence — physical and social — up above the clouds.

(Ask Doris for the information you need. If she doesn't know she'll find out from one of her consultants. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

May Raise Minimum Marriage Age

TORONTO (CP)—It may soon be unlawful for Ontario teenagers to marry at the tender age of 14.

Ontario government officials told a delegation from the Provincial Council of Women Monday that the government will consider raising the minimum marriage age to 16 for both sexes.

The legal age for marriage in Ontario is 14 with parental consent and 18 without.

The nine-member delegation led by Kay Schuler of Toronto presented a brief to 10 cabinet ministers. The brief said immaturity and lack of preparation result in frequent breakdowns among teen-agers in early years of marriage.

It asked that no person under 16 be permitted to marry for any reason.

The brief was made up of resolutions passed at meetings of the council, which is non-political and non-sectarian.

The labor department, with other departments, will study the feasibility of another request—a booklet consolidating all Ontario laws affecting women.

The brief also asked for provincial licensing of nursing homes, a government-appointed co-ordinator of affairs for old persons, and amendments to the homes for the aged act to increase the number of experts on boards of homes for the aged.

Attitude Toward Metis And Indians Criticized By Daughters of Empire

By ANNE MASON

WINNIPEG (CP)—Canadians were sharply criticized at the annual meeting of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire Tuesday for their attitudes toward Indians and Metis.

"We talk of unity yet we cut Canada into two lawyers with our deprived citizens — Indians and Metis — at the bottom level," said Mrs. H. C. Mathewson of Saskatoon.

"The IODE could take a better look at Indian education. I don't think we are aware of the conditions that exist.

Mrs. Mathewson spoke during a question period following the report of Mrs. R. Douglas Jenninrs of Toronto, IODE immigration and citizenship secretary.

Mrs. Jennings told delegates that IODE work with Indians had increased and the order was evolving a pattern of service for members.

In an interview, she added that "discrimination against Indians is a fact of Canadian life. Our complacency is both continuous and disgraceful."

ORDER IS ACTIVE

Mrs. Jennings reported that the order was active during the last year in this sphere of volunteer work.

The provincial chapter of Saskatchewan instituted a leadership training program for 13 Indian girls.

The order's work with Indians and Eskimos has expanded, she added.

Chapters in the western provinces are working closely with native friendship centres. In Ontario, chapters donated funds for craft work supplies, which resulted in a group of Indian girls opening a handicraft shop in the Toronto Native Friendship Centre.

Mrs. Jennings suggested increased educational assistance to the Indian and establishment of hostels to help Indians adjust to city life.

Mrs. Mathewson said that the IODE should press for specialized training for teachers working with Indians.

DROP-OUTS ALARMING

A former teacher, Mrs. Mathewson said educational systems are not suited to the Indian needs and drop-out rates are alarming.

In other business Tuesday, Mrs. W. T. Atkins of Toronto, national secretary of at home and abroad services, said the IODE is a major contributor to the Save the Children Fund which cares for about 83,000 children across the world.

About one-third of the order's $439,325 welfare expenditure last year went to the fund, Mrs. Atkins said.

She said there is no limit to the amount of work to be done for ill and deprived children.

The order sent overseas hundreds of nursery bags with complete nursery layettes and personal hygiene bags for children, including such items as brush and comb sets, tooth brushes and soap.

PASS RESOLUTION

Delegates passed a resolution which says "it is the policy of the IODE to assist underprivileged children in many parts of the world" and that four-fifths of overseas new and used clothing shipments should be sent for distribution by the fund.

Delegates also decided that the remainder of the clothing shipment be distributed in Britain by the Soldiers', Sailors' and Airmens' Families Association.

The remainder is spent, in Canada on such items as temporary welfare assistance, clothing and bedding, institutions such as baby clinics, seamen's and senior citizens' centres, occupational therapy centres and food and Christmas gifts for underprivileged children.

Some money also is spent on recreation, including summer camps for underprivileged children, bus tours for the handicapped and teas for veterans.

STATES AIM

Earlier the national president, Mrs. D. W. McGibbon of Toronto, said that in welfare work the IODE aims "to help others to help themselves."

Delegates decided that local chapters should continue the policy of offering assistance to local welfare authorities. They gave a mandate to the national chapter to offer money from IODE welfare funds if aid is required in emergency or disaster.

Vice-President Mrs. J. Neil Gordon of Toronto told delegates that IODE members should continue to support The Alert Service, a news service which aims to inform Canadians about communism and to combat it growth.

The convention ends today with the election of national officers.

More Women Being Named To Key Jobs in U. S. Govt.

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson has applied additional heat in his talent hunt for more women in top government jobs.

He's sent out word around the United States and through some key women to keep suggestions coming to chief talent scout John W. Macy, head of the U.S. Civil Service Commission.

And the results are showing, with the recent appointment of the United States' first Negro woman ambassador, Mrs. Patricia Roberts Harris of Washington to represent the U.S. in Luxembourg. She's the third woman Johnson has named to an ambassadorial post.

Besides that, the president took the opportunity to needle a bit when 10 men were honored in a White House rose garden ceremony as winners of government career service awards.

He said he couldn't believe "the odds are 10 to 0 in favor of men when 11 comes to making an award based on merit."

"I think sometimes we men are inclined to think that because we weigh more, are taller and our shoe size is bigger that this is also true of our intelligence and dedication," he commented.

A few months after he became president, Johnson named 10 women at one time to high posts. And he chose a dinner of the Women's National Press Club to do it.

To date, Johnson has named some 90 women to executive positions, but most of these have been appointments to commissions and advisory bodies on a per diem basis.

A number of the women were placed in jobs heretofore held exclusively by men. These include the first woman member of the Atomic Energy Commission (Mary I. Bunting, president of Radcliffe College), the first woman ever named to the Interstate Commerce Commission (Mrs. Virginia Mae Brown of Pilny, W.Va.), and the first woman to serve as assistant secretary of agriculture (Mrs. Dorothy Jacobson of Minneapolis).

He's also given high posts to Negro women. In addition to the most recent nominee, Mrs. Harris, the president picked Mrs. Frankie Freeman of St. Louis as the first woman member of the Civil Rights Commission.

And, he promoted Charlotte Moton Hubbard to the highest ranking federal agency post ever held by a Negro woman—deputy assistant secretary of state for public affairs.

The president has gained some and lost some, too. Two prominent women appointees of President Kennedy have resigned their posts.

One was the first woman White House physician, Dr. Janet Travell. She returned to private practice in Washington.

And 55-year-old career diplomat Eugenie Anderson, the only woman chief of a diplomatic mission behind the Iron Curtain, resigned last December as minister to Bulgaria. She said at the time she would continue in diplomatic service "in any position I am given." But, so far she's been given no new assignment.

Golf Said Good For Pregnancy

LONDON (AP)—Golf, a leading British physician said Tuesday, is good for pregnant women.

What's more, he added, pregnancy is good for their golf.

This advice came from John D. Flew, former dean of London University medical school and now gynaecological surgeon at University Colleges Hospital.

Writing in The Practitioner, a professional magazine, he advocated moderate exercise during pregnancy, including both golf and tennis.

"I have got in the habit of advising pregnant golfers not to take a full swing and to leave their wooden clubs at home," he added.

"Many, I find, then have a better score than ever before."

New Rules to Foster Understanding Needed Says Federal Officer

SASKATOON (CP)—A federal citizenship officer says new rules to foster understanding and friendship between French and English and a revised legal constitution are needed if Canada is to survive as a nation.

Rita Cadieux of Montreal, regional citizenship development officer of the citizenship and immigration department, spoke Monday to the national Young Women's Christian Association conference.

The Canadian dilemma arises from racial conflicts of historical origin, but too much time has been spent dwelling on these conflicts and the fears for survival as a result of them, she said.

Mrs. Cadieux told the more than 400 delegates that efforts to solve the differences between English and French Canada must involve a concerted effort by all to foster understanding and friendship rather than continued dwelling on divisions which separate.

Mrs. Cadieux said women of the Montreal area have a common desire to see a world of peace and fraternity, rather than one of strife for their children. It was interesting to note that when women visualized the future for their children, they easily reached understanding with each other.

Face - to - face experiences, where people meet and get to know each other, as individuals, should be fostered, she said. Speedier means of travel, interprovincial exchanges on both the cultural and constitutional levels, would help greatly.

Stimuli should be sought to encourage the learning of either English or French as a third language, depending on locale. The learning must come from love and a desire to communicate rather than compulsion, if it were to be effective, but this could be done.

RULES FOR CNR

MONTREAL (CP)—Mr. Justice Benjamin Robinson of Quebec Superior Court ruled Tuesday that Canadian National Transportation Limited, a CNR subsidiary, has the "corporate powers" to operate a trucking business. He ruled against three trucking companies, two trucking associations and a union which sought to have the CNT's letters patent dissolved.

Women's Institutes

CARMEL WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The May meeting of the Carmel Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Allan Gowthorpe with a good attendance. The meeting was opened by the president Mrs. J. Locan.

Delegates were chosen for the district annual at Moira. The June meeting will be in the form of visiting citizenship day and a tour of the court house on June 23rd. Mrs. Russell Rice convenor for home economics gave hints on painting. Spatters on hands can be removed with paste wax and nail polish will remove paint from metal, mirrors and other surfaces.

Mrs. Duane Martin convener for education gave a reading on changes to take place in education. Mrs. Clayton Sullivan convener for agriculture gave a reading on the Black Diamond Cheese Ltd. which is situated north of the 401 highway. It is only natural that Black Diamond Cheese Ltd. and also Ontario Cheese Producer's Marketing Board would have selected Belleville for the centre of their operations.

CHEESE FACTORY HISTORY

Canadian Cheddar Cheese is older than Confederation' itself in Canada. The first cheese factory was opened in 1864. Today one of the constituent firms of the present Black Diamond organization, the W. S. Cook and Son Ltd., started operations in Belleville in 1872. Black Diamond which today is the world's largest all Canadian - owned Cheese Company, dates its origin back to 1672, even though the present organization was not founded in its existing form until 1733.

Black Diamond was the first cheese marketed under a brand name in the world. The derivation of the Black Diamond name in itself is interesting for in the early days of cheese marketing in Canada the waxing of cheese by the country factories was virtually unknown. Consequently during the aging, the cloth covering the cheese collected mould - dark grey in color. This turned the grey mould to jet black hence giving the name "Black Diamond".

Almost all the cheese sold under Black Diamond label now is packaged in half pound, three quarter pound and one pound pieces and is distributed to the new self service super markets.

As Black Diamond was the first to name brand and package a natural cheddar cheese it has in 1961 maintained this reputation by winning the Packaging Association of Canada's national award for the best food packages in Canada. Black Diamond Ltd. new plant at Cranifton was built in 1960 and a new addition was built on in 1964. It employs 120 workers.

VARIOUS DISPLAYS

Mrs. G. Graham convener for historical research displayed a 1973 edition of the "Needlecraft" magazine and a 1926 "Ladies Home Journal" magazine.

Mrs. Carl Thompson and Mrs. Harold Pound were in charge of the program. Readings were given b. Mrs. Clayton Sullivan, Mrs. Selden Homan, and Mrs. Arthur Treverton. Mrs. Harold Pound gave a report of the annual Ontario Women's Institute officers' conference recently held at Gue'ph.

INVITES ADDED

Mrs. Allan Gowthorpe gave a reading in regards to a tea on May 31st to which the Queen has invited 9,000 women. The party will be the largest ever held in the gardens at Buckingham Palace. The guests are the Queen's fellow members of the Women's Institute, which is celebrating its golden jubilee this month.

The W. I. which originated 50 years ago in Canada is the largest woman's organization in Britain. Queen Elizabeth is a member of the local W. I. branch at Sandringham. Our invitation to the palace tea party was sent to each W. I. branch in Britain. Other members will come from the commonwealth countries. The Queen mother also will be there.

Lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants and a social period followed.

Ghanaian Studying In Canada

VANCOUVER (CP)—A young Ghanaian woman is spending a year in Canada with the object of improving the eating habits of the people of her country.

Barbara Baeta, director of food services and residences at the YWCA in Accra, came to Canada for study on a Canadian government technical aid scholarship. This scholarship provides practical training in such things as food services, institutional management and interior design.

Arriving in this country last August, Miss Baeta trained in the cafeteria of a steel company in Hamilton and studied interior decoration at a Montreal department store before coming to Vancouver.

The YWCA in Accra, with a program centred around education rather than recreation, conducts vocational training programs and recently opened a home economic school. With the field of operation enlarged, Miss Baeta felt she needed more experience. So she applied for and won the scholarship.

She said the Accra YWCA, which accommodates 45 girls, is a training ground to educate girls to run a home or manage restaurants.

Following her two-month stay here, Miss Baeta will attend the YWCA convention in Saskatoon in June and then go on to Toronto. After finishing her reports she will leave for Ghana in August.

Women Delegates Nettled By Speaker's Suggestion

TORONTO (CP)—Foster Vernon, assistant director of extension at McMaster University, Hamilton, says the family will not be able to continue in its present form if women try to gain equal educational and professional status with men.

Mr. Vernon outlined remarks he had made Friday to a closed session of the Canadian Federation of University Women. The federation was discussing the possibilities of further education for married or working women who had a university degree but wanted to do post - graduate work.

Mr. Vernon said in an interview Monday that most of the women delegates were nettled by his suggestions.

"They think they can be both full-time professionals and full-time mothers," he said.

Mr. Vernon said that women now take most of the load of caring for families. Women should be encouraged to continue their education, but he wondered whether they realized the full implications of going back to university and whether they were aware of the amount of work and application required by graduate courses.

MUST HAVE HELP

He said if women are going to leave their homes they must be prepared to have other people raise their children.

"They are not going to be able to do it within the old framework. The family as a biological unit will have to disappear first."

Mr. Vernon sounded a pessimistic note at a conference which was encouraging the prospects of increased education for women. New York authoress Eve Merriam, laymoke spoke er, said that the arc of male superiority is on the way out and that women have only their own feelings of guilt and inferiority to conquer.

Pamphlets placed in one room advised women to investigate thoroughly their capabilities and the opportunities open to them and no longer be satisfied with secondary positions.

Presents Gift In Memory of Former Pastor

STIRLING — At the regular Sunday morning service of Grace United Church, Barrie, on May 23rd, a framed painting of Salmon's Head of Christ was presented to the church by the Fairy Stone Cross Members of St. Paul's Church, Stirling and Carmel Church in memory of the late Reverend A. E. Baker, a former minister of the St. Paul's Carmel charge and of Grace United Church in Barrie.

The painting was received by Dr. Alvin Perkins, an elder of the church and dedicated by the minister, Mr. G. Arnold Creaser. The picture will hang in the minister's study. Following the prayer of dedication the congregation stood to observe a minute of silent prayer in memory of their departed pastor.

A second gift for the Barrie Church was dedicated that day and was received from Mrs. Cliff Trider, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

"another brick in the foundation of a total health care program."

Both he and Health Minister Matthew Dymond, who also spoke Tuesday night, rejected opposition party claims that the bill was not comprehensive.

Vernon Singer (L — Downsview), the preceded Mr. Roberts in the debate, said Ontario residents want a compulsory, government - run plan.

"The only way this plan will work and will work is if it's compulsory and that's the way we want it," he said.

Mr. Dymond said he was not afraid of the word compulsion. "I hate it."

Premiums for participants in the plan, said Mr. Dymond, would be $72 a year for an individual, $144 for a married couple and $180 for a family.

The bill will make health services in the province universally available but not compulsory.

Private insurance companies will be required to sell standard medical care contracts to anyone who wants to purchase medical insurance, regardless of age or state of health, and low incomes individuals and families will be subsidized by the government.

The insurance will be noncancellable by the carriers. It will provide physicians' and surgeons' benefits at home, office or hospital; maternity benefits, annual checkups and limited psychiatric care.

The government will subsidize insurance premiums for indigents and low - income groups. For instance, the complete premium will be paid for any individual or family having no taxable income.

A graded scale of subsidies will be provided for individuals with taxable income ranging up to $500 a year; couples with taxable income of $1,000, and families with taxable income of up to about $1,200.

The government has not yet indicated how much the maximum premium will be, although it is expected to be in the neighborhood of $175 to $180.

Mr. Robarts said the legislation was conceived with an eye to participation in a federal medicare scheme such as that envisioned by the Hall royal commission on health services.

A legislature committee recommended legislation giving municipalities broader powers to determine store closing hours.

The increased powers had been requested by about a dozen municipalities. Municipal Affairs Minister Wilfred Spooner told the committee Tuesday.

parties to the same 20-minute limit as other MPs.

He said the voters do not give equal status to the Opposition leader and leaders of the smaller parties and this should not be done by House rules.

Pauline Jewett (L—Northumberland) said the rights of backbenchers and any party must be respected. This could be assured by giving the new rule a trial and introducing an amendment later if it was needed.

She also proposed a definition of a party leader and suggested the Commons should decide how many persons should constitute a political party in Parliament.

She favored the system in France where six per cent of the total chamber membership is required, a system that would disqualify Social Credit and Creditistes from privileges granted to separate parties.

It was not a case of interfering with the right of persons to run for election representing smaller parties, she said. But total support by the voters should be considered when taking into account their rights as a party in the Commons.

Government House Leader McIlraith asked Mr. Brewin and Mr. Aiken to withdraw their amendments in favor of a government amendment that would require an agreement of representatives of all parties to restrict length of speeches under the guillotine rule.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) said Mr. Brewin would be willing to withdraw his amendment. He was speaking on behalf of Mr. Erwin, who was on his way to Belgrade, Yugoslavia, for a parliamentary conference.

But Mr. Aiken said outside the House he would not withdraw his sub-amendment, thus barring the way for the withdrawal of Mr. Brewin's amendment.

Future plans will include O.C.E. this summer and later, studies towards an M. A. Degree.

Majority Leaders Do Some Horse-trading on Speaker

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson and Opposition Leader Diefenbaker did some good-natured horse-trading on the Commons floor Tuesday over the question of a permanent Speaker.

Mr. Diefenbaker seemed to take a step toward agreeing to Mr. Pearson's suggestion that a former speaker, Roland Michener, now Canadian high commissioner to India, might fill the job.

At the same time, he indicated he wants the Liberals to nominate Mr. Michener in Toronto St. Paul's, a riding now held by Liberal Ian G. Wahn. Mr. Michener is a former Progressive Conservative MP for that constituency.

The whole question was left up in the air but with a prospect that Mr. Pearson may discuss it with Mr. Michener next week when the high commissioner is here with Indian Prime Minister Shastri.

Paul Martineau (PC—Portneuf - Temiscaminque) opened the subject by asking Mr. Pearson whether the prime minister had communicated with Mr. Michener on the question of Mr. Michener becoming permanent Speaker and whether Mr. Michener said he would be available.

NOTIFIES MICHENER

Mr. Pearson said he drew Mr. Michener's attention to the fact that he had been suggested in Parliament in connection with a "continuing speakership."

The Commons now elects its presiding officer, the Speaker, for the life of a Parliament, picking a new one after each election. The discussion has related to picking a man who would be unopposed by all political parties at the election and then continue to preside over Commons debates through a number of Parliaments.

Mr. Diefenbaker asked whether the government would arrange to give Mr. Michener an acclamation in Toronto St. Paul's if Mr. Pearson's suggestion of Mr. Michener as a permanent Speaker is acceptable. Mr. Pearson retorted that if a sitting Conservative MP would give up his seat for Mr. Michener the Liberals wouldn't oppose his election to the Commons.

Mr. Diefenbaker reiterated his question, adding that Mr. Michener's nomination by the Liberals must be the government's stand if Mr. Michener is to become permanent Speaker.

Mr. Pearson replied he'd be glad to accept Mr. Diefenbaker's suggestion if Mr. Diefenbaker would guarantee no Conservatives wouldn't oppose Mr. Michener's election.

"If that's a call, I say yes," retorted Mr. Diefenbaker, adding that the next move is up to Mr. Pearson.

ALL'S FAIR IN TV

LONDON (CP)—E. G. Derrington, administration chief of one of Britain's commercial television systems, spotted a stranger with a tape-recorder in the staff canteen and asked what he wanted. The visitor turned out to be a BBC-TV man making a recording of cafeteria noises. Asked why he did not record his own corporation's canteen, he explained: "We have, but it doesn't sound the

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 2, 1965

Chamber Advised to Take More Active Part in Affairs of Community

Energetic exercises in community affairs is the key to a healthy local Chamber of Commerce, Belleville businessmen were told last night.

Prescribing the keep-fit program was Dave Lucas, corporate liaison official of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and guest speaker to the local Chamber's annual spring meeting at the Shrine Club.

The keynote sentence of his special told the meeting: "Your Chamber of Commerce should be the conscience and the will of your community—the key word in any Chamber of Commerce movement is involvement."

Neither should it take too timid an attitude when the good of its community is at stake, Mr. Lucas intimated later during a question-answer period.

Queried as to how deeply a Chamber of Commerce should become involved in local municipal affairs, he replied:

"I think they have a duty to explore and be as much as possible involved in the action, the policies that a local council enacts."

He added: "I don't think that we should avoid something where we are going to hurt somebody's feelings. I think for a long time the Chamber of Commerce avoided this. I think today we should be involved. This is the responsibility of all of us to get involved. The Chamber has reason to question anything a council passes which it does not believe is for the best of the community."

SET OBJECTIVES

Asked what attitude a local Chamber should take on an issue like store hours where there were certain controversies in which the organization should become too deeply involved. However, he reminded the businessmen, they all subscribed to the premise of free enterprise.

Co-operation with other community groups also was important for a flourishing Chamber of Commerce.

"It is important to keep in mind that a Chamber is likely to succeed if it has the support of other organizations," said Mr. Lucas. "And by the same token the Chamber should lend its support to other groups if these projects are for the good of the community. And this includes city council."

The organization should exist to achieve set objectives.

"It rests with you to decide whether you will have an active Chamber of Commerce that promotes the best interests of your community — or whether you will have an inactive, uninspired Chamber that won't do the job at all."

SUPPORTER OUTSPOKEN

Mr. Lucas found at least one supporter for his views. Belleville lawyer, Donald Templeman, in thanking the speaker, agreed that Chambers should have certain projects to achieve.

"It seems to me that if the Chamber of Commerce cannot plan a reason to exist it should fold up," he said. "In Belleville, I would suggest that maybe downtown development might be very appropriate."

"Although," he added, "if the downtown keeps burning up around our ears the way it is now, perhaps the parks board should take it over."

Municipalities May Be Given Broader Powers

TORONTO (CP) — As small merchants applauded and chain stores registered complaints, a committee of the Ontario legislature Tuesday recommended legislation giving municipalities broader powers to determine store closing hours.

Municipal Affairs Minister Spooner said the increased powers had been requested by about a dozen municipalities.

The committee meeting was attended by about 60 representatives from small merchants' associations ac r o s s Ontario, who applauded speakers supporting the bill. The bill now returns to the legislature for approval.

J. Palmer Kent, a lawyer representing S. S. Kresge Co. Ltd., F. W. Woolworth Co. Ltd., Dominion Tire Co., G. Tamblyn Ltd., Simpsons-Sears Ltd., and T. Eaton Co. Ltd., described the bill as "the most serious interference with trade and commerce ever before the legislature."

SAYS PUBLIC HURT

Public convenience would be ignored by giving local councils greater power to determine closing hours and forbid operations on Sundays and holidays, Mr. Kent said.

He had been authorized by Eatons and Simpsons to request the bill be delayed for further study.

The committee members disagreed.

Municipal affairs department officials were authorized by the committee to draft changes that would make anyone wanting to operate a business despite regulations prove his business was an exception as specified by the local council.

Cecil Robinson, a Hamilton lawyer representing Steinberg's Ltd., said that the bill "changes the rules before the game is over."

The company is currently fighting store - closing regulations in Hamilton.

EXPRESSES HOPES

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said Tuesday he hopes to make a statement within the next day or two in connection with the forthcoming federal - provincial conference, postponed from May 31. No date has yet been set for the meeting, postponed after additional items were requested for the agenda without sufficient time to lay the groundwork.

COST ANNOUNCED

Cost of the proposed new Q-4 transatlantic liner — the ship designed to succeed the Queen Mary — was set at $76,200,000. The figure was given by Canard chairman Sir John Brocklebank in London Monday in his statement announcing the company's annual report. The 58,000 - ton liner is being built by John Brown Shipyard of Clydebank, Scotland. It is expected to come into service in three years.

SALES RISE

Dominion Textile Co. Ltd. had consolidated net sales for the fiscal year ended March 31 of $161,601,085, a 6.4 per-cent increase compared with the previous year's $151,585,406, says the company's annual report released in Montreal Tuesday. Consolidated net earnings were $5,810,010 or $2.25 a share against $6,369,083 or $2.43 a share, a decrease of 7.2 per cent.

PLAN MERGER

Massey - Ferguson Ltd. announced in Toronto Tuesday it plans to merge its Spanish interests with Motor Iberica S. A. of Barcelona, Spain's leading tractor and truck manufacturer. Motor Iberica would increase its capital and merge with two Spanish companies — Perkins Hispania S. A., maker of diesel engines, in which Massey has a majority interest, and Motorizacion Agricola S. A., manufacturer of agricultural equipment, in which Massey has a minority interest. The merger is subject to approval by the Spanish government.

Student Found Not Guilty Of Murder

RIMOUSKI, Que. (CP) — An all-male jury needed just 40 minutes Tuesday to find Claude Poisson not guilty of a charge of capital murder in the beating death of a religious brother at the Matane Classical College.

The 20-year-old student from a Quebec City suburb wept at the verdict, releasing him after the four-week trial which heard testimony from 50 witnesses.

Several women in the court also shed tears and the defence counsel applauded the verdict.

The company is currently fighting store - closing regulations in Hamilton.

Justices of Peace Should Not Be Connected With Police Forces Says Wishart

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Arthur Wishart of Ontario said Tuesday justices of the peace should not be connected with police forces.

Commenting on reports that several Ontario police chiefs are acting as justices of the peace, Mr. Wishart said he was not aware of this and no police had received such appointments since he became attorney - general in April, 1964.

The practice of police holding positions as JPs is legal in Ontario, and police chiefs with such powers can collect fees for issuing traffic summonses and giving their officers warrants to search and arrest if no other judicial authority is available.

The fee schedule is set out in the Criminal Code and varies, but the usual fees the police chiefs receive are from 50 cents to $1.50 for each process issued.

ROACH OBJECTS

Mr. Justice W. D. Roach, who retired Monday from the Ontario Supreme Court, said Tuesday: "If JP should be identified with the police at all . . . the two positions are just not compatible.

"Your critics say an officer might easily be incapable of impartial judgment when asked by a fellow officer whether or not a warrant to search or arrest.

But Chief Constable M. C. (Cliff) Owen Sound, appointed a JP in September, 1950, said the practice is "in the best interests of government."

"If our men need a warrant in the middle of the night and there's no other JP (in Owen Sound), they call on me."

Chief Moore, who said his earnings as a JP amount to less than $300 annually, said he hasn't tried any cases but has issued warrants when a magistrate was not available. Justices of the peace are able to hear a variety of charges under provincial and municipal statutes.

He charges a JP's fee for issuing traffic summonses but said he earns less than $200 a year as a justice of the peace.

Chief Constable Robert Carson of Galt, appointed a JP in June, 1964, said he arranges bail for prisoners — usually on Sunday mornings — and collects fees over to the municipality.

Chief Carson, who estimated there are at least six police chiefs or senior officers holding JP's commissions in Ontario, said: "I never sat on the bench; I wouldn't do that."

Clair Hayes, a former deputy chief constable in Belleville, was appointed a justice of the peace in April, 1944, a month after he left the force last month, he said he intends to continue with his limited JP practice.

"It gives me something to do now," he said.

Congo Army Rescues 13 Europeans

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)—White, mercenary-led Congolese Army troops overran the rebel town of Buta stronghold of Buta Tuesday in a drive which released 13 European captives.

The troops released five Europeans in the town itself, then fanned out in the district after reports said an additional 100 Europeans were being held in Buta.

A message received here said the rebels may have taken the captives toward Banalia, a small missionary - hospital town 130 miles southeast of Buta which is another rebel stronghold.

Earlier in the drive on the town, 10 Europeans were found dead and at least eight wounded in the initial area, about 60 miles north of Buta.

Housewife Uses Signals To Cook Eggs

KINGSTON (CP) — A Kingston housewife is using traffic signals to cook her eggs.

Mayor Robert F r a y received a letter from her this week thanking him for installation of signals at an intersection near her home.

"I find two reds and three greens are just right to cook J o h n ' s eggs," she wrote. She didn't say how John liked his eggs.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

TUESDAY, June 1, 1965

The Commons continued discussion on streamlining House rules after an air policy statement by transport minister Pickersgill.

The minister said Air Canada and Canadian Pacific Airlines have accepted certain world zones in which to operate.

An aviation consultant would study whether more domestic competition should be allowed between the carriers.

Gordon Aiken (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka) said he supports the suggestions for procedure set out down Commons debates.

Ian G. Wahn (Toronto St. Paul's) said all speakers during debates should be limited to 20 minutes.

Privy Council President McIlraith suggested there might be a time limit on speeches only if representatives from all parties agree.

William R. A. Thomas (PC—Middlesex West) said parties should be limited in the number of subjects they could raise in question period.

The Commons meets at 2:30 to continue the rules debate. The Senate meets at 3 p.m.

Unemployment Insurance Fund Solvent

OTTAWA (CP) — Exceeding brightest expectations, the unemployment insurance fund has come through the winter and spring unemployment seasons without going into the red.

Latest figures show the fund had a balance of $22,037,000 at the end of April, compared to a deficit of $25,863,000 at the same time last year.

About the most it could do this month would be to drop to about $18,000,000 before the summer payroll deductions begin swelling up reserves.

Last fall the experts predicted the fund would be in the red by the end of May. A forecast turned in to Labor Minister Mac Eachen at that time said the deficit might be as low as $1,000,000 if the economy continued to hum or as high as $25,000,000 if job conditions remained unchanged.

In 1963 and 1964 the fund dipped deeply into the red and had to be supported by federal loans until spring premiums in the summer months returned it to solvency. The red peaked at $60,000,000 the end of May, 1963, and $30,658,000 at the same point in 1964.

This year's high level of winter employment reduced the drain on the fund sharply from the experience of the last two years.

In April, for example, premiums paid by employees and employers and the federal treasury totalled $30,750,000 while benefits payments ran to $43,312,000. Thus the month's loss was $12,556,000.

FUND BANK

But in April of last year premiums totalled only $25,528,000 against benefits of $43,312,000 and the fund sank by $27,064,000.

This year's surplus situation is even more significant in view of the fact that the fund had to pay off its huge loan last summer before it could start building up a reserve against winter unemployment.

The rise is temporarily, at least—of the fund's deficit problem will remove some of the pressure on the government for an overhaul of the unemployment insurance system.

A special committee studied the sagging fund three years ago and recommended drastic changes to stem the decline. But the recommendations are considered politically unpopular particularly for a minority government. In the main, they involve bringing more workers into the coverage to boost premium collections and dropping some of the seasonal workers now included.

Collingwood Furniture Plant Burned

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. (CP)— The second major fire here in three days destroyed a $750,000 building belonging to Quinlan-Craford Manufacturing Co. Tuesday night.

The fire, believed to have started in the scrubber machine section of the furniture factory, spread rapidly through a wooden roof and was reported an hour after the fire started.

Firemen were hampered by low water pressure.

The scene of the fire is directly across a highway from the plant of Georgian Peak Ltd., which burned Saturday night. The Ontario fire marshal is in Collingwood at the time of the second blaze, investigating the Georgian China fire.

Collingwood recently started work on a $2,000,000 pumping station to improve water pressure. Work is not expected to be completed until next spring.

Will Maintain Press Freedom Says Pearson

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson stepped into a developing controversy over press freedom Tuesday by saying the government has no intention of interfering with the right to report the news.

Mr. Pearson intervened when R. G. L. Fairweather (PC—Royal), a former New Brunswick attorney - general, asked Justice Minister Favreau for assurance that judges, lawyers and persons active in the newsfield would be consulted before any restrictions are proposed on reports of court proceedings.

Mr. Fairweather referred in a statement last Friday by Mr. Favreau, who said he was considering possible restrictions on publicity given to the names of companies and persons before they are convicted.

Before Mr. Favreau could reply to Mr. Fairweather, Conservative minister said he had discussed the matter with the justice minister. Mr. Favreau had not said any action was required or that he was going to take any steps to recommend to the cabinet on the question.

WON'T INTERVENE

Then Mr. Pearson added that the government has no intention nor was there any possibility of government intervention into or interference with the right to report the news.

Mr. Fairweather reiterated his demand for assurance that before any decision is made by Mr. Favreau information will be obtained from "those knowledgeable in the field."

Mr. Pearson replied that of course, advice of "competent" persons is obtained. The government would be guided by any recommendation made by Mr. Favreau.

Paul Martineau (PC — Pontiac-Temiscamingue) asked Mr. Pearson whether Mr. Favreau had told the prime minister exactly what restrictions he had in mind.

"No," replied Mr. Pearson.

Reaction Is Generally Favorable to Proposal Of Union Between Churches

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Reaction has been generally favorable toward a proposed union of the United Church of Canada and the Anglican Church, but leaders of both denominations warned that the proposals made public Tuesday are only a beginning and careful thought must be given to further steps.

Members of some other denominations were more skeptical.

Rt. Rev. E. M. Howse of Toronto, moderator of the United Church General Council, wrote in the Canadian Churchman, national paper of the Anglican Church, that the document of basic Principles of Union should not be over-rated—nor underrated.

He described it as a "working paper" and not the definitive union of a new church. "It is a statement which the members of both churches can carefully consider as they take further steps to supplement this one. . . .

He suggested that as "witnesses to their sincerity" the two churches should accept members of the other church at the communion table during the period while negotiations are conducted.

NEEDS STUDY

Most Rev. H. H. Clark of Winnipeg, primate of the Anglican Church, also wrote that all church members must study the plan.

"This is not a complete blueprint for church unity. It is rather a clear making-out of the first steps that we may take together."

A board of caution came from G. W. Payne of Edmonton, chairman of the Board of Conference of the United Church which started Tuesday.

He made a high appeal for the Anglican Church, but I feel that action must proceed very slowly to insure that splinter groups don't break away."

A Montreal Baptist minister and a Toronto evangelical minister were both skeptical of the outcome.

Rev. E. M. Jenkins of Montreal, moderator of the Eastern Association of Baptist Churches, said he has grave doubts that many of the problems involved in the plan can be ironed out in the very near future."

CITES PREJUDICES

"The background prejudices of both churches have been accumulated over that is very difficult," he added.

Keith Ross, pastor of the People's Church of Toronto, said union will result in a church "neither Roman Catholic nor Protestant."

Spokesmen for the Roman Catholic, Lutheran and Presbyterian churches were more generalistic.

Most Rev. Sergio Pignedoli, apostolic delegate to Canada, said in Ottawa the Roman Catholic Church is happy at the news.

Rev. Karl Schweder of St. Luke's Lutheran Church in Willowdale, Ont., said he would be glad to move to strengthen and increase the unity of the churches while Rev. J. C. Cochrane, moderator of the Montreal presbytery of the Presbyterian Church, said Presbyterians will watch progress towards union with prayerful interest and concern.

HAVE PRAYED

In Calgary, Rt. Rev. G. R. Calvert, Anglican Bishop of Calgary, said Christians have been praying for such a union for years. Rev. Ernest L. Bishop, pastor of the First Baptist Church of the United Church, said he looked on prospects of union with interest and hopeful business.

Archbishop Harold Sexton of Vancouver said Anglicans can never surrender the bishop system in church leadership in talks with the United Church—"this will be the biggest hurdle to get over in any scheme of union."

However, at the Maritime conference of the United Church at Sackville, N.B., Dr. C. M. Nicholson, pastor-moderator of the United Church and principal of Pine Hill Divinity Hall in Halifax, said government by bishops is a universal form of church administration.

A survey among 25 ministers at the conference showed 21 in favor of accepting bishops in the United Church and three opposed. Those in favor added they would want a bishop to be responsible to the presbytery or some other body of the church.

Dr. George Johnson, principal of United Theological College in Montreal, said the document proposing union is a breakthrough in Canada, in North America and perhaps in the whole English - speaking world.

STARTS THINKING

Very Rev. K. B. Keefe, Anglican Dean of Huron, said the study was not perfect, but it got many Anglicans and United Church members thinking.

Rt. Rev. C. N. Lanton, Anglican Bishop of Huron:

"It's answer to prayer on the part of many of us that something definite, reasonable and appealing should come out of the long years of conversation. I'm greatly delighted with the new step that has been taken."

Rt. Rev. H. F. Appleyard of Kitchener, Anglican Bishop of Georgian Bay and Suffragan Bishop of Huron:

"I'm very delighted to see this come about. Healing, of course, it is a plan that lacks many details that must be worked out but deals with basic matters which had to be resolved first. This has been the most difficult part of it.

IT'S ENCOURAGING

Rt. Rev. W. A. Townshend, Suffragan Bishop of Huron in London:

"The report is very encouraging. It's been a long, slow haul, but I think it's been like a long way. We have certainly been working together well, I think, and each side has been very co-operative."

Rev. J. R. Hord, secretary of the United Church's board of evangelism and social service, said: "We should press right forward. The two churches are working very closely together now. Much of the work being done by many churches is on an ecumenical basis."

Mr. Hord said examples of co-operation were the efforts of the joint committee on church in industry and "the work now being done on the Hall commission report" on health services.

Marina Oswald Married for Second Time

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Marina Oswald, pretty Russian born widow of the accused assassin of President Kennedy, was married a divorced electronics worker Tuesday in the fifth north Texas farm home of a friend.

Mrs. Oswald and Kenneth Jess Porter, 27, were married by Rev. Lee Boone of Grand Prairie.

Rev. Karl Schweder of St. Luke's Lutheran Church in Willowdale, Ont., said he would be glad to move to strengthen and increase the unity of the churches while Rev. J. C. Cochrane, moderator of the Montreal presbytery of the Presbyterian Church, said Presbyterians will watch progress towards union with prayerful interest and concern.

HAVE PRAYED

In Calgary, Rt. Rev. G. R. Calvert, Anglican Bishop of Calgary, said Christians have been praying for such a union for years. Rev. Ernest L. Bishop, pastor of the First Baptist Church of the United Church, said he looked on prospects of union with interest and hopeful business.

Archbishop Harold Sexton of Vancouver said Anglicans can never surrender the bishop system in church leadership in talks with the United Church—"this will be the biggest hurdle to get over in any scheme of union."

However, at the Maritime conference of the United Church at Sackville, N.B., Dr. C. M. Nicholson, pastor-moderator of the United Church and principal of Pine Hill Divinity Hall in Halifax, said government by bishops is a universal form of church administration.

Mrs. Oswald was married to Lee Harvey Oswald, said to be the daughter-in-law's new marriage:

"I don't care what Marina does with her life. I have my children to have a decent father. Except for the children, I'm not interested in her affairs."

She said she had not seen Marina or her grandmother since shortly after Oswald was killed by Jack Ruby.

Mrs. Oswald has been living in Richardson, a suburb of Dallas, since the president's assassination in downtown Dallas Nov. 22, 1963. Once a withdrawn, silent woman, she became active socially as time blurred the impact of the assassination. She became a student at the University of Michigan for eight weeks, studying Russian and which came from dozens of letters from sympathetic Americans. She also has received offers for magazine articles and book rights to her story.

Paper, Steel Give Solid Base For Three Rivers Economy Boom

By GERARD McNEIL

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) Newsprint and history have mixed to create, as one Trifluvien describes it, "a rather stable" city at the confluence of the St. Maurice and St. Lawrence rivers.

There aren't three rivers, Trifluviens patiently explain to visitors. The city gets its name, and its lifeblood, from the St. Maurice, which threads into three branches through a series of islands where it enters the St. Lawrence.

But a third river, the Becancour, six miles east and across the St. Lawrence, figures strongly in this city's future, for on its banks will be built Sidbec, a $225,000,000 steel mill.

The steel project, and the fact that a $35,000,000 bridge is at last going up across the St. Lawrence two miles west of here, have added bustle to this newsprint centre.

An industrial park has been created near the bridge entrance and a $500,000 paper-making industry will locate there. Others, lured by the steel mill, are expected to follow.

BUILDING HALTED

A $2,000,000 department store opens this summer, and Mayor Gerard Dufresne hints that a modern new hotel may be giving the present 10 Edwardian structures competition within a few years.

Trois-Rivieres' stability has been more akin to stagnancy in recent years, despite unequalled daily production of 4,500 tons of newsprint by mills that employ 3,500 men.

"We haven't had a major new industry in more than a decade," said Mayor Dufresne, 37.

Two years ago, across from city hall, work started on 14-storey Place Royale, the tallest building in the city. It stopped abruptly eight months ago.

Authorities are vague about the reasons, but indicate the promoters stopped construction when they found they couldn't lease more than one floor.

Place Royale, which looks like the biggest piece of pop sculpture in the world, with its "schoolbotton" sign and empty floors, is just a frame now and Trifluviens refer to it as "the skeleton." But work now is resuming.

Meanwhile, the newsprint mills have been expanding.

PLAN NEW ROAD

The Trois-Rivieres waterfront, open in winter during recent years to specially - equipped ships, expects to benefit from the bridge, handling an increasing volume of south shore products.

A modern soto route is being built to connect the city with Montreal, 83 miles southwest, and the history of the city and the beauty of the St. Maurice Valley should attract tourists.

Trois-Rivieres is all history. Missionaries, including lay brother Pacifique Plante, arrived here in 1615, and fur traders fortified it against the Iroquois in 1634.

Pierre de la Verendrye, the western Pathfinder, was born here and such explorers as Radisson and Nicolet set out on the great waterways.

The first industry was related to steel. Iron ore from the St. Maurice banks was forged here in 1733. More than a century ago, Lumberjacks started carving the wealth of the forests 100 miles north and now 8,000 from Champlain County alone go up the spring drive.

They whoop it up in northerly centres like La Tuque and Grand'Mere, but Trois - Rivieres, despite its stability, isn't staid.

INTEGRATED CITY

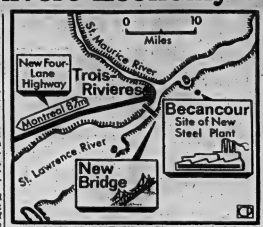
Slack's Soda Bar wryly advertises, in blue neon, "The Worst Coffee in Town" and does a booming business. A popular drink is "B and B," not "B et B," though 85 per cent of the cities' 62,000 inhabitants are of French descent.

"It's Benedictine and brandy," explained a bartender, adding that it was downed long before the biculturalism and bilingualism royal commission existed.

Nevertheless, Trois - Rivieres seems better integrated than, say, Montreal, which is split down the middle, and Quebec City.

Youngsters on rue des Forges, the main street, can be heard joking in both languages on busy Friday night, and executives such as French - born, American-raised John Wickenden are fluent in both languages.

Mr. Wickenden, a general contractor who came here about 20 years ago, is president of La Corporation du Pont de Trois-Rivieres and one of the men who fought for the bridge.



By 1967, Trois-Rivieres will have a $1,200,000 city hall and a $800,000 cultural centre.

"We've asked a group of economists to report on the effects of the bridge, the auto route and Becancour," says Mayor Dufresne, whose father and grandfather were aldermen here.

But the effects are already evident.

CONSPICUOUS SKELETON — Residents of Trois-Rivieres, Que., are calling unfinished Place Royale "the skeleton" since work on the 14-storey building stopped abruptly almost a year ago. The promoters ran into rental difficulties. It now work is resuming as Trois-Rivieres begins to feel the benefit of a new bridge spanning the St. Lawrence under construction nearby, and plans for a steel mill in the area. (CP Photo)

ECONOMIC IMPETUS — The economic future of Trois-Rivieres, Que., appears bright with construction of a new four-lane highway, steel plant and St. Lawrence bridge in the area. A $35,000,000 bridge currently under construction, is slated for completion in 1967 two miles west of the city. And a modern auto-route is being built to connect Trois-Rivieres with Montreal, 83 miles southwest. Six miles east and across the St. Lawrence a $225,000,000 steel mill will be built. (CP Newsmap)

MINTO — Sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Joe Forestell in the loss of his father and to Mr. Frank Forestell in the loss of a brother whose death took place in Belleville hospital Friday night. The funeral was held in Belleville Monday morning. Interment was in St. James' Cemetery, Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Liscom of Oshawa; Mrs. Edith Edwards and Janice of Stirling were tea hour guests of Mrs. L. Tanner and family on Sunday.

Mr. Will Wright returned home from hospital on Monday.

St. Thomas' W.A. held a dinner and quilting in the hall on Tuesday.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver

Gleaming brightly in the star-studded program of the Toronto International Track Meet at Varsity Stadium, June 16, is the long-awaited $20 duel between New Zealand's Peter Snell and Canada's Bill Crothers.

The half-mile classic should be just that. Snell is not selling Crothers short, although he yet has to meet defeat by the Canadian fleetfoot.

The starry New Zealander who holds the world's record of 1.45.1 for the 880, is recovering from a hip injury but says he will be fit and ready for the Crothers opposition.

In each of their four previous meetings, Snell has emerged the winner and this time Crothers will be out to reverse the trend. The Canadian will meet Snell on home ground for the first time.

In their last meeting at an indoor meet in Los Angeles last February, Snell passed Crothers with two laps to go, and from that point the issue was never in doubt. Crothers had only just previously recovered from an attack of the flu. In their last outdoor battle in the Tokyo Olympics in the 800 metres event, Snell came from behind during the final stages of the last lap to edge Crothers and in doing so established a new Olympics record with Crothers also bettering the old standard.

But the two pre-race favorites won't be out there all alone. Challenging them will be John Boulter of England, a sub four-minute miler who holds the British record of 3.40.4 for the 1,500 metres. He placed second in the world games in Brazil in 1963 and the same year equalled the British 880 mark of 1.47.8.

Last summer Boulter took part in the Dominion Day meet at East York and was beaten in the 880 by a step in the sizzling finish with Crothers.

Adding an American touch to the event will be two outstanding California runners, Ted Nelson and John Garrison. Nelson is the current American AAU indoor 1,000 yards champion and recently established a new American indoor 880 record in 1.47.4.

Garrison has shown great potential in the half-mile in early season meets in California and is undefeated this year.

Meet officials are trying to round out the brilliant card with Tom Farrell, world indoor record holder for the 880, but reports to date indicate that school work will prevent Farrell from competing.

As was noted, Snell holds the 880 world record with 1.45.1. . . Crothers is the Canadian open and native champion with 1.47.1. Boulter has a mark of 1.47.8, Garrison 1.49.5 and Nelson 1.48.2.

Put them all together and they spell a new world record.

Crothers is training hard with varying bits of strategy in an effort to defeat Snell for the first time. Snell knows this and is taking no chances. "I know Crothers will be tough—and I'll have to be at my best to defeat him," he is reported as saying.

Even betterment that of the athletes, is the rivalry between the coaches. The race brings together some of the greatest track and field mentors in the world.

New Zealand's famous track authority, Arthur Lydiard, will accompany his protege Peter Snell along with Bill Baillie and John Davis. The former Bert Harrison coach Mihaly Igloi, now at the U.S.A., will be guiding John Garrison. Chuck Coker will be steering Nelson, and East York's Fred Foote will plot the course for Crothers.

Another star-studded event will be the three-miles which bands together an array of glittering trackmen.

World record holder Ron Clarke (13.07.6) of Australia tops a field that includes Bob Schul, U.S.A. who thrilled $5,000 at the Olympics with his last-second victory in the 5,000 metres. . . He has a three-mile mark of 13.15.6.

Then there's Australia's Alby Thomas, 13.10.8; Bill Baillie of New Zealand, 13.18.8; Dave Ellis of Canada, 13.26.0, and countrymen Kazmier Zimmi, 13.26.2, and Doug Kyle, Vancouver, 13.31.2.

Dapper Dan Favored
Small Pack For Belmont

NEW YORK (AP) — The smallest field in 22 years appeared to prospect today for the 97th running of the $125,000-added Belmont Stakes at Aqueduct Race Track Saturday.

Tom Rolfe, Dapper Dan, Hail to All, Sclaci and La Cima shaped up as the probable starters in the 1¼-mile test, the windup of the three-day events for three-year-olds. This would be the smallest Belmont Field since Count Fleet romped by 25 lengths over two opponents in 1943.

Gotham, Prince, Meeting Place, Reverse and First Family were dropped from the probables Tuesday although there still was a possibility that First Family would be entered.

Dapper Dan, the Golden Phipps colt beaten a neck by Lucky Debonair in the Kentucky Derby and another neck by Tom Rolfe in the Preakness, loomed as the likely morning-line favorite. He worked a mile in 1:41 2-5 at Belmont Tuesday "about what I had in mind for him" trainer Bill Winfrey said.

The Trots

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Rowdier Dares, driven by Bert Madill, won the featured sixth race at Garden City Raceway Tuesday night.

For the pacer, owned by Doncaster, Ont. Johnston of Peterborough, it was the second consecutive win in three starts this season. He paid $3.30, and combined with Andy Byrd from the H. M. B. Stable of Stratford for a quinella worth $8.30.

If Bob Veale can strike out 16 batters when he's tired, how many can he strike out when he's fresh?

The Pittsburgh pitcher may get a chance to answer that question before long. The reply could be a major league strikeout record.

Veale fanned 16 Phillies Tuesday night as the Pirates defeated Philadelphia 4-0 for their 12th straight victory. Rain delayed the game twice for a total of two hours and five minutes. Asked how the rain affected him, Veale said:

"It hindered me. It made me a little tired."

He was so tired he came within two of equalling the major league record of 18 strikeouts set by Bob Feller in 1938 and tied by Sandy Koufax in 1959 and 1962.

Veale's 16 were the most in the majors this season, boosted his own team record of 15 and increased his season total to 77. WINS THREE STRAIGHT

The six-foot-six left hander, whose 230 strikeouts led the majors last season, pitched his third straight complete game, all in the Pirates' winning streak.

Veale, now 5-2, has allowed only two runs in those three victories and has slimed his earned run average from 3.76 to 2.70.

In five-hitting the Phillies, the 30 - year - old bespectacled ace twice struck out five consecutive batters, helping him nail 21 strikeouts in the final 15 outs.

He fanned power-hitters Dick Stuart and Rich Allen three times each and received a standing ovation when he struck out Tony Gonzalez in the ninth inning for his 16th strikeout.

In other NL games, Milwaukee Braves edged Houston Astros 2-1, St. Louis Cardinals nipped San Francisco Giants 2-1 and New York Mets whipped Chicago Cubs 10-5. In the only American League contest, Los Angeles Angels defeated Boston Red Sox 4-1.

The Pirates, in extending the longest winning streak in the majors this season, knocked out starter Art Mahaffey in the first inning, scoring two runs on singles by Bob Bailey and Bill Virdon, Willie Stargell's sacrifice fly and a single by Jerry Lynch. Only one Phillie reached third.

Consecutive home runs by Hank Aaron and Mack Jones of the Braves against Hal Woodeschick in the eighth inning wiped out a 1-0 lead Houston took on Walt Bond's fourth-inning homer. The rally also nullified the brilliant relief hurling of Claude Raymond of St. Jean, Que., who held the Braves to three singles in 5 1-3 innings.

The Cardinals scored the deciding run in the sixth inning on one of Phil White's three singles, a force play, an infield out and Dick Groat's single.

Jim Hickman drove in four runs with two homers, leading the Mets' 15-hit barrage. His hitting helped overcome a 3-1 lead Chicago built against Warren Spahn. The Cubs battered the 46-year-old southpaw for 10 singles in 3 2-3 innings.

Tight Pitching Battle
Lombanks Top Juniors

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Second baseman Bert Sherry's two - run single in the fifth inning was the game winning blow as Tweed Lombanks topped Belleville Ellis Juniors 4-3 in a 3 and 5 Softball League tilt at the Fairgrounds last night.

Tweed's Eldon Gray and Bobby Boyle of the Juniors bobbed up in a tight pitching battle all the way, turning in excellent clutch efforts.

Lombanks took a 1-0 lead in the first but Ellis' moved out front with both their runs in the third. It stayed 2-1 until the fifth, when Tweed plated three to get the win.

The win boosted Tweed into a tie for the loop lead, with Bloomfield, each with four victories. Bloomfield, has lost once. Tweed twice.

Gray let the Juniors down on five scattered hits for his third consecutive victory. He used an assortment of junk to strikeout an even dozen. He walked only one.

Boyle gave up eight hits in in all, three of them infield hits in the top of the ninth when he left all three stranded. He struck out eight and issued three free tickets, leaving 11 Lombanks on base.

In the Tweed fifth, Gray ignited the winning rally with a base hit. Boyle got himself in trouble by hitting the next two men on consecutive pitches, with one out. Sherry came up with his two-run single, for a 3-2 Tweed lead. Clarke added a run scored on Shire's sacrifice.

The winner's initial run came on a loadoff error by Juniors' Merav's ground out and Gray's run-scoring fly to right. Boyle picked out of jams in the third and fourth when he left five on base.

St. Denis beat out an infield hit in the third and a throwing error on John McKibbon's attempt to force second put him on third. Bob Moon's fly ball gave Belleville their 2-1 lead.

The Juniors' best chance came in the eighth when Moon and Merav opened with back-to-back infield hits with one out. Gray fanned, the next pair to preserve the lead.

Eldon Gray was his own best help at the plate with a double and two singles. Sherry had a key single and others by Terry LeSage, Don LeSage, Bill Salmond and Les Clarke completed the Tweed attack.

Stirling visits Bloomfield in tonight's lone encounter.

Torre Climbing Rapidly
Coleman, Horton Top Hitters

NEW YORK (AP) — Milwaukee's Joe Torre, the man the New York Mets offered $500,000 for early last month, has been looking like a million-dollar man at the plate recently while moving into the runner-up position in the National League batting race.

The Braves' catcher in May hit at a .382 pace and boosted his average from .228 to .346. He had 39 hits in 102 times at bat, including 10 home runs. He is also No. 2 in homers with 12, five less than San Francisco's Willie Mays.

Mays fell to third in batting last week, collecting only three hits in 23 tries. His batting mark dropped 34 points to .343.

Gordie Coleman, Cincinnati first baseman, continues to hold the lead although he lost 30 points to .375 in last week's action before he was sidelined with a pulled leg muscle. He has missed the Reds' last five games.

Donn Clendenon of Pittsburgh rushed up to tie the Mets' Ed Kranepool for fourth place. Clendenon picked up 11 points with 10 safeties in 25 tries while Kranepool lost two points with a nine-for-27 performance. Each is hitting .342. The figures include Monday's games.

Ernie Banks of Chicago Cubs drove in seven more runs to hike his batting mark 20 points to .333.

In the American League, Willie Horton of Detroit Tigers remained top batsman with a .375 mark. He gained 12 points with nine hits in 21 times at bat.

Clevelander Leon Wagner held second place despite a 10-point drop to .345. Dick McAuliffe of Detroit remained third. Others on third place, increasing his average six points to .339 with nine hits in 34 at bats. Felix Mantilla of Boston climbed nine points to .329 and remained in the No. 4 spot.

Jim Clark Banked $166,621

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The spoils of a record purse from the 49th running of the Indianapolis motor speedway's 500-mile race were divided up at the annual victory dinner Tuesday night, with winner Jim Clark of Duns, Scotland, collecting $166,621.

Clark's first-prize take, also a record, came from a total of $628,399, which included $500,000 from the speedway, $97,900 from accessory companies and $30,000 in lap prizes.

The purse was more than $100,000 above that for last year. The 1964 winner, A. J. Foyt of Houston, Tex., collected $153,650 out of $306,825, which included $397,150 from the speedway.

Actually, the first prize money goes to the owner of the winning car, Colin Chapman of London, who also receives a gratuity to the driver. This usually varies from 45 to 60 per cent. Second money went to second - place finisher Parnelli Jones, the 1963 winner, $64,621, and third best to Mario Andretti, the rookie of the year, whose take was $42,051.

Chuvalo Meets Bailey

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — Promoter Gus MacLellan announced Tuesday he has signed Dave Bailey of Philadelphia to meet Canadian heavyweight champion George Chuvalo at nearby Glace Bay Forum June 19.

Bailey signed the contract for the 10-round bout shortly after the Cassius Clay - Sonny Liston fight at Lewiston, Me. Bailey has been Clay's top sparring partner for the last two months.

MacLellan said Chuvalo is guaranteed $7,500 or 30 per cent of the gate. Bailey is guaranteed $5,000.

In Toronto, the Glace Bay bout was confirmed by Irv Ungerman, Chuvalo's manager.

Ungerman said the fight is part of the plans to keep Chuvalo ready to challenge Clay for the world heavyweight title if the Toronto fighter gets a chance.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Trainer Mort Hardy sent three homebred runners to the post at Greenwood Raceway Tuesday and two of them came home winners and the other finished third.

Hardy saddled Susan's Prince, a 30-1 hot winner of the third matched Red Purse finish third in the sixth race and then had his biggest moneyist when Mary Do Do upset highly regarded Traffic Siren in the featured seventh race.

Well Do, with Avelino Gomez in the saddle, paid $7.70, $3.10 and $2.70.

Susan's Prince, owned by A. Sorokolit of Toronto, paid the highest price of the day when he beat Sail Along in a four-horse photo-finish. In winning his first race, Susan's Prince paid $42.20, $15.90 and $9.20.

The daily double of Palm Oasis and Champagne Girl, winner of the first two races, returned $78. In the quinella, Sarstanga and No Kidding paid $34.80.

Cassius Fighter Of Month

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay's first-round knockout of Sonny Liston earned him Ring Magazine's Fighter of the Month award today.

"Innuendos regarding fixes are ridiculous, and full credit must be given Clay for his victory," said Ring editor Nat Fleischer.

Liston was dropped from the No. 1 contender's position to fourth in Ring's monthly ratings. Former champion Floyd Patterson was advanced from second to first, and Ernie Terrell, the World Boxing Association's champion, was moved up from third to second.

George Chuvalo of Toronto, the Canadian champion was boosted from fourth to third.

May Never Be Used
Now, It's Atomic Bats!

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)— The lively, or rabbit ball, might not be the only enemy of baseball pitchers.

An atomic bat might be just over the horizon.

Hillerich and Bradsby of Louisville, a major manufacturer of bats, said today it has started research on a process to bombard bats with atomic particles to make them as close to unbreakable as possible.

Before pitchers start heading for their own bomb shelter, however, a company official pointed out the atomic bat might have a few flaws. And organized baseball might frown upon use of them.

The ball could not be used if the weight is affected to any degree, explained vice president Charles E. Quick.

Morever, the cost at present is not economical.

The research combines irradiation, or treatment with atomic particles, and impregnation of wood by plastic.

Engineer Thomas Harris explained that irradiation changes the nature of the plastic, binding it tightly to the wood. The finished product has the appearance of wood, the hardness and durability of plastic.

Harris explained about half a dozen bats had been treated experimentally at Atlanta but tests would take another five or six months.

The trend in conventional wood bats is to a lighter club with thin handles so batters can swing them rapidly and aim for distance.

Owner Had Top Seat

INDIANAPOLIS (CP-AP) J. C. Agajanian, owner of Parnelli Jones's car in Monday's Memorial Day 500, was fined $50 Tuesday for sitting on top of the fuel tank in his pit during the race.

Agajanian said he was not aware of the rule. He said he couldn't see the race without sitting on top of the fuel tank.

NHL Has Heavy Agenda

Meets Next Week

By AL McNEIL

MONTREAL (CP) — League expansion, U.S. TV exposure, a reverse draft, appointment of a new referee-in-chief and new rules for awarding the Vezina Trophy will highlight a heavy agenda when the National Hockey League holds its annual meetings here next week.

NHL president Clarence Campbell outlined some of the more important items for discussion in an interview Tuesday.

The meetings Monday to Thursday, will also feature the annual league draft—with the prospect of plenty of lively trading in the offing—and the current wrangle with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Campbell said he doubts any public announcement will be made on plans for league expansion. However, he said he will "report to the owners in a confidential submission" and they will then formulate some course of action.

"It may well be that the league, under the circumstances, could jeopardize its plans by a premature announcement," Campbell said.

He said 12 applications have been received for new franchises but the new setup would "certainly not come about this year. . . ."

Of the 12 applications received, three are from Canadian cities and nine from U.S. points. Some of the aspirants are from cities already holding NHL franchises, he said.

PURSUE U.S. TV

The possibility of extending telecasts of NHL games in the U.S. is being pursued.

Campbell was in New York last week, where a demonstration was provided for more than 100 persons, including representatives of all networks plus account executives for the major advertising agencies.

"At the moment we still have one bit obstacle to overcome," Campbell said.

"Hockey is played at a prime viewing time and the networks and sponsors still must be convinced in terms of ratings."

The National League will provide a quota of 20 players which can be claimed by American and Western league clubs for one half of the normal $20,000 minor league draft price.

"In the first year there won't be as many bargains," Campbell said. "However the NHL will provide 20 new names each year as the system progresses. We'll just have to play it by ear at the start."

Campbell said the club owners will select a successor to Carl Voss, retiring referee-in-chief.

OWNERS DECIDE

Campbell said that while he is in a position to recommend a new head referee, the final decision will rest with the club owners.

This year will see a move to modify the rule governing the Vezina Trophy award, given annually "to the goaltender who has played the most games for the team with the fewest goals scored against it."

With the inception of the two-goalie system, each team will likely have more than one goalie eligible. This year's proposed change would make it compulsory for a netminder to participate in 25 or more games before becoming a candidate for the award.

No major rule changes are expected.

Campbell said the decision by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to sever its working agreement with the NHL will come up for study but "our attitude has to be not a question of who can win the argument, but that we intend to stick strictly to terms of the agreement."

Last week at its annual meeting in Victoria, the CAHA voted unanimously to terminate its working agreement with the NHL although NHL governors are expected to invoke a clause requiring two years notice if either side wishes to terminate it.

City Hotel Shades Lightfoots

Doug Hull lashed a line drive to right-centre field in the last inning to give City Hotel a 3-2 cliff-hanger win over Lightfoot Construction last night.

Hull's hit took a queer hop past an outfielder and he raced all the way around with the deciding run.

The homer stretched City Hotel's record to five wins in as many starts and handed Lightfoots their first setback in five games. The clubs were tied at the top of the Commercial Softball League standing going into the game.

Tight accolades ball by both clubs featured the first four frames, but Lightfoots went ahead 2-0 in the bottom of the fifth. City knotted it with a pair in the sixth, followed by Hull's deciding blow.

Dave Feeney spun a three-hitter over the route for the victors, striking out seven batters while walking three.

Joe Harvey was touched for seven hits in defeat, nipping three on strikes and passing the same number.

Each team committed three errors, at Zwick's Island.

Besides Hull's homer, City Hotel got a pair of singles from Moe Hawkins, doubles from Jack Martin and Bucky Ehlier and singles from Bob Brooks and Tom Coolen.

Joe Harvey had a double for Lightfoots while Doug Rose and Don Dolan contributed a single apiece.

The Firemen defeated the Lions Club 15-0.

Mulvihill pitched the first four innings and the seventh while Lupenette hurled the fifth and sixth. They struck out 17 batters in all while issuing eight free passes. Lupenette and John Nolan split catching duties.

Ron McTaggart handled the pitching for the Lions Club, defending tyke champions. He allowed six hits while whiffing 11 and walking ten. Don McTaggart was his receiver.

Terry Ray sparked the winners' attack with a triple and single while John Mulvihill had a double and single. Stu Board-man contributed a double and Danny Lupenette a single.

Always Came Back

What Happened The Yanks?

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP)—Will New York Yankees be able to come from behind and win the American League pennant again?

The Yankees haven't lost a pennant since 1959. In each of the last five years, they had to come from behind to win.

Using June 1, after a quarter of the season, as a yardstick, the Yankees were never in sole possession of first place on that date in any of those five winning years.

Of course, the Yankees, currently mired in eighth place, 9½ games off the pace, never were this far behind.

A year ago at this time, the Yankees were in fifth place, 6½ games behind Chicago. They went on to win their fifth straight flag by one game over the White Sox.

1960 WAS WORST

The Yankees' worst June 1 position in the last six years was in 1960 when they bided their time in fourth place, six games behind Baltimore Orioles. At the end, it was the Yankees by eight games over Baltimore.

While the present 9½ deficit may appear insurmountable, the fact is that the Yankees made up more than that after June 1 in three of the last five years.

Their present plight is due largely to crippling injuries to Elston Howard, Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle.

Howard is still disabled, Mantle is still hobbled by weak knees, and Wiston Ford, has become strictly a warm weather worker. Maris, back in the line-up, still favors a pulled ham string muscle.

The team as a whole is hitting .215. Pete Cleto Cimoli, Tony Kubek, Doc Edwards and Maris are hitting below .200.

The Yankees have scored three or fewer runs in 17 of their 45 games. And seven of the other nine clubs have had more home runs.

Will the Yankees come back? They've got four months to show whether they can do it again.

The Same - - For Less
Finland Looms As Tourist Rival

By ROD CURRIE

TAOPERE, Finland (CP)—As the jet airplane makes the world a smaller place, Finland could become one of Canada's chief rivals for the European tourist who hankers after the widedopen spaces.

Canadian tourist officials, through surveys have long since established that the main Canadian attractions for Europeans are not Niagara Falls or the Rocky Mountains but simply the call of the uncrowded, unspoiled countryside and beaches.

Now many Finns claim this country can provide just about anything Canada can for the traveller who wants to get back to nature, to go camping, swimming, hunting, fishing or motoring. And with 70 per cent of its 130,000 square miles covered by forests and 10 per cent by clear, azure lakes and streams, Finland does offer the huge spaciousness that is a rare commodity in Europe today.

The big selling point is that Finland is less expensive to reach for Europeans.

But the Finns, somewhat new at the game of attracting tourists, do have their problems.

DISLIKE LIQUOR LAWS

When Unto Salmi, director of tourism for Tampere, asked a group of visiting journalists recently what Finland should do to attract more visitors, they answered in a chorus: "Change the liquor laws."

Salmi, with a gesture of helplessness, indicated he could change them about as easily as he could the weather. But what he and his colleagues hope to do about the weather is change the widely held inaccurate impression that Finland's summers are cold.

One-third of the country is north of the Arctic Circle and it has picked up a pretty icy image.

But because of the warm Gulf Stream nearby, the Finnish climate averages about 11 degrees Fahrenheit warmer than other areas on the same latitude. Although the summer is comparatively short, temperatures climb to the mid-80s—with the added novelty of up to 24 hours of sunshine a day.

But for all the beauty and tranquility of its tall, straight pines, its mirror-like lakes and tumbling rivers, the sophistication of its modern, efficient cities, and the charm of a reserved people whose hospitality can nevertheless be overwhelming, Finland has one drawback that could stop a prospective visitor in his tracks.

It is expensive.

Like the other Scandinavian countries, it enjoys a high standard of living, but prices are highly popular Finnish design areas.

In a good but not luxurious Tampere restaurant—only high-quality establishments are licensed to sell liquor—a gin-and-tonic is the equivalent of $1.50 or more, a good meal with wine about $10. Finns have permits to shop at the "alkoholitikes"—liquor stores—and visitors may make purchases by showing their passports.

Also high in cost are imported articles such as cosmetics, films, tobacco, coffee, gasoline, sugar and fruit. On the other side of the coin, Finnish textiles, the famous glassware and handicrafts of the highly popular Finnish design are reasonable.

And the visitor is bound to be impressed by the efficiency and cleanliness of modern Finland. In hotels and restaurants, these qualities, set against the friendly Finn's natural flair for color and design, his absolute passion for flowers, and his good taste in preparing and serving food, bring a sense of occasion to even a simple meal.

Until he gets the bill, that is.

COMPETES TO KEEP TRIM — Tom Bedecki, 36, new assistant director of the Canadian Fitness and Amateur Sport Directorate at Ottawa, sets out to trim off a few pounds on his six-foot-two frame. He feels competition is vital for any fitness program. A native of Glace Bay, N.S., he left his job as hockey coach at Ohio State University this year to join the fitness directorate. (CP Photo)

Ottawa Rough Riders

Eighty Will Seek Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — About 80 players will be seeking jobs with Ottawa Rough Riders when the Eastern Conference club opens its training camp this month.

The club said Tuesday that head coach Frank Clair and his assistants will open the camp June 21 with 45 Canadians. Four days later the U.S. rookie crop arrives to be followed a week later by members of last year's team.

Quarterback Russ Jackson and a few other veterans are expected to begin drills earlier than their 1964 teammates. Jackson is to attend a special course at Queen's University for three weeks in July and will begin training earlier to make up for the time he'll miss.

The club announced four exhibition dates. Riders will be at home to Winnipeg Blue Bombers July 15 before travelling west to meet Edmonton Eskimos July 23 and British Columbia Lions July 26. Riders wind up the pre-season games against Montreal Alouettes at Ottawa July 30.

Wings Nip Leafs 5-4 In Eleven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The seventh-place Rochester Red Wings erupted for 19 hits Tuesday night in an International League game against the first-place Toronto Maple Leafs. They needed every one of them.

The Wings defeated the Leafs 5-4 in 11 innings despite some inept base running that choked off one rally and threatened to snuff out Rochester's chances in a wild final frame.

AT THE BELLE — Cary Grant and Leslie Caron, hide behind a fallen tree trunk in spy on a Japanese landing party inspecting the island where they are marooned. Cary is great as Spy.No. 1 Code name "Father Goose", the most sought after secret agent in the south Pacific. Universal's remarkable new movie, "Father Goose", guaranteed to make you laugh. Filmed in Technicolor, it opens Today for an extended engagement at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

Awesome Complexities Of Space Flight Viewed

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—NBC gave a briefing Tuesday night on the awesome complexities of the four-day space mission of the two Gemini IV astronauts.

We saw the capsule and the men and even a demonstration of the gleaming white space suit with its blue and white decor in which astronaut Edward H. White II will take his stroll in space.

And that golden 24-foot leash which will attach him to the capsule includes special material to protect the lifeline from the dangers of space.

All the detail and arrangements were impressive. But most impressive of all was the jaunty, jolly and almost casual attitudes of the two young men who will embark Thursday on the greatest adventures of their lives.

CBS and ABC will broadcast their briefings tonight.

More people was NBC's color special The Grand Canyon, later in the evening. It was a handsome, beautifully photographed trip along the mile-high, 10-mile wide landmark, guided by philosopher and naturalist Joseph Wood Krutch.

Actually the hour program was one infinitely more suited to a lazy Sunday afternoon in winter than a late spring night when something a bit more stimulating than an illustrated travel talk would have been welcome.

WILL OFFER COURSE

KINGSTON (CP) — Queen's University announced Tuesday it will offer a refresher course in Ontario for public health nurses June 7 to 18. The course, to be held in the school of nursing science, is being subsidized by a federal-provincial health grant and will offer a maximum enrolment of 25.

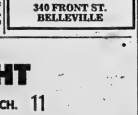
Horse 'n' Buggy Piggy Backs!

KENTVILLE, N.S. (CP) Piggyback truck service is nothing new to the railroad business, says George Powell, manager of the Dominion Atlantic Railway, CPR subsidiary. Nova Scotia had it 110 years ago—for horses and wagons instead of trucks and trailers.

Mr. Powell says the old Nova Scotia Railway, now part of the D.A.R., started carrying teams on flatcars between Halifax and Four-Mile House in 1855 and between Halifax and Windsor in 1858. The tariff was two cents a mile for the horse, 12 cents a hundredweight for the wagon. Drivers rode free.



"It wasn't a very profitable venture at these rates," he told a local service club. It required a flatcar for every two wagons, a boxcar for every four horses and a coach for the drivers. And these were long delays at every road crossing where a team had to be loaded or unloaded.

As a result, he said, the service was soon abandoned, not to be reintroduced for more than a century.

Jack Lemon Planning Visit To Land of His Ancestors

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Having just about covered all the indoor sports, Jack Lemon next will turn to football.

Hollywood's all-America star was talking about his career, past and future, after drawing a beer at his hacienda. It is a spacious but not palatial house in Beverly Hills amid tall eucalyptus and elm ("I like the wooded effect; reminds me of New England where I grew up").

Lemmon and wife Felicia Farr have been furnishing the house for two years, he said, and they are gaining on it. The place is handsomely furnished, if sparsely, as in the dining room with its inlaid wood tables but no chairs.

There hasn't been time, Lemmon. Then I think we'll take a trip to Scotland and Ireland, visiting the offbeat places not on the tourist path. My ancestors came from there—it was as England, France, Germany and who knows where else—though that's not why I'm going.

REJOINS WILDER

"Then I'll go to work in August-September with Billy again. He has been so lucky for me. I hope we can catch fire again."

He spoke of his close friend, comedy wizard Billy Wilder, with whom he made three blockbusters: Some Like it Hot, The Apartment, and Irma La Douce. The plot this time?

"I can't really do justice to the story, and Billy doesn't like me to tip it off. But it's about professional football. No, I won't be a player; I could hardly do that. I play a guy who takes over a pro team. We'll use the Cleveland Browns in it, and Walter Matthau is getting a leave from The Odd Couple on Broadway to play my brother-in-law."

And what about sex in this film?

"I doubt if Billy will let a girl get even her nose in this picture," Lemmon said.

Wilder had recently been singed by critics, rumors and others for his purchase of Stupid Lemmon himself had also been rapped by some for a string of sex-oriented comedies.

AT THE PARK — Tony Randall uses the full range of his comedy talents as a scientist who has developed an African lion as gentle as a house cat in the hilarious Universal picture, "Fluffy", photographed in color and having its first showings opens Thursday at the Park Theatre. On the same program the kings of comedy in "The World of Abbott and Costello". All their best comedies rolled into one.

WANT ISLAND PURCHASE

KINGSTON (CP)—One of the last undeveloped islands in the Thousand Islands should be bought by the federal government and saved as a park to prevent its purchase by American interests, a Kingston Chamber of Commerce petition urged Tuesday. The island is five-acre Milton Island, situated on the St. Lawrence about four miles east of Kingston.

U. S. Capacity for Stoic Stamina Under Test in War With North Viet Nam

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

President Johnson has warned the American people steadily of a need to endure in Viet Nam.

United States policy there requires "patience as well as bravery—the will to endure as well as the will to resist," he has said.

American capacity for stoic stamina under fire, for long frustrating and difficult war far from home, is being examined now to some extent at two levels.

One is the obvious preoccupation with just how far Johnson intends to go and this was expressed in the appeal Sunday by former British foreign secretary Patrick Gordon Walker.

Gordon Walker called for restraint in bombing Communist North Viet Nam. Just returned recently from Southeast Asia, Gordon Walker said the war is growing and hence the risk of a general conflagration involving the U.S., the Soviet Union and China. He suggested the U.S. has little to gain and much to lose by risking such a war.

STAYING POWER

On the domestic front, with a dawning realization that the Vietnamese war could last several years as it is being waged now, there is some discussion about the American public's staying power.

This is coupled with evidence that China and North Viet Nam feel the American endurance will crumble under the steady pounding of bloody guerrilla fighting and increasing American losses.

"The most important requirement for success in Viet Nam is aside from fighting men, weapons and diplomacy, may turn out to be patience and stamina" in the U.S.," says columnist Edward T. Folliard in the Washington Post.

"It is a fact that Americans are not noted for patience. Indeed, we have been in victory of impatience and this doubtless has had much to do with the nation's present plight.

But over a long period, that may not be much help, he suggests. Referring to the Korean War where—unlike Viet Nam—the U.S. had a lot of moral and military help from United Nations.

Even then the "American people saw . . . (it) through but their patience was badly strained."

Maxwell L. Gilpatrie, formerly deputy secretary of defence, says the answer to Viet Nam "is blowing up into a Third World War, although the possibility of misunderstanding and misunderstanding" exist in extreme degree between China and the U.S.

PRONE TO RESPOND

But Gilpatric, writing in the New York Times, sees a more likely danger for the "American people will prove themselves unable to endure a period of protracted struggle."

"As a nation, we are prone to respond quickly and vigorously to traumatic events such as the sinking of the Lusitania or the attack on Pearl Harbor. But cold and counter - insurgence campaigns are new and untried experiences for us.

"The fatigue factor rather than the escalation risk of our Viet Nam effort may be the Achilles heel of the U.S. position.

This view supports evidence that President Johnson's impatience with opposition to the Viet Nam war is directed primarily so far by minorities in American universities — is based on fact that the opposition is simply fuel to Chinese calculations.

The long philosophic view of China's leaders toward such struggles as Viet Nam is sketched in a recent report from Edgar Snow, the American journalist who has known these men since their founding days.

Snow wrote in a recent issue of New Republic that China feels it has much to gain from the existing stalemate, even if American planes should begin to strike industrial targets throughout Communist North Viet Nam.

He quotes Marshal Chien Yi as saying to him: "Whatever happens, it will only be an incident in the perspective of history and ultimately be forgotten. The American and the Chinese people will renew their friendship."

Doctors Now Worried Over Emotional Ailments

By CARL MOLLINS.

TORONTO (CP) — The quick march of medical science to near-miracle cures is leaving behind an urgent army of ailments that worried thoughtful doctors and fellow workers in the healing arts.

The ailments are social and emotional, involving both the patient and his kin, hospitals and society at large. They range from learning to live with a permanent affliction to sheltering a patient from serious emotional damage while he is undergoing a physical cure.

Such problems are increasing in number and intensity as medicine develops new methods of treating illness that once, bluntly, created no such problem because the patient died.

"Every advance in medical science creates new problems for us," says Geraldine Armstrong, resident social worker at the Hospital for Sick Children. "Doctors now save children who used to die, but sometimes only temporarily or with permanent handicaps.

"These cases often place tremendous emotional strains on the victim and his family. And it is society's problem, too, as we learned with the thalidomide babies."

TREATMENT TARDY

Dr. A. L. Chute, chief of pediatrics at Sick Kids, says "frankly we have been lagging" in dealing with the emotional ailments that accompany sickness—ailments that can be especially damaging in children.

Dr. Mihda Haveliovra, a hospital psychiatrist, repeats that her field is at least 20 years behind physical medicine: "We aren't equipped and organized to cope with the needs of the hospital, let alone the problems that arise outside as a result of illness."

One of the simplest everyday problems in a hospital such as Sick Kids is how to protect a young child from the mental trauma of strange surroundings, separation from the family and the terror of painful treatment and the illness itself.

This problem is magnified by the very bigness and complexity of treatment produced by medical progress. The need for a wide range of skills multiplies the number of specialists dealing with each patient, none of them with enough time to help the child emotionally.

"The good old days when doctors were both priest and physician are gone for good," says Dr. Chute.

BRINGS CHANGE

The growth of such problems has provoked a new awareness of the need to do something about it. The results are some changes in treatment methods, an effort to preserve tender loving care as a prime feature of nursing amid the drive to develop new technical skills and expansion of the hospital's psychiatric, social and parent-relations departments.

While the trend is to treat more and more illnesses in hospital, when's essential equipment and skills are assembled, there is a move to return some treatment to the out-patient department. Surgeons now are performing some minor surgery in emergency operating rooms, keeping the child for a few hours instead of a few days.

In nursing, "we try to remind our girls that a child has a terrible time in hospital when he suddenly has 25 different mothers instead of his own," says nursing director Gladys Stinson.

"Nursing objectives are different from medical objectives in one sense. We need to distinguish between ego groups, illnesses and personal idiosyncracies. For example, an 18-month-old child with a broken ankle needs affection and fondling, but the teen-ager needs reassurance and encouragement."

DEALS WITH EMOTIONS

Joyce Relyea, a registered nurse employed by the Anglican Church of Canada to work in the hospital, makes the emotional and spiritual problems of young patients almost her sole concern.

"Loneliness and fear are the biggest problems," she says. "I try to persuade them that God is here, as well as at home. It gives them something familiar to cling to."

More difficult than getting a child to bear hospital is helping the patient and his family to face a lifetime of pain, or even the prospect of death in a few weeks or years. Here the healers meet a troublesome ethical question of whether it is right and ill child to save a life that will be a long-term burden to itself, the family and society.

Miss Armstrong detects a typical pattern of emotions that follows word that a child has a congenital defect or an incurable illness. Many parents feel resentment, a tendency to reject the ill child to save a life.

"Parents often react inwardly to a baby born with an illness or deformity as if they had purchased 'damaged goods.' Most don't realize that this is a natural reaction, and then they develop a sense of guilt for feeling this way," Miss Armstrong says.

"We try to get to them early, get them talking and explain that their feeling of rejection is natural. It's a preventive measure and it can save trouble later."

Ultimately, most parents pass through the angry stage to a period first of forcing themselves to accept the fact and finality to accepting it emotionally.

"Often the best help is just showing laboriously that somebody else cares," Miss Armstrong says.

Make 34 Liquor Act Changes

Bowling Alleys, Curling Rinks Can Get Licence

TORONTO (CP)—Thirty-four changes in Ontario's liquor control and liquor licensing legislation have been announced by Provincial Secretary John Yaremko.

Permission will be granted to sell liquor in aircraft, legitimate theatres and dining rooms attached to bowling alleys and curling rinks.

However, three widely-forecast amendments were rejected. They involved permitting liquor sales with meals on Sundays, dropping of the legal drinking age to 18 from 21 and ending the system of local option under which municipalities decide what type of outlet is permitted.

Under the amendments to the Liquor Licence Act and Liquor Control Act singing, dancing, games such as darts, billiards and cards, and other entertainment will be permitted in all types of premises.

Public houses will no longer be compelled to close from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Women will be allowed in beverage rooms and taverns in all licenced establishments except men's beer parlors. There will be no restrictions on their costumes except that they must be decent.

WILL COME SLOWLY

All new provisions will come into effect in about two or three weeks when royal assent is given to the amendments.

The changes follow a two-year study by a special cabinet committee of the House for revising Ontario's liquor legislation. They are part of the most sweeping overhaul of the province's drinking laws since liquor sales for home consumption were made legal in 1927.

Sales aboard aircraft on flights within Ontario will be restricted to normal serving hours. Mr. Yaremko said he assumes airports will be shut off when a flight enters a jurisdiction outside the province where liquor is not allowed. On transatlantic flights where liquor is served once the flight is outside Canadian territorial waters, liquor now will be served all the way.

Movie theatres will not be eligible for licences. Others which obtain licences will be permitted to sell only to persons attending a performance and during the performance. The request for legitimate theatres was requested by the Canadian Centre for the Performing Arts, the federal government's centennial project planned for Ottawa.

CN Express Workers In Walkout

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian National Express cut off all express and less - than - carload freight shipments in and out of Toronto Wednesday in the wake of a wildcat walkout by 1,100 railway employees.

The work stoppage by Local 227 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC) was triggered when Charles W. Mitchell, a truck driver with five years' seniority, was demoted to the position of porter, apparently as a penalty for losing a section of freight.

By evening the walkout had spread to Brampton, Oakville and Windsor.

But Gerald T. Vitez, president of Windsor's Local 195, described any connection between the walkouts in the two cities.

The Windsor strike is a protest against working conditions, he said, and predicted an early return to work.

At a meeting of 700 union members in Toronto Wednesday night, tempers flared at the suggestion that the strike is illegal.

A union source said members complained bitterly that they were being treated "like dirt" by middle-management on the railway.

MEN RESTIVE

William McGavin, recording secretary of the local, said the men had been restive for more than a year under a demerit system in which points accumulated for rule infractions.

Workers who accumulate 60 points may be discharged, but demerits can be worked off at the rate of 20 a year.

The local has demanded as the price for settlement that there be no reprisals against the strikers, reinstatement of driver Mitchell and the quashing of demerits against two others.

Earlier, CNR officials in Toronto said no negotiations on the demerit system could be carried out until the workers returned to their jobs.

D. V. Goodey, vice-president for the CNR's Great Lakes region, said the wildcat strike is an illegal violation of the present contract.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis — Sunny but cool weather is expected to be general throughout the province today with the mercury climbing to the 60 and 65 degree range. Some cloud will spread across Lake Superior and also into the southwestern corner of the province on Friday, but elsewhere the sunny weather will continue.

Looks Great Up Here

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — A Titan II rocket blasted off with a thunderous roar today to propel astronauts James McDivitt and Edward White toward a four-day orbital flight during which White is to step into space and rendezvous with another satellite.

Ground Control - - -

'You're Go, Gemini IV

The mighty 90-foot tall rocket flashed to life at 11:16 a.m. EDT spewing a rust-colored cloud of smoke from its exhaust.

After a four-second holddown ed the pad to make certain proper ignition was achieved, clamping bolts were blown automatically by explosive charges and the 165-ton projectile started to lift McDivitt, White and their Gemini IV spacecraft into the sky.

The great booster rose slowly at first, but gradually increased speed as the first stage engines hungrily consumed their fuel at the rate of 156 gallons a second.

The launching was observed by thousands of persons lining Atlantic beaches and other vantage points in the Cape Kennedy area, and by television viewers, including President Johnson and the families of the astronauts.

An otherwise perfect countdown was halted for one hour, 16 minutes for repair of an electrical malfunction in the service tower. No trouble developed at any time in the rocket or the spacecraft.

After 20 seconds, the Titan, with bright sunlight burning off its silvery sides, began pitching over on an east-northeast heading and sped out over the Atlantic Ocean.

ALL GOES WELL

As the red-hot exhaust penetrated the cold air of the upper atmosphere, a trail of white vapor formed out behind it and was twisted into a curly-cue pattern by high-altitude winds.

Gemini launching control reported the astronauts said from the space craft: "Beautiful, beautiful."

As the rocket zipped above 35,000 feet, two F-4C Phantom II jet planes streaked in behind it and added their vapor trails to that already in the sky.

The planes carried cameras to photograph the rising booster.

The second stage of the booster ignited on schedule about three minutes after the launch.

Four minutes and 50 seconds into the mission, Paul Haney, voice of mission control, said "we're right on the money."

"It looks like it up there," came a report from the spacecraft.

"You're go, Gemini IV," said Gus Grissom, the capsule commander on the ground.

Minutes later, the 7,000-pound spacecraft was in an orbit ranging from 100 to 175 miles above the earth, precisely the orbital path intended.

B.C. To Get Many New Jap Plants

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier W. A. C. Bennett has announced planned Japanese investments in British Columbia amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars.

The announcements were made in a press conference in Tokyo Wednesday by the premier who is on tour of Japan with most of his cabinet.

Mr. Bennett listed these projects which would involve Japanese capital.

—New pulp mill and copper-mining venture in the Island River basin north of Stewart —100 miles north of Prince Rupert—involving a new 100-mile extension of the government's Pacific Great Eastern Railway; —Development of 1,000,000 kilowatts of power from the Iskut River;

—A new chemical fertilizer plant costing "much more" than $100,000,000 and capable of turning out more than 300,000 tons of fertilizer annually.

—Experimental shipment by tanker of B.C. liquid propane gas to Japan.

Sun Will Glare Like Welder's Torch In Strange World of Human Planet

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Cold and black, the empty reaches of space offer no real notion of distance—save for the numberless stars. The sun, like the heart of the Earth, is a welder's torch, glares with a blinding, searing white light.

Closer is the lonely quarter-moon, soft and small.

This is the strange new world of Edward Higgins White II, American astronaut, age 34, father of two children, a would-be human planet in orbit around the earth.

It is a world of fantastic dimension and unreal sensation. It is as if you had leaped into the air and never really came down, lost in a perpetual fall around the earth.

Ahead of the spacecraft on a golden tether, you plummet together at some 17,500 miles an hour—and yet you feel not so much as a breath of breeze for there is no air.

The sun stands out in the blackness as a great light bulb that seemingly spreads no light. It is only when the sun's rays strike a surface that the radiation is felt. There is no air to buffet and spread the light.

Below, you see the earth's blanket of air glowing with the sun's light, splitting the white light into the splatter of color as the world of men know it.

You feel the full brunt of the sun's radiation. You turn toward the sun and feel the immediate slap of heat at your face as the rays come through your visor, filtered to protect your eyes from the cruel light.

Behind you—gleaming on its sun-side—is the spacecraft and your command pilot keeping a careful eye on your movements. And you know that the sun-side of the craft is hot, some 200 degrees fahrenheit, and the shade side is perhaps 200-degrees below zero.

And that is probably also the temperature variation of your suit exterior if you merely stood there and didn't move.

The earth stretches out like some hazy plain — painted in browns and golds and purples almost like colors you hadn't seen before. Perhaps through the haze you see the long peninsula of Florida stretching into the blue Atlantic.

The space gun in your hand spits out a small jet of oxygen

Will Use TV For Teaching

TORONTO (CP) — Education television broadcasts and French-instruction for English-speaking pupils in grades 7 and 8, were forecast by Education Minister William Davis in the legislature Wednesday.

Mr. Davis said he hoped to have an educational TV station — the first in Canada—in operation by 1966 following application to the Board of Broadcast Governors for the use of Channel 19.

The ultra - high frequency channel will reach only urban areas in the Metropolitan Toronto area at first, said Mr. Davis, but the department intends to seek further licences for broadcasting facilities all around the province.

Mr. Davis said the department will outline to the BBG its plans for a network of stations "to serve exclusively educational needs and to provide resources for those needs at all levels and branches of educa-

Opposed To Time Limits

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberal government faces the threat of prolonged Conservative opposition to proposed streamlining rules for the Commons unless it agrees to scrap a section permitting the setting of time limits on debates of legislation.

The warning was issued Wednesday by two prominent Conservatives — former party House leader Gordon Churchill and Party Whip Eric Winkler —who argued that the setting of time limits is actually another form of closure.

"This is closure and I'm opposed to closure," Mr. Churchill said in demanding that the government agree in his suggestion that part of the reforms be approved and the time limits on bills be passed on to inter-party negotiators.

Last week the government backed down from its original "guillotine" proposal and won approval for an alteration to guarantee minimum time limits at each stage of a bill—two days for second reading, two days for clause-by-clause study, one day for third reading, in

Rebels Oppose Election Without Govt. Change

From AP-Reuters

SANTO DOMINGO (CP) — The Dominican rebels are demanding restoration of the 1963 constitution and creation of a new government before election of a new president and congress.

The rebel chief, Col. Francisco Caamano Deno, Wednesday rejected the election formula proposed by the junta headed by Gen. Antonio Imbert Barrera. Caamano termed the proposal "a fable."

The junta suggested elections be held as soon as possible under the supervision of the Organization of American States. The junta said all "democratic parties" should participate.

But Imbert said none of the present members of his "reconstruction" government would accept nominations in the election. The rebels insist that they are the "constitutionalist" government with Caamano the provisional president.

A major source of friction between the rival governments was removed today following the neutralization of the National Palace by the inter - American peace forces.

Brazilian troops of the peace force extended the international security zone south and west Wednesday to include the hilltop palace. The smoothly conducted operation virtually eliminated the possibility of a serious clash between 250 Brazilian troops that have been in the palace and rebel forces a block away.

A three-country OAS peace team prepared to leave Washington today for a new attempt to break the Dominican stalemate. The group is made up of representatives of the United States, Brazil and El Salvador. It planned to meet with former Dominican president Juan Bosch in Puerto Rico in addition to negotiating with the Junta and rebel factions in Santo Domingo.

Viet Cong Mauls Road-building Battalion

SAIGON (Reuters) — Communist Viet Cong forces today pinned down a South Vietnamese battalion in two separate ambushes in the mountainous central highlands, inflicting "very heavy casualties" on the government troops, a U.S. military spokesman said.

First reports from the area said that the three U.S. advisers attached to the battalion had evacuated themselves by helicopter because of the deteriorating situation.

The fate of the rest of the battalion, believed to number about 350 men, was unknown.

The government forces were on a road - clearing operation when they ran into an estimated two companies of Viet Cong lying in wait along the edges of the road.

It was only some 60 miles northwest of the area that Viet Cong units operating in battalion-sized forces attacked and overran the district capital of Le Thanh two days ago and then made three ambushes on government forces.

At least 120 government troops were reported killed, wounded or missing in these actions.

Meanwhile, U.S. and South Vietnamese aircraft continued their non-stop pounding of the hills where an estimated three battalions of Viet Cong troops have withdrawn after the bloody battle of Quang Ngai.

The aircraft have flown scores of sorties over the heavily-wooded hills about five miles north of the battle area where at least 350 government troops were killed, wounded or captured last weekend.

Tory Follows Tradition, His Vote Saves Labor

LONDON (Reuters)—The Labor government was shaken but still in power today thanks to the vote of an opposition Conservative legislator.

Conservatives shouted "resign, resign" when a House of Commons debate ended late Wednesday night in a tie vote, 281 to 281.

The man who saved the government from a crushing setback was Conservative member Sir Herbert Butcher, 64, who was taking the chair as Deputy Speaker of the House.

The debate was on a Conservative amendment to the government's finance bill which is to give the April budget proposals legal effect.

Butcher declared before a tense, excited chamber that his casting vote would be for the government, in line with traditional procedure in Parliament.

The absence - of three members from the chamber at the crucial time gave Wilson's government its worst moment since taking power last October.

Labor has a paper majority of three in the 630-seat House.

The three missing men—two cabinet ministers and an ordinary MP—were in the building but either did not hear the bells warning of the impending vote or did not reach the chamber in time.

The House burst into uproar when the voting figures became known and again after the the chairman's casting vote.

Summer Job Opportunities For H. S. Students Brighter

Summer job opportunities for local high school students are expected to be slightly better than last year, but whether to open a agora find work during the holiday period will depend to a large extent on how choosy they are.

"It will depend on the mobility of the student and on their willingness to accept unpleasant jobs away from their home area," stated Cecil Hluser, manager of the Belleville Employment Service.

Mr. Hluser said his office had been successful in placing most of the university undergraduates applying for summer work but the prospects for high school students were not quite so bright.

University students have the edge when it comes to finding summer employment. The main reason for this is that they get out of classes earlier and are able to stay at work until late in September.

SKILLED WORKERS SHORT

But if job prospects for high school students are not too encouraging, it is a different story for workers in some of the skilled trades.

For instance a painter, electrician or a bricklayer would have no difficulty in finding work – all he would have to do is register at the employment office.

Mr. Hluser said not one man in the above categories "is registered for employment while even a skilled carpenter might not have much difficulty in finding work.

Even in the unskilled categories the job seeker is a year with nearly 30 per cent fewer men in this category being out of work.

In the over-all picture the number of men out of work in the Belleville area is down nine per cent from last year. But it is a different story with the women, where there is a 33 per cent increase in the number of unemployed.

The actual figures show there were 818 unplaced male applicants at the end of May as compared with 901 last year. Unplaced women this year total-ed 1,200 as compared with 463 last year.

The over-all picture for men and women show a five per cent increase in unplaced job applicants.

On the other hand claims are down slightly with five per cent fewer claims being registered than last year at this time.

Claims filed during May at 291 were down approximately 25 per cent from the 336 in the same period last year.

New Garbage Contractor Does Fine Job

During the first four months' operation by Belleville's new garbage contractor, H. C. Graham, of Ottawa, a total of 73 complaints were received at city hall with respect to collections.

But not all the complaints were justified with some of them resulting from the contractor performing his duties only too well.

Quite a few of the complaints were the result of the new contract and minor changes in the collection route, while a few were complaints about missed garbage.

As it turned out in a number of instances, the garbage had actually been collected but with the lids being replaced on the container the complainant thought his garbage pail had not been touched.

WILL DISCUSS LAKES

MONTREAL (CP)—Low water levels in the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River, which are detrimental to the port of Montreal, will be discussed June 15 at the third international conference on water levels and conservation of waters sponsored by the Montreal Port Council.

Gorillas Enjoy Watching Kids' Cartoons on TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Gorillas at the Bronx Zoo enjoy watching kiddy cartoons on television.

Their TV viewers are Pili-Pili, a six - year - old male mountain gorilla; Sumaili, a female mountain gorilla, age 17; Mambo, a 15-year-old lowland male gorilla; and Oka, a 13-year-old female gorilla. All come from the Congo area.

The zoo installed a 16-inch television set outside their cages last winter to alleviate boredom while they are inside. The experiment was somewhat of a success.

Joseph A. Davis Jr., the zoo's curator of mammals, said:

"We tried a number of things to alleviate boredom. We gave them things to play with, but there was virtually nothing indestructible enough to last.

"So we tried television with the idea of providing picture changes, and because it has some movement in it. We found that our gorillas do pay attention to it, and it seems to alleviate the conditions of boredom somewhat. The ratings seem to pay us right on to TV, so we've given up with them.

"The gorillas seem more interested in kids' cartoons and shows where there is a lot of action."

FUND IN GOOD SHAPE — At the end of April the unemployment insurance fund showed a balance of $22,037,000, compared to a deficit of $25,863,000 at the same time last year. The fund also had a deficit in 1963 and 1964 during June but two years had to be supported by federal loans until rising premiums in the summer months returned it to solvency. Graph traces the balance-deficit situation of the fund by months from 1961. (CP Newsmap)

Britain's Brother Brown In Midst of Current Row Over Steel Nationalization

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP)—When the cry runs along the row of Labor ministers in the House of Commons it is inevitably stops at—Brother Brown.

The most spectacular figure in the socialist line-up, he comes from the wild-eyed ranks of the radical left, but is embodied in the spellbinding modernist, cut-tailored person of George Brown, a pugnacious performer if ever there was one.

Now the future of Brown, economics minister and No. 2 man in Prime Minister Wilson's government, is again a topic of speculation following a fantastic, imbroglio over steel nationalization.

"I like excitement," Brown once declared. "Either I create it or it follows me around."

Strange things happen among Tory members when Aneurin Bevan addresses the Commons. They tend to break out with incantations that one may not have something to do with the subject at hand.

"Three per cent, three per cent," they chanted like college boys when Brown was talking about steel. They were gleefully reminding Brown that he allegedly pledged before a month of voters last year that mortgage rates would be reduced to three per cent—a figure considered impossible then and now.

"This always happens," Brown mourned.

SINGS GOOD DAY

"Hello, Dolly!" the Tory tormentors yelled on another occasion.

This occurred after the Sunday Times magazine printed a profile story on Brown, 50, including the whist that if Irving Sings Hello, Dolly in the bathtub his family knows it is going to be a good day.

Brown, with a union background, likes to call friend and foe "brother" in the manner of union men. When these caustic rumors be might become forceful secretary of state contentiously depicted him giving a hearty "Greetings, brother," to the suave President de Gaulle.

"De Gaulle, terribly affronted, declares war," the communist condemned.

Some of Brown's most controversial scenes have been on television. Sitting with Russia's at the death of President John F. Kennedy, he gave an emotional tribute to many stubbingly expansive gestures, considered inappropriate by local viewers.

Others complained that he seemed almost incoherent at times during a more recent appearance to explain the prices and incomes policy he had worked out with employers and unions. TV satirists said he was "working too much." Tory newspapers had a field day. The hard-driving politician took a 10-day rest but was soon in the fray again.

As far back as 1956 there was the celebrated dinner-table row in London with Russia's Nikita Khrushchev. "My God forgive you," Brown said to Khrushchev when the Russian leader slighted Britain's war effort.

Brown's outbursts may bring criticism, but he is widely regarded as a tough, intelligent, straight-talking man of strong emotion, courageous and loyal to his friends. In a biography, William Neil Connor—the columnist Cassandra on the London Daily Mirror—says:

"He is a man who erupts and explodes. He has a low boiling point and if you are walking through the pastures of Westminster and see bits of turf flying and the sound of bony butting and the clash of entangling horns, it is quite possible that the member for Belper is making a point."

"It's the Irish in me," says Brown, son of a truck driver of Irish descent, who was brought up in a two-room London tenement and left school at 15. He's just as proud of his working-class origins as of his wife and two children.

His daughter was quoted as saying: "One drink and an emotion and you have to six drinks in anyone else."

Brown was Wilson's chief challenger for party leadership but pledged allegiance to the new chief at the 1963 Labor Party conference, last June the October, 1964, general election.

Wilson, on gaining power, made Brown economic overlord, head of the newly-formed economic affairs department, potentially the brightest prize in the Cabinet.

But with Britain in serious financial difficulties, it is also the overlord role of the thankless executive shed. Brown has set a terrific pace since last October. He seems particularly sensitive to press criticism and does not disguise his irritation at reporters' questioning, which he apparently equates with enmity.

Some Tory spokesmen say Brown made himself the goat for an elaborate charade and farce over steel. The argument proposed outright nationalization and Wilson said socialist dissidents "could go to blazes."

Brown dramatically introduced a measure of compromise—briefly, socialist dissidents say, to appease right-wing dissidents, old friends, from cutting their own political throats.

The future remains uncertain but Wilson has said the government's position is unchanged. He denied published reports that Brown apologized to his Cabinet colleagues. Brown himself does all this leave Brother Brown? the Tory wags ask.

Observers have frequently contrasted the icy Wilson and the emotional Brown, wondering if they really get along. O'Connor wrote, Brown always seems to have a row with Wilson.

"There is Wilson who rarely seems to be in a row. Wilson got angry for a little while in the Telly. Wilson putting his rivals through the political mincer with unbroken calm.

If Brown bears the mincer grinding he can take comfort from reading his press clippings.

"The striking thing about Mr. Brown's career is his ability to survive the storms he creates," one parliamentary correspondent said in the midst of a bowler last October.

Victoria University Makes Arrangement With Dolmen Press

By LESLIE MILLIN

VICTORIA (CP) — Packed away in a University of Victoria safe is a collection of documents calculated to make professors breathe hard and advance while filtering eyes.

Librarian Dean Halliwell last fall made a deal with a small Irish publishing house to add a matchless collection to the young university's library.

Neatly labelled and sorted into brown paper envelopes are the fruits of the deal—manuscripts, letters, proof sheets, files and a first edition copy of every book turned out by the Dolmen Press of Dublin in its 15-year history.

The arrangement includes having Dolmen send everything they publish as it comes up," says Mr. Halliwell.

Dolmen publishes the work of virtually every major figure in contemporary Irish literature.

The University of Victoria purchase is believed to be the first of its kind—and it involved a little scholarly pushing and shoving with the University of Texas.

Poetry, however, won out over pocketbook.

LITTLE GOLD MINE

Robin Skelton, poet and authority on Irish literature, is a professor at the University of Victoria, "and through his help we obtained the collection," says Mr. Halliwell.

The elaborate brown paper envelopes contain what the librarian is convinced is a scholastic gold mine.

To the layman, the contents look like neatly printed books, old letters, and bits of paper with black smudgy thumb-prints on them.

But the books are first editions, the letters are often handwritten by famous modern writers and the bits of paper include holograph manuscripts and hand-corrected proofs.

Mother and Son Both Become Bachelors--of Arts--Same Year

They didn't graduate from the same college but Belleville mother and son this year have received their Bachelor of Arts degrees from Ontario universities.

They are Mrs. Arthur G. Tooth, 88 Selma Ave., former Belleville public school teacher, and her son, John Tooth, now working in passenger sales with the Canadian National in Belleville. Mrs. Tooth received her arts degree from Queen's, while her son attended the University of Western Ontario in London.

Mrs. Tooth taught public school until five years ago, then commenced extension courses toward her degree. During her final year she attended full time at Queen's.

The former Belleville teacher hasn't made up her mind about the line of work she will follow now that she has her B.A. degree, but according to her husband, an engineer with Northern Electric, she "fully intends to put it to some good use."

Mrs. Tooth says she is trying to decide whether to go back teaching or to continue in post graduate work.

"But I would really like to do something for the children," she says.

Her son, however, is through with studies, at least for the time being, and after two years of summer work with CN is now permanently employed with the railway.

Volunteers Aid in Emergency

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—When a little girl in nearby Sandwich East Township got lost recently, the Sun Parlor Emergency Communications Service quickly moved into action.

Members in automobiles with two-way radios soon found her and returned her to worried parents.

It was the sort of operation made for SPECS, a 30-man volunteer squad formed a year ago to help police and others in cases of emergency in Essex County.

Under guidance of Ted Hanifan of Windsor, the public-spirited car owners have equipped their vehicles with short-range radios which enable them to maintain contact up to 20 miles.

Mr. Hanifan, who explained that SPECS is one of a number of similar organizations in Canada, said arrangements have been made to designate one of the members' homes as a "control base" in emergency situations.

YOUTHS CONVICTED

MONTREAL (CP) — Five youths charged with illegal assembly following Victoria Day demonstrations were found guilty in municipal court Tuesday. Two received jail sentences of one month and of 20 days respectively, a third was fined $50, a fourth received a sentence of the time he had spent in jail since his arrest May 24, and the fifth was remanded for sentencing later.

Endless War on Crime Job of Scotland Yard

By DOUG MARSHALL

LONDON (CP) — For most spies, murderers and society blackmailers in British fiction the traditional moment of truth comes as a casual invitation to "drop down for the Yard for a chat."

As every reader in the world is expected to know, invitations to New Scotland Yard are seldom issued lightly and don't require an RSVP. It's just the offhand British way of conveying to culprits the horrible fact that the game is up.

So often, in Scotland Yard used as a fictional device, so often have shots of its Victorian brick facade been used to fill up time in bad British "B" movies, that it comes as something of a surprise to find that the famed headquarters of London's metropolitan police are not just a necessary invention for the dark days of feverish thriller writers.

But Scotland Yard is no myth. The buildings are actually there, lying in the shadow of Big Ben's clock tower, overlooking the Thames and staffed by about 3,000 trusty men in blue. And the cable address of Scotland Yard really is: "Handcuffs, London."

The ugly, institutionalized interior of the Yard contains a crack modern crime-fighting organization that lives up to its reputation. Only the architecture is old-fashioned.

CRIMES ON RECORD

The headquarters have direct control over an 18,000-man force split into 23 divisions and 78 police stations and spread out across 750 square and frequently squalid miles of Metropolitan London. The Yard also acts as an operating nucleus for county-controlled police forces throughout England and Wales.

The efficient 1,400-detective criminal investigation department, the fraud squad, the spy-seeking special branch and the swift flying squad, with its 32 souped-up and subtly disguised vehicles, are all controlled from this nerve centre.

Down one green-walled corridor is the forensic science laboratory with its blood-stained specimens and down another is the criminal record office with cosmetic details of all persons convicted of serious crime in Britain.

At the back, exuding whiffs of the past, are stables for the 20 ex-cavalry horses of the mounted police. They are retained because of their invaluable help in crowd control.

In a near - lit basement bunker, sealed off by a forbidding door labelled "Room 23," is the black museum with its grisly relics of old and famous British murder cases.

The museum, never open to the British public and only rarely to foreign journalists, also contains a unique collection of burglary tools and examples of forgery that could easily give any would-be criminal some useful tips.

Among the forgeries is a perfect-looking $100 note ostensibly issued by the Imperial Bank of Canada, Toronto, and dated Jan. 2, 1917. And an example of fortune effort for minimum returns is a three-shilling postal cheque laboriously altered to make it look like an eight-shilling postal cheque—a profit of roughly 75 cents.

Theoretically the museum, with its pageant of police curios dating back to 1850 when the Yard was founded by Sir Robert Peel and others, is used to instruct police officers in various aspects of crime.

But there is obviously a limit to what a young sleuth can learn from a pool of acid hair or the agonized death mask of a long-dead homicidal maniac.

The real reason the museum is just a collection of trophies," the chief curator confessed during a tour of the Yard. "The armed forces have their war museums. This museum is a record of our victories in the longest war of all—the war against crime."

Vivid evidence that the war still rages and that victories don't come easily is presented by the Yard's map room—a topographical maze of movable maps, folding maps and mural maps all ablaze with flags and strings in six colors.

One whole wall is covered by a 25-inches-to-the-mile map of Central London studded with more than 20,000 flags. This is the record of break-ins in the last six months alone.

HABITS REVEALED

Other "method" maps trace the paths of pickpockets and correlate safe crackings with particular types of explosives used. A larger map gives at a glance the grim picture of London's traffic fatalities over the last month.

On the basis of these maps detectives can spell, for instance, that a certain burglar likes to operate among railway lines, breaking into houses from the back and usually doing the job on Friday nights. Some Friday night on some railway line the cops will be waiting for him.

A staff of eight works full time keeping the maps up to date. There are always more flags going up than coming down. Despite its efforts, the Yard solves only about 25 per cent of all known crimes, with a higher average for such serious crimes as murders and a lower success rate for minor break-ins and thefts.

Chief reason for the failures, say police officials, is simply shortage of manpower. The Yard can and does match the sophisticated criminals gimmick for gimmick but even detection by computers is no replacement for the alertness and intuition of the bobby on the beat.

Initial Access of Property To New Bridge Is Obtained

TRENTON — Mayor James MacDonald announced today that Jack Zigman, owner of the Front Street property, which has been used as a metal scrap yard for several years, had agreed to accept the town's offer for the property, which will form initial access to the new bridge across the Trent River.

The mayor said the Ontario Department of Highways had set June 2 as the cut-off date for the town to acquire the Zigman property. The mayor now has options on all property in east Trenton which will form the approaches to the new bridge with the exception of four lots owned by R. J. "Dick" Whitley. Council has put through expropriation procedure for Mr. Whitley's property, but the mayor emphasized today there was still plenty of time for negotiation.

Work on the structure of the new bridge should start this summer, the mayor said.

The estimated $1,000,000 dollar bridge will be paid for by an outright grant of 75 per cent of construction costs from the Department of Highways and a $350,000 grant from the federal Department of Highways.

Land for approaches to the bridge will be paid for by the town. Council last year allocated $140,000 for this purpose, and this amount today he had fairly well kept within this figure. Land owners have been paid deposits, and they have signed option agreements.

When the federal department's grant of $350,000 will be forthcoming is still a conjecture. The town has signed an agreement, by which the town would take on in perpetuity, the upkeep and maintenance of the approaches, of the old bridge, heretofore the responsibility of the department, in a "trade" for the $350,000 towards the new bridge.

Town Planners Confronted With Problem

TRENTON — The town planners, Project Planning Associates, (responsible for Trenton's far-reaching official plan), will be brought into the picture on a ticklish subject which now confronts the Trenton Planning Board.

Belleville realtor, Donald Burr, has asked to have the area west of Hanna Park and south of McGill Street zoned to tolerate "row housing."

At a meeting of the local board in Trenton this week, some members seemed to be in favor of the zoning — others spoke out in opposition.

In quite apparent opposition are residents of Westmount Park, north and "up the hill" from the area proposed for the zoning.

In telephone interviews, a number of residents of the park said they were as opposed to the new suggestion as they had been to a similar proposal that mainsonette construction be permitted below them. Based on the premise that such near-by construction would tend to "cheapen" their property, the residents claim they bought their lots with the clear understanding the area was exclusive.

Wayne Brooks Principal of New School

TRENTON — Wayne Brooks, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Brooks of R.R. 3, Trenton, has been appointed principal of the new V. P. Carswell Elementary School in Bartleville Heights.

Mr. Brooks, a teacher in Trenton schools for the past five years, will replace the original choice for the new school, Arnold Amm of St. Catharines, who has been simultaneously appointed to head the staff of Prince Charles public school in West Trenton. A replacement at Prince Charles became necessary when James Amm tendered his resignation a few weeks ago. Mr. Amm will be leaving Trenton in July as he has accepted a position on a secondary school staff in Western Ontario.

Experts Visit Trenton Plant For Planning

TRENTON — Visiting at Eric Technological Products Ltd. in Trenton on Tuesday were James Walsh, the former manager of engineering at the Trenton plant and now in charge of products of engineering at the Erie Penn. plant; Paul H. Christenson, manager of Planning and Manufacturing engineering at the U.S. Erie plant; Gordon D. Ferrell, director of industrial relations at Erie, Penn. and Thomas Venesale, production engineer, at the same plant.

Mr. Walsh was here to discuss policies and research and development to do with a company product, "filter - cone". Mr. Venesale was interested in the Trenton plant's filter manufacturing methods; Mr. Ferrell in personnel handling, community relations, job evaluation, fringe benefits to employees and other personnel problems.

Recently, two new engineers have been added to the Trenton plant's staff, Ronald Church from the University of Waterloo and Roy Dorey from Guanoque. Both are now concerned with the manufacture of filtercons.

Incidentally, a little part of Trenton is now whizzing around overhead in space with the Gemini rocket. Components manufactured in Trenton go into all the U.S. space rockets.

Temple and the Death Penalty

We have said it before and we will say it again.

The Ontario Intelligencer is opposed to the abolition of the death penalty for capital crimes.

That understood, there is no reason why we should not compliment Robert Temple, M.P. for Hastings South, on the private bill he introduced in the House of Commons to substitute mandatory life imprisonment for the death sentence.

We do not agree with what he is trying to do, but we heartily approve of the way he proposes to do it.

We suspect that Mr. Temple may have been chosen to "fly a kite" for the Pearson Cabinet, to guide it in drafting a government bill for the abolition of capital punishment.

If so, Mr. Temple and whoever aided him, if anybody, have designed a good kite.

What distinguishes Mr. Temple's private bill from so many of the proposals for eliminating death sentences is that he has recognized the hazard which such proposals create.

A murderer, allowed to live, may murder again.

Mr. Temple proposes to lengthen the odds on such an occurrence by making a sentence of life imprisonment mean what it says. Tied in with his proposal for an amendment of the Criminal Code to abolish capital punishment is an amendment to parole procedures which would forbid the release of persons serving life sentences for capital crimes.

Unfortunately neither this, nor any other procedure, can entirely eliminate the risk of a murderer repeating his crime. He may escape from prison, and kill again outside its walls. He may kill in order to escape, or in an attempt to escape. Indeed, the proposed change in parole procedure would enhance the possibility. A man sentenced to prison for life, without any hope of parole, would have nothing to lose by any second murder committed in an attempt to win freedom. He would be doomed—and even a cornered rabbit will struggle for its freedom.

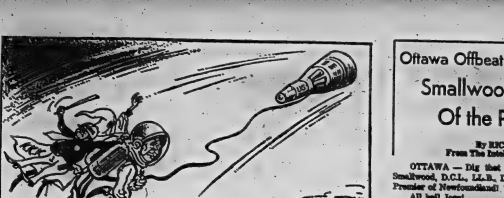
We give Mr. Temple full marks for having made an obvious attempt to reconcile the practical difficulties of eliminating the death penalty with the demands of his conscience. Evidently he, like many more Canadians, finds the taking of human life repugnant. We have some difficulty in understanding how those who feel this way can be so ready to expose executioners, specially prison officials, to greater risk of losing their own lives in the performance of the necessary services they render society. But this is their problem. They have a right to their opinion.

And we have a right to ours. It is simple. Persons convicted of capital murder are better off dead, as far as society and they are concerned, and, quite possibly, better off as far as the murderers themselves are concerned. We are not so sure that a life sentence which is a real sentence of imprisonment for life is more humane than a sentence of death, providing this latter sentence is carried out as humanely as possible. There should, of course, be a change from the present barbarous use of hanging as the method of execution, and there is no need to delay such a change until a decision is made on the continued use, or otherwise, of the death penalty.

That done, the death penalty should be retained. Dead murderers not only tell no tales, they also murder no more.

Castro Honors Lincoln

Cuba has issued four stamps to mark the centenary of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.



This homage to the great emancipator of U.S. domestic politics may be interpreted by many Americans as an insult.

The real injury, though, comes not from Castro's Cuba but from Washington.

American stamp collectors are forbidden to have anything to do with the buying or selling of Cuban stamps—trading with the enemy.

The real cutting edge of this prohibition lies in the fact that it is probably justified. It sounds like just another case of the law proving itself to be an ass, but if there were no such ruling the Lincoln stamps would bring Castro a rich harvest of precious U.S. dollars.

Loose Conduct One Reason For Spread of Syphilis

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Lately there has been much talk about the increase in syphilis in the U.S. Vaccine has been successfully produced to counteract the spread of so many other diseases. Why not vaccine against syphilis? — E. A. E.

It has taken years of work and millions of dollars to develop most of the vaccines we now use. Perhaps it would be possible to develop one for syphilis, again it might be extremely difficult and costly, since a special type of germ is involved.

The purpose of vaccines is to protect people from diseases which they have no other way of avoiding, and contracting the ones which periodically break out in epidemics endangering everybody. Polio, measles, smallpox are typical.

Syphilis is different. It can be avoided. The essential cause of its increase is sexual promiscuity, plus the fact that too many people who acquire the disease do not get immediate treatment for it, and thus do not have the decency to avoid giving it to others.

Probably some are just too ignorant.

With the epidemic diseases, you aren't being vaccinated solely for your own protection, but for that of everybody else.

This is not true with syphilis. Perhaps one person in a score or so will contract it in any given year. Vaccination of the other 99 would do very little to protect the general populace. And the cost, collectively, would be immense.

What would be the purpose of making pincushions of a hundred million citizens when in all likelihood, the ones who would need the shots have the vaccination would be the very ones responsible for spreading most of the cases?

Scientifically, we know enough about treating the disease so it could be stamped out in all practical purposes if everybody would co-operate sensibly.

Syphilis is increasing because of carelessness, ignorance, selfishness and loose conduct.

In my opinion, it would be a waste of scientific time, brains and money to work on a vaccine for syphilis when society already knows how to halt the disease.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have read your articles a great deal. I have a wonderful husband who eats on colchicine and probenecid. But you haven't discussed the affects of alcohol.

What is your opinion of three nightly cocktails? Is there any appreciable difference in the use of scotch or rye? — Mrs. R. M.

Alcohol in excess can touch off attacks of gout. It may not do so by itself but it can contribute when other factors are present. Moderate use of alcohol usually does not give trouble, and if his cocktails have not caused any attacks, he probably is safe on that score. I would say that this amount probably is about at his upper limit, however. Or if he is having attacks of gout, then I'd suggest cutting down on alcohol for some months.

The form makes little difference—beer, rye, scotch or any other, except that I know of an instance where one particular kind of cocktail precipitates an attack whereas other liquors didn't.

Dear Dr. Molner: Are orinase pills insulin? I say they aren't and my neighbor says they are. — Mrs. J. R. F.

No, none of the diabetes pills are insulin. Insulin has to be injected; when taken orally it is digested and destroyed before it has time to do any good. The pills are chemicals that lower the blood sugar.

Letter to the Editor

Criticizes Failure To Assist Policeman

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

On April 23, one of our law enforcement officers was viciously attacked and beaten by one out-of-town man, while a crowd of curious spectators stood around and looked on.

I will admit that some people in the crowd did attempt to help this officer but were held back by others, who were afraid to become involved. This to me shows a complete state of cowardice.

Are we, the people of Belleville, becoming a city like New York or other cities where one man is beaten and others stand by and watch? Only over there the man is beaten almost to death and sometimes is beaten to his death. This could happen here and may, someday in the future. I certainly hope it does not. All it takes is a little bit of human stamina to stand up to such people as this. Why not throw off the cloak of cowardice and take on a more heroic attitude?

You might not be an expert in judo or karate, but you could, with the help of others, step in and thus persuade the assailant to "knock it off," shall we say.

If the case were reversed and a local citizen was severely brutally beaten and a police officer stood by and watched, what would be the response of the Belleville citizens, then? If I know the people, they would be screaming for the blood of this police officer. Yet they do not stop and realize that a police officer is a human being and has a right to live and breathe daily, along with the rest of us. The task of a police officer is not an easy one and I, myself, would not want to be doing" but that is not the attitude to adopt. Every citizen, no matter who he or she may be, has a right to be helped when help is needed and this includes a police officer. He has a heavy load placed on his shoulders in the maintenance of law and order and I think people should respect him and help in his efforts in any way possible.

I think and hope that the greater majority of citizens of this city agree with my contentions and let us not see this same thing happen again if the matter arises, which I hope it does not.

Sandra Bounsall,

Ask Canadians To Improve Communities

OTTAWA (CP)—How to get Canadians to paint, polish and otherwise improve their communities for Canada's 100th birthday is the problem faced by 150 delegates at a conference here.

The conference on community improvement and rural beautification, sponsored by the Centennial Commission, came to grips with the problem at workshop sessions Wednesday.

Delegates heard a message from Secretary of State Lamontagne who urged them, in effect, to paint or petrify.

He told them to welcome the "new society of man" by getting out from under the dictatorship of machines and a jumbled heap of dirty buildings" with their centennial projects.

Canadian cities and towns needed airing, facelifting and replanning. Nature should be brought back to the city and therefore to the home. Delegates should "stretch your imagination" and plan not just memorials for a birthday but "projects for prosperity."

Construction Round-up

By HARRY McCULLAGH

Hugh Murray Ltd. is making steady progress on three major projects. One new branch of the Bank of Montreal and medical centre at Dundas Street East; the boiler house for the General Hospital extension, and the Park Dale school extension.

Glazed brick up to the second floor level in the bank and medical centre structures is scheduled for completion by the end of this week.

The boiler room will occupy the main floor of the 3,000 square feet building and the medical centre, to house four doctors' offices, the second floor.

The underground tunnel for the hospital boiler house has been completed. Waterproofing and exterior masonry work will be done this week.

Work on the Park Dale school extension is under way. Foundations have been laid and the structural steel erected.

The Coin Autowash at 305 North Front is also nearing completion and automatic equipment is being installed.

The Murray firm also reports completion of an L.C.B.O. store at Tweed.

The firm of Vanbots of Scarborough reports it has almost made up a four-week delay in construction work at the Nicholson Catholic College extension on Church St.

With the arrival of steel supplies, work is now about two days behind the scheduled completion date on August 23. The boiler and service rooms have been stalled and a start made on plastering and outside brickwork. Roofing is well advanced.

A program of home-and apartment building by DeMille Construction is nearing completion. The firm has finished work on a six-plex at Albert Street and is doing landscaping at three six-plexes on Lewis St.

Other jobs completed by the firm recently include remodelling of the office block on Pinnacle Street and paving on Lesley Drive. The firm also expects to make an early start on three new private homes.

Tatham Co. Ltd., Rossmore, has completed about two-thirds of a sewer and water service project in Marmora.

The Rossmore firm has encountered heavy rock formations on this job. "We have taken out some 2,000 yards of rocks and it is about another 1,000 yards to go," Bill Tatham said today.

"It is quite a bit of rock and it makes the going pretty tough." Mr. Tatham said that despite the rock, the work was proceeding on schedule.

Hill and his firm had completed sewer and water services for sub-division homes being built in Nanaimo by the Maurice Rollins Company.

Progress was also being made on the extension to Quinte Milk Products at Wellington.

Charles Lambert Ltd. has completed a swimming pool for Quinte View cottages on Big Island.

The firm has seven houses under construction in Belleville and will make a start on three others shortly. Two homes are also under construction in Ameliasburg township.

Landscaping is being done on three apartment buildings on Walbridge Road.

The Handguns

Other scores were: D. Parks 258; L. Kulesar 248; R. Reid 231 and H. Hodgkinson 221, for a club total of 1,228.

IS HATE BASE

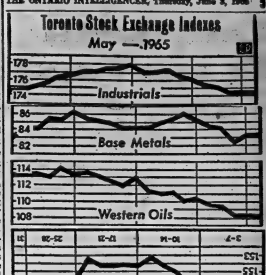
TORONTO (CP)—Toronto is the main centre for hate literature, says a committee set up to advise Justice Minister Guy Favreau on the subject. Far behind are Montreal, Vancouver and Winnipeg. Prof. Maxwell Cohen, dean of law at Montreal's McGill University and committee chairman, told a news conference Wednesday Parliament must decide what should be done about such literature.

Martin Doubts Hanoi Would Support Claim

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Martin expressed doubt Wednesday that the Hanoi government would support a claim by Communist China that the demarcation line between North and South Viet Nam no longer exists.

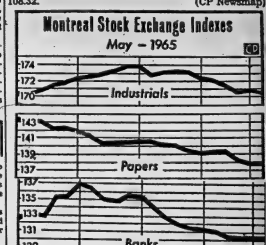
Mr. Martin told Opposition Leader Diefenbaker that the claim, made in the Peking newspaper People's Daily, may have been made to increase alarm or create dissension.

The newspaper said the demarcation line along the 17th parallel has ceased to exist as a dividing line and that the people of the North had ceased to be restricted in giving support to their fellow countrymen in the South against the South Vietnamese government.



It also said China had increased fortifications in Hainan Island in view of intensified U.S. military action.

Mr. Diefenbaker asked for a statement in the light of what appeared to be an extension of hostilities to a general fear about a widening of the war.



Mr. Martin also expressed pessimism about the chances of convening a conference about another Indochina nation, Cambodia, in order to make possible negotiations on Viet Nam.

He said Lionel Chevrier, Canadian high commissioner to London, had discussed the question with the British government. The Canadian government was also holding discussions but the external affairs minister gave no details.

Gemini Launched On Space Weekend

space was the burned-out second stage of the rocket. The stage followed a few hundred feet behind the capsule in orbit.

McDivitt, as command pilot, twisted the bell-shaped spacecraft around 180 degrees to take a look at the booster stage and to align the capsule in formation with it.

He radioed that the stage looked pretty and that it was tumbling.

Near the end of the second orbit—about 2:17 p.m. EST —

Sun

and propels you side to side, to and fro, and it is a fine way to get around, a beautiful way in this daydream sort of world.

Ahead of you, too, is the booster rocket that brought you to this place—its ends jagged and burned by the blast of flame and explosion. It tumbled slowly in an unreal way like a petroleum's twirling nightstick in slow motion.

You remember to take care not to pull too hard on your tether line, because in this weightless arena, you know the only laws that hold are that any action has its equal and opposite reaction. Strike an object to send it reeling and you send yourself reeling as well. If you didn't have a helmet on and coughed, it would back you up. It is a tentative world where everything is in motion, and motion is the only thing for sure.

You keep an eye from time to time on the spacecraft—for it is your only reality, your only measure of up or down.

And even though you are a mere man, a lean six-footer who weighs some 170 pounds, your fog on the tether line can move more than 7,500 pounds of spacecraft.

Then suddenly the 12-minute visit in space is over and a voice on your headset tells you to come back to your cockpit.

McDivitt was to manoeuvre Gemini IV to within 25 feet of this stage. Then, in a page out of science fiction, White planned to open his hatch and leave the spacecraft, using a "space gun propulsion unit" to manoeuver close to the target.

He was to photograph it and other space objects.

MIGHT TOUCH HIT

Space agency officials had said before the flight that White might even attempt to touch the second stage if it were not tumbling too severely.

After floating in the black space void for 12 minutes on the end of a 25-foot golden lifeline, White was to return to the craft.

Most of his excursion was to take place more than 100 miles above the southern United States as Gemini IV crossed from Mexico to Georgia.

After this jaunt, McDivitt was to manoeuvre about 16 miles away from the orbiting booster. Then, during the fifth orbit, he was again to try to rendezvous with the satellite, possibly approaching within 10 feet.

No exit was planned during this manoeuvre.

Both the ability to rendezvous and to operate outside of an orbiting spacecraft are techniques which must be perfected for later flight to the moon.

The dramatic journey of the Gemini IV started at 11:16 a.m. when the mighty Titan II thundered off its Cape Kennedy launching stand and propelled the craft into its precise orbit.

It was the start of the longest U.S. - attempted manned flight yet—an endurance mission scheduled to end about 1:00 p.m. Monday after 62 circuits of the globe in 97 hours, 20 minutes.

The launching was delayed one hour, 16 minutes because of a balky launch pad service tower that would not fold down from the rocket due to an electrical malfunction.

Despite the excitement attached to the rendezvous and space exercise, manoeuvres mission director Christopher C. Kraft Jr. said the main goal of the flight was to determine how well men and spacecraft systems can withstand a long spell in the space environment.

On flight, if carried to completion, would eclipse the present American record of 94 hours 20 minutes established in May 1963, by astronaut Gordon Cooper.

The Russian cosmonaut, Valeri Rykovsky, holds the record of 119 hours, six minutes.

As the great two-stage air force Titan lifted Gemini IV skyward with a thunderous roar the pilots reported all systems in good condition.

About seven minutes after blastoff, the mission control centre reported that the Gemini was in a successful orbit.

McDivitt fired small jets to provide the final manoeuvre that put the vehicle in proper orbit and in a flying formation with the rocket stage.

Mission control at Houston reported that it thought it heard McDivitt estimate that the stage was orbiting about 300 feet behind the spaceship.

This was close enough for White to attempt a rendezvous with the booster during the second orbit.

It was the first time that control of a U.S. man-in-space flight had shifted to the new multi-million - dollar centre at the National Aeronautics Space Administration's manned spacecraft centre at Houston. All future NASA manned flights will be conducted in this manner, although all will start from Cape Kennedy.

The second stage of the Titan is 27 feet long and 10 feet in diameter, larger than the spacecraft which is 19 feet tall and 9½ feet across the base.

The rocket stage was equipped with two high - intensity blinking lights to help the pilots spot it in darkness.

The launch of the 165-ton, 90-foot-long Titan was watched by thousands who lined the Cape beaches, roadsides and other vantage points.

TV viewers, including President Johnson, also watched.

The families of the two air force majors were tense TV spectators.

McDivitt's wife, Patricia, and children, Michael, 5, Lynn, 4, and Patrick, 4, and White's wife, also named Patricia, and children, Edward III, 11, and Bonnie Lynn, 8, watched their TV sets at Houston.

Upon achieving orbit, McDivitt and White immediately began checking all spacecraft systems — communications, control, oxygen, life support and others — to make certain all were in working order for the vital rendezvous and emergency back aboard.

The astronauts reported halfway through the initial orbit that all systems were in excellent shape.

Ground stations closely monitored medical, engineering and other data from the Gemini IV as it whipped overhead at about 17,500 miles an hour.

McDivitt, 35, steered the spacecraft and tested control systems while White, 34, handled the other checkout chores.

There was never any trouble today with the Titan. And there was nothing ever reported wrong in the spaceship or with the astronauts. Only the electrical problem prevented an on-time blastoff.

The count started out ahead of schedule, then was right on the button when the electrical malfunction occurred.

The astronauts took the delay coolly and were reported to have catnapped.

McDivitt and White agree with Kraft on the main purposes of the mission.

"We are the first step in the long-duration phase—of extending man's liveability in space," said McDivitt.

White said he considers his planned exit a vital step toward moon and interplanetary trips. During which astronauts will have to work in space. But he added:

"The most important thing in the flight is long-duration. The four days are a step forward toward the two-week flights we plan in the Gemini program."

Medical monitors around the world will watch closely for any signs of mental or physical deterioration that could prompt a quick decision to end the mission.

The longest previous U.S. man-in-space flight was the 34-hour, 20-minute ride by astronaut Gordon Cooper that concluded the Mercury program. He nearly fainted after leaving his Mercury capsule and doctors said he suffered from a condition known as orthostatic hypotension—which is caused by pooling of the blood in the legs, rapid pulse and low arterial pressure.

The condition generally is believed caused by the weightless world of space where there is no gravity to make the heart and blood-pumping system function normally. However, Dr. Charles A. Berry, the space agency's chief of medical operations, believes it may be caused by a combination of factors in the space environment — weightlessness, fatigue, cramped quarters and lack of proper exercise.

To learn if exercise will help, the astronauts planned to work out with a stretch cord to stimulate arm, leg and back muscles. For comparison, McDivitt was to exercise once a day and White three times.

Russian cosmonaut Valery Rykovsky holds the present space flight endurance record but sky of five days. Soviet scientists said he suffered temporary after effects of low blood pressure, fatigue, slight emotional and balance instability and changes in bacterial and biochemical properties. But the then Russian man - in - a - space flights have been limited to one day so that they have sought solutions to the problems.

Cosmonaut Alexei Leonov, the only previous man to step into space from an orbiting vehicle, was reported to have suffered slight disorientation in trying to re-locate his Voskhod II auto White said he hoped to move more slowly and sure both the Gemini IV and the Titan II second stage as reference points.

Even if all goes well, the United States still will trail Russia in the over - all manned space race. Dr. George Mueller, the space agency's associated administrator for manned flight, said:

"It's going to be some time before we equal all the activities the Russians are capable of doing."

It generally is believed the United States trails Russia by one to two years in the moon races. However, U.S. officials are counting on the Gemini program, early earth orbit flights in the Apollo lunar program and the giant Saturn V rocket now under development to eventually overcome the Soviet lead and place U.S. astronauts on the lunar surface in 1969—hopefully before the Russians.

The present Soviet lead is based on a larger booster developing 1,400,000 pounds of booster thrust, compared to 430,000 for the Titan II. The U.S. has fired a more powerful booster, the Saturn I, but it is not qualified for manned flights yet and won't be for two years.

addition to the present one day for the resolution stage on money bills.

Although a cabinet minister could with majority support put the limitations into effect on any bill, Privy Council President Georges McIlraith has said it is expected the provision would be seldom used.

AGREEMENT EXPECTED

For most bills agreement in an all-party business committee could be expected. An agreement could provide for debates either shorter or longer than the limits set out in the proposed legislation.

Mr. Churchill said there is general agreement to one part of the resolution to set a 40-days-a-session limit for discussion of departmental expanding estimates, appropriations bills and most supplementary estimates.

To provide for detailed discussion of spending, the government has proposed to increase the number of committees. Mr. Churchill said the government should drop the controversial aspects of the reform proposals so the committees can be agreed to and start operating.

But Mr. Churchill was opposed to the time limits on legislation, despite the alterations by the government, and said "in actual fact it's the worst form of closure that could be developed within a system of parliamentary government."

Mr. Winkler said the measure was dictatorial and warned that debate will continue unless changes are made that are "more democratic and fairer to the MPs."

WOULD BE LIMIT

Besides the time allocations proposals, the resolution on rules reforms would limit the daily question period to 30 minutes and abolish appeals to the Speaker's decision — a political manoeuvre which has consumed a great deal of time in recent sessions.

Aside from the threats of a lengthy debate, the Commons heard a speech by Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary North) who has been in Parliament for 20 years.

Mr. Harkness said his experience taught him that speedy consideration of House business results from the co-operation and self-discipline of MPs, not on rules reforms or a return to the two-party system.

Bowling

ate portions of restaurants and dining rooms as long as a degree of privacy is maintained but drinking will not be allowed on sidewalk cafes. Mr. Yaremko noted that open-air drinking might be suitable for some motor hotels whose construction allowed for a degree of privacy.

The government also listed several minor changes in liquor regulations, one of them that title Rose will be required on all measuring glasses — or "shot" glasses — in cocktail bars.

The government turned down proposals that youths under 21 be allowed to drink in their own homes under parental supervision. Some members of the legislature had suggested there was no reason why older children shouldn't be allowed wine with meals at home.

Mr. Yaremko said this is an area requiring a great deal more study. The public at large would have a better understanding as to what was entailed if at-home drinking were to be allowed.

STATES PURPOSE

The purpose would be to train children in the use and effect of alcohol, and not make available to minors the "so-called pleasures of drinking," the provincial secretary said.

Owners and managers of curling clubs, bowling alleys, legitimate theatres and hotels welcomed the changes. But Rev. Eric Smalley, general secretary of the Ontario Temperance Federation, said anything that tends to increase the sale of intoxicating beverages is a backward step. He said bowling is a family sport and liquor should not be permitted on premises where parents bring their children.

On licences for theatres, he said: "Once you start licensing theatres, the movie houses will want it too."

Rev. G. K. Stewart, assistant secretary of the board of evangelism and social service of the United Church of Canada, said he has strong reservations about permitting drinking on planes and allowing bowling alleys and curling clubs to sell liquor.

PROGRESSIVE CITY — Tampere, Finland, like most other parts of the country shows signs of a "boom" that began in the 1940's. Everywhere there are modern buildings, ribbons of new highway, giant power plants and modern machinery. In the last 25 years Tampere's population has doubled to 138,000. (CP Photo)

After Slow Start in History Finland Blossoms as Nation

By ROD CURRIE

TAMPERE, Finland (CP) — Finland, to quote the Finns, is "a new old country"—with emphasis on the new.

Although its recorded history dates back well before medieval times, its real beginning as an independent country came only in 1919, a sort of byproduct of the Russian revolution.

In between there is a robust and often tragic story of a country caught between two great, hostile empires—Russia and Sweden. It is said that hardly a generation of Finns escaped war from the middle ages to the end of the Second World War, in which Finland lost one-tenth of her territory to Russia.

But out of it all grew a remarkably progressive, if somewhat bewildering, constitution. Finland, for instance, was the first country in Europe to grant universal suffrage. But it also provided for the present multi-party, one-chamber parliament, a president with wide powers and a cabinet selected by the president but approved by parliament.

As a result, no single party ever has had an absolute majority and there have been 47 cabinets since independence. The two major parties in the 200 - seat house now are the Agrarians with 53 seats and the Communists with 47.

EVERYTHING UP-TO-DATE

But the system seems to work effectively and today much of the country has a surface appearance of modern, efficient newness.

Everywhere there are modern buildings, great ribbons of new highway, giant power plants on magnificent rivers and modern machinery churning away in factory and field. It's all part of Finland's almost desperate battle to increase productivity, to pay for the many things she must import and cut the rising cost of living for her population of nearly 5,000,000.

Tampere itself, a city without a history and rather proud of it, is typical of the new pace of Finland. Founded in 1779—80 years after the Nova Scotia capital of Halifax — it didn't start to "boom" until the 1940s, but in the last 25 years its population has doubled to 138,000.

Finland, from its earliest days one of the world's most northerly countries, bigger than England, Scotland and Ireland combined, had been part of the Swedish realm, administered from Stockholm.

LINKED TO RUSSIA

After the Russo-Swedish war of 1808-09, Finland was joined by treaty to Russia as an autonomous grand duchy and the accompanying peace and relative prosperity helped dilute, for a time, the agitation for independence.

Finally independence came in December, 1917, after the Russian revolution that threw out the czars and brought in Lenin, as advocate of national self-determination.

But then a civil war, between sides favoring either a monarchy or a republic, rocked the country until the "Form of Government" — the constitution — was finally agreed upon in 1919.

Another blow came in the Second World War when Russia invaded to take by force land Finland had refused to give up. The Finns always insisted they were neutral, only defending themselves, but the later presence of German troops on their soil during an offensive against Russia compromised Finland's neutrality.

The peace-treaty gave control of Finland to Russia plus $300,000,000 in war reparations. Some 85,000 Finns were killed and 220,000 wounded—but the essential basis of Finnish independence was maintained.

tion within our provincial system."

The application will be made sometime within the year and in the meantime, the department will prepare a limited program of broadcasts over the CBC and private TV stations. It is scheduled to start in January.

SEEK CO-OPERATION

Stations throughout the province will be asked to co-operate in arranging suitable times with their local boards of education for broadcast of ETV programs.

The advent of education television in Ontario was described by the education minister as a forward-looking step to take advantage of a means of communication which would be readily accepted by students.

Mr. Davis hinted he is considering lowering the compulsory age limit for school attendance to five years of age instead of six.

Hastings North District WI Holds Annual Meet

Women Ask Tax Relief For Working

Over 100 delegates and visitors from 14 branches, Carlow, Cooper, Eldorado, Tudor and L'Amable, Ivanhoe, Madoc Marmora, Harts and Riggs, Mc-Arthur Mills, Frankford, Stirling, Ryiestone, Springbrook and Wellman's of the Hastings North District of the Women's Institute met at Hazzard's Corners Church, May 25th, for their 37th District Annual meeting.

Guests were registered by Mrs. Elsie Franks and Mrs. Eric Devolin and welcomed by Mrs. Newell Broad, Mrs. Arthur Fleming and Mrs. Allan Ketcheson.

The president, Mrs. Edward Holmes, thanked the Queensboro branch for the splendid tea served to her before the meeting and graciously thanked all for the co-operation during the two years in office and asked the same support for her successor. She asked each institute to send her the names of their members during her term of office and some choice for the centre of a quilt block to be made as a souvenir of her association with all.

An informative address was given by Mrs. McLaren, the representative of the Provincial Board who has finished her three year term as representative of the district. She gave a survey of Women's Institute activities and the deliberations of the provincial board and reported that the international scholarship fund is now completed. She also gave a brief report presented a new challenge to the W.I.

After a short singsong the standing committees gave their reports. Nearly $3,000 was spent in the various communities.

Mrs. McLaren conducted the certification of the district directors, after which the craft display was viewed.

Dinner was served by the ladies of Harts and Riggs, after which the first vice-presidents of each branch replied to the roll call by a short skit on the theme of the meeting, "you can always give without loving, but you can never love without giving."

The collection was taken by Mrs. McArthur's branch, and the Madoc branch conducted an impressive memorial service for deceased members.

Girls' Club work was reported by home economist' Miss Janet Monroe.

A few words were given by Mrs. E. M. Moore and Mrs. Horsepool, organizers of the Harts and Riggs W.I. ten years ago.

The suggestion box and resolutions were dealt with by Mrs. McLaren.

The slate of officers for 1965-66 given by Cooper Branch was accepted as follows: immediate past president, Mrs. E. Holmes, Queensboro; president, Mrs. Barton Haggerty, West Huntingdon; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Warren Hill, Madoc; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Ken Tompkins, Harold; secretary - treasurer, Mrs. George McKennon, Malone; assistant secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Ernest Irwin, Campbellford; federated representative, Mrs. Rex Rollins, Madoc; alternate, Mrs. Gerald Clancy, Harold; auditor, Mrs. S. R. Beatty, Madoc and Mrs. K. Nicol, Madoc; district delegate, Mrs. Don Kerr, Campbellford; assistant, Mrs. George Graham, Madoc; public relations, Mrs. B. DeClair, Queensboro; district curator, Mrs. Clayton Burkett, Springbrook.

The mixed quartet of Katherine Burnside, Beverly Ketcheson, Ross Bailey and Don Bailey, who represented Hastings County in Toronto in January and brought back honors to the County, delighted the audience by singing two selections.

The mothers of these talented young people are all Institute members and were present.

An invitation to Queensboro to hold the 1966 district annual meeting was accepted.

Mrs. Gerald Blackburn of Eldorado brought in the courtesy report which so aptly thanked everyone who had helped to make this one of the most interesting and enjoyable of annual meetings.

Mother of 5 Gets Degree, To Study Law

TORONTO (CP) — A mother of five, who has worked for five years to get her bachelor of arts degree, graduated from the University of Toronto Wednesday.

Mrs. G. B. Armstrong of Toronto says she hopes to go on to study law next.

She says her husband, with a brokerage firm, is her "best critic and helper."

Mrs. Armstrong keeps a busy schedule that would probably have exhausted her younger classmates. She is president of the Home and Council for Women in Public Affairs, an organization which sponsors women in public life and encourages them to seek municipal, provincial or federal offices.

HELPS AT HOME

Mrs. Armstrong said that far from taking her away from her family, her work in women's groups adds to the cultural climate of their home.

"All children are interested in what's going on in the world."

Mrs. Armstrong is also president of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps Woman's Auxiliary, which raises funds for bursaries for medical students and is vice - president of the Canadian Association of Canada, Toronto branch.

She is radio and television chairman of the Provincial Council of Women, president of the Swansea Home and School Association and last year was appointed to the 16-member Ontario government food council, consumer section.

U.C.W. Meetings

HOLLOWAY ST. U.C.W.

Holloway St. U.C. held their May meeting in the church parlors Tuesday evening. Devotions were led by Mrs. D. Richardson, based on the commandment of Jesus "to have love one for another," and expressed thoughts on the true value of a friend.

Mrs. C. Smith introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Harold Spear from King St. United Church in Trenton, who spoke on community citizenship. She enthusiastically outlined an interesting organized system of calling on all members and adherents which is followed up by continued timely interest in several ways. The plan is proving highly successful in communities where it is being put to work and extends an outreaching hand to needs not filled before and inspires and expresses the love of Christ through the church.

The speaker was warmly thanked by Mrs. R. Doxsee.

The president, Mrs. R. Taylor, conducted the business of the evening. Members were urged to attend the Leadership Training School and Study College from August 9th to 12th. Plans were formulated for a picnic for the Community.

MUSICAL COMEDY

A musical comedy on how "not to call" was presented by some of the ladies. The skit had its setting in a living room strewn with toys, newspapers and wet laundry, about 9.30 on a rainy Monday morning. The tired mother, complete in faded housecoat and rollers is greeting the embarrassment four overdressed ladies at the door. Gales of laughter from the audience greeted the entire performance but the underlying message was most clear.

Solos by Mrs. Taylor enjoyed as colored slides were shown of familiar faces in costume at the Granville's Tea and highlights of a previous bus trip to Toronto which included visits to Ukrainian Village and the Fred Victor Mission.

IODE Centennial Project Will Be Aid to Educate Indians, Metis and Negroes

By ANNE MASON

WINNIPEG (CP) — Centennial projects to aid the education of Indians, Metis and Negroes were announced Wednesday by the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire.

Three provinces are to work with what was described at the annual IODE convention as Canada's "deprived citizens." The remaining seven provincial and Yukon Territory chapters also plan educational projects to commemorate Canada's 100th birthday.

The order plans to raise at least $50,000 for a centenary fund to be distributed equally among the 10 provinces. Yukon Territory chapters will receive up to $1,000 from the fund, said Mrs. J. R. Walton of Toronto, centenary committee chairman.

British Columbia plans to help physically - handicapped students obtain a further training in the instruction of trainable retarded children.

"We aim, through education, to increase family income and improve the Negroes' living standards," Mrs. R. A. Whyte of Halifax, Nova Scotia IODE president, said in an interview. About half Canada's Negro population lives in Nova Scotia.

WANTS MORE AID

The Nova Scotia chapter wants to increase aid to Negro students and to extend assistance for adult and technical education.

Last year, the IODE gave $1,000 to four Negro university students and one high school student to commemorate the 100th anniversary of free education in the province. The order plans to increase the aid if possible, Mrs. Whyte said.

After announcement of the IODE program last year, the provincial government added a $50 bill granting $25,000 in aid to Negro students in Nova Scotia.

A survey made in 1962 found that 90 per cent of Negro students dropped out of school at 16 years of age, Mrs. Whyte said.

"We feel that the majority of Negro students leave school early as they lack the funds to continue their education."

The Nova Scotia IODE also would like to extend assistance to adult education and technical school training for Negroes.

AIMS AT RESEARCH

Alberta aims to support research into Metis and Indian education in a $5,000 research chapters plan to provide a library in Saskatoon at the proposed Confederation Centre Centre for Saskatchewan Indians.

"There is a lack of trained personnel to deal with Indian education," Mrs. C. P. Wilson of Calgary, Alberta IODE president, said in an interview.

"We feel that this will result in a greater benefit to our Indian population than the grant-ing of a few bursaries," Mrs. Wilson said.

Mrs. C. B. Linton of Edmonton added that results from research into the Indians needs will result in better training of teachers instructing on reserves and an improved educational standard.

Other IODE centennial projects include establishment of bursaries in the arts by Prince Edward Island and a tour of Ontario for Grade 11 students.

URGE FUND DRIVE

The 28,000-member women's organization which raises more than $1,000,000 annually for charitable work, now has more than $16,000 in its centenary fund. Delegates urged that IODE members reach the $20,000 centenary objective as soon as possible.

In other business, delegates decided that the Commonwealth relations fund also should be used to promote better Commonwealth relations. The fund now totals nearly $5,000.

Delegates also agreed to continue their support of the Commonwealth student assistance program. Last year, six Commonwealth students received IODE scholarships.

Six post - graduate scholarships are to be offered this year from Second World War memorial funds, it was decided. Last year, five such scholarships were offered.

Ninety - three students at Canadian universities also received aid from the fund, said Mrs. D. M. Brown of Toronto, IODE national secretary.

HEADS IODE

Mrs. J. Nell Gordon of Toronto was elected president of the order.

The attractive mother of five joined the order at the suggestion of her husband's commanding officer when her husband enlisted in the Queen's Own Rifles in 1939. His commanding officer suggested that all the wives should belong to one women's organization.

"We all joined the IODE. I have never regretted the day and thoroughly enjoy the work," she said in an interview.

Mrs. Gordon said she hopes to see an increase in membership because "our work is so diversified that there's something for everybody."

She emphasized increase IODE membership by 1967 was suggested at the convention.

WANTS YOUNG MEMBERS

Mrs. Gordon especially is interested in getting young members into the IODE. There is a trend to formation of junior chapters for girls from the ages of 12 to 18, she said.

"The IODE is less regimented than brownies or guides, and it's wonderful for teen - agers to do volunteer work. It gives them an idea of others' problems and helps make them better people."

AN ALL-ITALIAN MEAL

Nagging at my conscience have been some recent little revelations about Italian pasta. These include noodles, spaghetti and macaroni. (I'm hoping many of you took careful note of the Tomatoes Stuffed with Macaroni Salad I gave here last Saturday, May 29th.)

I prepared Green Buttered Noodles to serve with Baked Veal Rolls (Veal Rolls Piccata) and one of my guests said the noodles were so good they were a lovely meal in themselves.

An Italian chef by the name of Frank Campagni who is Swiss-French and British-trained and whom I know, served spaghetti as an all Italian meal to the Press Club in such a beautiful setting that I'm impelled to describe it too.

Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

THURSDAY

Tomato Bouillion; Baked Stuffed Veal Hearts; Baked Potatoes with Sour Cream; Spinach Casserole (Tues., May 25th); Two-Crust Rhubarb Pie No.2 (see Wednesday); Coffee.

SUNDAY

Oven Pot Roast (see Friday); Rich Brown Gravy with Pan-Roasted Potatoes, Carrots and Onions (see Friday); Green Peas; Rhubarb Crunch (see Saturday) with Pouring Cream; Tea.

GREEN BUTTERED NOODLES:

6 oz. (half 12-oz. package) broad noodles, salted boiling water, 1 cup ground or very finely minced parsley, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt.

To 2 qts. boiling water add about 1 teaspoon salt and the noodles and boil, uncovered, until tender. Drain well through colander. Return to pot and add butter, parsley and salt. (Note: 1 ground one large bunch parsley becomes 1 cup; it's easily done chopping but if you have the patience minced parsley is better.) Mix is gently to avoid breaking noodles and reheat. Delicious by itself or especially appropriate with veal, particularly bread cutlets or

FRANK'S SPAGHETTI:

Undercook the amount of spaghetti you require in plenty of boiling salted water. Freshcups Italian cook their spaghetti only 10 minutes so that it will be "al dente", that is, offer resistance to the bite when you bite and so that it will twist around your fork. Then thoroughly drain and stir butter through it — "a certain amount". Arrange spaghetti on medium-size preheated platter in a wide border. Sprinkle generously with finely-chopped parsley then with grated Parmesan cheese. Fill centre with Italian Tomato Sauce (with garlic mentioned). One 30-oz. can tomatoes, 1 medium onion, chopped, 1 outer stalk celery, chopped, 2 whole cloves, 2 cloves garlic, peeled and sliced, 1 bay leaf, ½ teaspoon sugar, ½ to 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 3 tablespoons olive or salad oil or butter, 2 tablespoons flour, ⅛ teaspoon sugar, ¼ lb. ground beef or hamburg (optional — see below). Simmer together the tomatoes, onion, celery, cloves, garlic, bay leaf, sugar, salt and pepper for 30 minutes. Force all through sieve, discarding cloves and bay leaf. Blend together oil or butter and flour and sugar, then stir in tomato puree until thicken. Cook slowly, stirring, 5 minutes longer.

NOTES:

1) If ground beef or hamburg is desired brown it in the oil or butter before adding the flour in the last step just above this. With this meat addition you have a main course dish. Pass extra grated Parmesan or Cheddar cheese at the table. 2) Of course you realize that this Tomato Sauce may be mixed through the spaghetti if desired.

Study Guild Discusses Education in Quebec

Changes in education in Quebec was the topic at the monthly meeting of the Women's Study Guild held on Monday evening May 31 at the home of Mrs. E. B. Mayne, Hastings Drive.

During the business part of the meeting a letter was read from the girl in Tunisia, sponsored under the Save the Children Fund, and the $30 necessary to continue the sponsorship was voted.

A nominating committee of Mrs. Reynolds, Mrs. Wylie and Mrs. Barbour was appointed and announcement made of a pot-luck supper for the final meeting of this year to be held at the home of Mrs. R. Ellis.

The worship service, led by Mrs. Lantz, stressed the theme: the basis of peace throughout the world is peace in the individual life and home. This results only from knowledge of self and discipline.

A comprehensive paper on education in Quebec, written for the University Women's Club by Mrs. R. E. Barrett, was read by Mrs. Maybee. It explained the close connection, throughout the history of the province, between the church and education, education being the responsibility of the family and the church, not of the state.

Under Premier Lesage a decisive step in the history of education has been taken.

Miss J. Tickell continued the study by explaining Bill 60 of May 13, 1964, creating a Department of Education in which Mr. Paul Gerin-Lajoie is the Minister of Education, Mr. Arthur Tremblay, the Deputy Minister and Associate Deputy Ministers are Messrs. Page and Billings.

In the short time since the passing of this bill a wide-spread democratic administration has been set up. It provides for maximum free education for all those to whom schooling may be useful. It makes clear the government's part in this field.

"Operation 55", already well underway, is organizing the whole province under 55 regional school boards who are to provide suitable academic and vocational education at the secondary school level.

Much of this is made possible financially by the Federal-Provincial agreement to which Quebec has subscribed.

After considerable formal and informal information and discussion on this subject refreshments were served by Mrs. A. E. Orr, Mrs. Mills and the hostess.

Club Activities

NOAH'S ARK CLUB

WALLBRIDGE—The Noah's Ark Club held their fourth meeting in the Church Hall on Wednesday, May 26, with a good attendance.

The president, Mr. and Mrs. John Watson, opened the meeting. Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Parks had charge of the service. Their topic was on the theme of "Thankfulness". Mrs. Clifford Parks closed the service with a reading and a prayer.

An auction of small articles was held. A baseball game was organized under the leadership of the recreation convenors, Mr. and Mrs. Hutson Ketcheson, with Art Carleton and Ray Shorey as captains. Mrs. H. Ketcheson conducted a contest.

The next meeting will be held in the Church Hall on Wednesday June 30, with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Phillips as program convenors.

On May 24, the Noah's Ark Club held a fireworks display for the community at H. Ketcheson's Hill. A large number was in attendance, and after the display, everyone went to the church for coffee.

Court Claims Motive Is Wrong

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto central presbytery of the United Church of Canada will final today with a higher church court's rejection Tuesday of a mother's request to be ordained as a minister.

The church's Toronto conference voted 12 to 8 against ordaining Mrs. William Bartrem, 36, on the ground her motives were wrong. It suggested a two-year wait.

Rev. Stephen Mathers, conference secretary, said Mrs. Bartrem had given the impression her main reason for seeking ordination was not so much the glory of God as a need for self-fulfillment.

GIVES DEFENCE

Speaking in defence of Mrs. Bartrem, Rev. Gene Young of Toronto, himself ordained in 1962, told conference delegates:

"She should not be made to undergo this two - year test. None of us other ministers has had to do that. It has been a matter of trial and error."

Rev. Donald Gillies, assistant minister at Bloor Street United Church whose session of elders first recommended her as a candidate for the ministry, also spoke in Mrs. Bartrem's defence. Minister of the church is Rt. Rev. E. M. Howse, president moderator of the United Church's general council.

Mr. Gillies said the church already had set a precedent by ordaining married women. Mrs. Bartrem was not married when she graduated two years ago from a theological college.

Mrs. Bartrem did not comment. She received permission in 1963 to defer her ordination application until this year. In the interval she taught school and worked as a writer.

Spring Flowers, Fashions Feature Dessert Bridge

Spring fashions and flowers highlighted the annual Dessert Bridge at the Bay of Quinte Country Club's women's division yesterday afternoon.

The variegated colors of flowers seen in profusion in the dining salons and lounge background the fashionably colorful attire of the ladies.

Sixty-five ladies were in play said to be slightly below the record set a year ago.

Mrs. Eric Ketcheson, 1963 president of the division briefly but warmly welcomed the members and guests prior to play.

Mrs. Mary McCreary was adjudged the winner of the first prize. Second was Mrs. Balmford.

The hidden score award was presented to Audrey Herrington with Mrs. Louise Hurst taking home the consolation prize.

Several door prizes went to the various winners.

The success of the bridge is due in no small way to the excellent arrangements made by convener Florence Lennox aided by her co-convener Lillian Matthews.

Mrs. Betty O'Brien was complimented on her excellent supervision of the desserts.

No small amount of credit goes to Marg. Wiggins and Phyllis Parks for their wonderful arrangements of the lovely spring floral decorations.

Golf-wise the ladies will play the qualifying round for the Lazier Cup — business ladies' cup on Saturday.

Ann Landers

This Husband Supplies Wife's Emotional Stability

DEAR ANN LANDERS — A woman who works in our office talks of nothing but Eric, Eric, Eric, Eric is her husband.

She never says "We are going on a vacation." It's always, "Eric is taking me on a vacation." I have yet to hear her say, "I bought a new dress." It's always "Eric bought me a new dress." She has never had an idea all by herself. It's "Eric and I think," — or "Eric and I have decided . . ."

During the election we thought we'd go crazy. It was "Eric says . . . Eric predicts according to Eric . . . last night when Eric and I were talking."

ANN LANDERS

This woman married late in life and you'd think nobody else in the world has a husband but her. We are all so sick of hearing about Eric that we need some outside help in coping with the problem. Any suggestions? — EARACHE FROM ERIC.

* * *

DEAR EARACHE — It should be obvious to you that this pathetic woman is so dependent on Eric that she can't have a thought without him. The mere mention of his name is an emotional prop.

Of course it's a big fat bore to listen to Eric this and Eric that day in and day out, but it is her way of fighting loneliness and insecurity.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I just read the letter from the mother who cried on your shoulder because her daughter and son-in-law never visit her. The letter sounded suspiciously like something my mother could have put together. Since I may be the "thoughtless, selfish, inconsiderate" daughter she described I'd like equal time to present my side.

Why don't Carol and Steve visit you, Mother? Because people go where they feel welcome and comfortable.

Do you nag them and whine because they are ungrateful and unappreciative — "after all you have done for them?" Do you really accept your son-in-law even though he is not of your faith? Or do you subtly compare him with your other son-in-law who is of your faith?

Do you make your daughter feel guilty because she doesn't tell you everything and answer the intimate questions which are none of your business?

Think about these things, Mother, and perhaps you will figure out why you are alone so much — CAROL.

DEAR CAROL — Here's your letter — an unusually sharp one it is. Sharper than a serpent's tooth.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our handsome 22-year-old son has had several crushes. The girl he is going with now is short and dumpy. She has a homely, expressionless face. Her taste in clothes is atrocious. A soiled brassiere strap is always hanging out.

The girl is so ignorant I don't know how she got out of high school. The note she wrote thanking me for her birthday cake had 11 mistakes.

Our son has brought her home for dinner five times. I wonder if we are being too hospitable. I don't want our son to interpret our kindness to this girl as approval. On the other hand I'm afraid to be unfriendly because he might end up marrying her. Please advise. — THINKING AHEAD.

DEAR THINKING — I applaud you for being hospitable although it's obvious you dislike the girl intensely. In my view you have chosen the wise approach.

If excessive drinking is wrecking your health, or destroying someone you love, send for Ann Landers' booklet "Help for the Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Junior Girls' Aux., Mothers Enjoy Banquet

The annual Junior Girls' Auxiliary mother and daughter banquet was held recently at Christ Church Parish Hall. Approximately 85 were in attendance including representatives from the various organizations of the Parish.

Grace was asked by Miss Betsy Wright. The toast to the mothers was proposed by Miss Dawn Smith with Mrs. K. Lake responding.

Following dinner Canon R. B. Wright, in his remarks, stressed the strengthening of the work of the church by the participation of the Junior Girls. These girls, as they progress from Junior Auxiliary to Girls' Auxiliary and thence to the Woman's Auxiliary, have a great responsibility not only to the church but also to the community and to the world.

PRESENT PINS

Membership pins were presented to the beginning girls and to two teachers by Mrs. H. Pitt, president of the Afternoon Branch W.A. and Mrs. G. Cherry, Diocesan secretary of the Junior Girls' Auxiliary.

Perfect attendance awards were presented to a number of members. This was followed by a short play written and directed by one of the teachers, Mrs. R. Rawlings. It was an honor to have been previously invited to present this play at the Junior rally held in Napanee early in May.

Two members, Miss Janice Cherry and Miss Linda Noakes were much enjoyed doing a "Charleston" dance number.

Mrs. C. Fuzzen, Diocesan Girls' Auxiliary Secretary showed a film on Camp Hyanto. The Anglican Diocesan summer camp at Lyndhurst. This was accompanied by a most interesting commentary and remarks by Mrs. G. Cherry.

The evening's event closed with an expression of appreciation and presentation to the Junior Auxiliary leader, Mrs. J. Fletcher.

Mrs. Fletcher was assisted the past season by Mrs. R. Rawlings, Mrs. R. Sullivan, Mrs. B. Wright, Mrs. B. Ripley, Mrs. D. McLean and Miss Doris Day.

C.G.I.T., Explorers Hold Mother and Daughter Banquet

Tabernacle United Church C. G. I. T. and Explorers mother and daughter banquet was held recently with the president of the C.G.I.T. Melanie Butler as master of ceremonies in charge of proceedings.

Following the dinner the toast to the Queen was given by Judy Robb, and the toast to the mothers by Gay McFarlane and responded to by Mrs. Morgan McFarlane. The toast to the church was given by Susan Baxter to which the Rev. Morgan McFarlane replied. The toast to the C.G.I.T. and Explorers was given by Mrs. Pickell and Betty Pickell on behalf of the members replied.

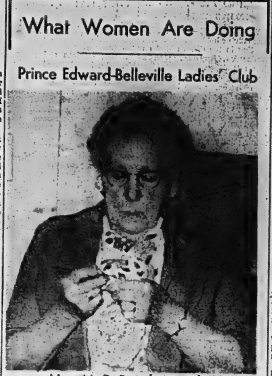
The graduation exercises from the Explorers to C.G.I.T. was in charge of Miss Marilyn McFarlane when 17 girls graduated, Miss Donna Honor welcomed the group of girls into the C.G.I.T.

Miss Butler introduced the guest speaker Mrs. Dailey who gave an interesting talk on Jamaica with the showing of an appropriate film. She also expressed thanks to the Tabernacle U.C.W. for catering and Miss Kathy Bedford thanked the speaker for a most informative talk.

The girls formed a large circle around the hall for the singing of Taps.

Church Groups

FRANKFORD — Frankford Full Gospel C.A.'s met on Friday evening. Mr. Willard Whitman led the service. A number of favorite hymns were sung. Miss Beverly Wannamaker and Miss Charlene Hughes took part in the worship service.



During the month of June the C.A.'s are having an attendance contest with captain Calvin Watson competing against captain Richard Patrick. A vocal duet was sung by Miss Beverly Wannamaker and Mr. Willard Whitman.

A scripture answer was conducted by Richard Patrick on "Joy". The C.A. girls defeated the C.A. boys with a score of 11-9.

Speaker for the evening was Mrs. Mary Patrick who spoke on "God's children being faithful in reading His Word and witnessing and prayer". She also read a poem.

What Women Are Doing

Prince Edward-Belleville Ladies' Club

Mrs. M. P. Baird, President

The Prince Edward-Belleville Ladies' Club is unique in origin, purpose and history.

The Club originated in February 1943 when Mrs. M. B. Weese invited several friends, formerly of Prince Edward County and now living in the city to an afternoon tea at her home, 59 Cedar Street.

After some discussion at this time it was decided to organize a club — and at the March meeting with an added number from Prince Edward County joining, a full set of officers were chosen and a hand book of rules was agreed upon. The first president was Mrs. M. B. Weese who served in this capacity for five years. Mrs. M. P. Baird is this year's president of the Club.

A few years after organization it was decided to accept members from the city on condition that they were sponsored and introduced by a Prince Edward County member.

The purpose of the Club is to renew old friendships and to add new ones; also to help cheer those with sadness by remembering them with cards, letters and flowers. The motto of the club is "So many Gods, so many creeds, so many paths that climb and wind, when but the act of being kind is just the thing this sad world needs."

There are members from every church denomination and the programs are most educational and interesting. Many get-togethers are enjoyed including banquets, bus trips, picnics and other social outings.

The Club has been responsible in helping to finance a number of projects such as furnishing a room at the Quinte St. Lawrence Hall, Kingston; helping with hospital renovation and the placing of a Bible at Mountain View Airport which was later transferred to Hastings County; also donations to the School for Retarded in Belleville.

A special meeting has been held for the past 23 years on the birthday of the Club when special tribute is paid to those who have served as officers and leaders; also in memory of the more than 36 members who have passed away.

This is the 21st in a series about women's organizations in Belleville and their activities.

Women's Institutes

FOXBORO W.I.

The May meeting of the Foxboro Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. R. Tremmon with an attendance of 16 members and six visitors.

Mrs. W. Johnston, president, opened the meeting. The treasurer reported a bank balance of $82.43. Members decided to purchase a Canadian flag.

Mrs. C. Hubbs gave an interesting report of her trip to Guelph and curator of Tweedsmuir history.

A report was given on the girls 4-H club work with 12 girls completing the course "What Shall I Wear." Karen Dafoe gave a skit on "A well planned costume for a certain occasion."

Mrs. B. Hollinger, convenor for health gave the motto "Be sure to have good shoes or a good bed, you spend your life in one or the other."

Mrs. Hollinger read a letter from Mrs. Ashley explaining cadet training through the St. John Ambulance. Mrs. Ashley is to be invited to the next meeting.

Mrs. Waller, past president, was presented with an Institute pin for which she thanked the members.

The meeting closed and the hostess and her assistant served a dainty lunch.

Quinte W.I. Sponsors 'Spring Tea'

Purple and white lilacs, tulips and lily-of-the-valley formed an attractive background for the "Blossom Tea" held in Memorial Hall, East Dundas Street.

Mrs. Charles Woods, President and Mrs. Douglas Atkins, 2nd vice - president welcomed the ladies at the door and Mrs. R. Atkins was treasurer for the afternoon.

The tea table looked attractive with its lace cloth, silver services and centre of tulips and lily-of-the-valley. Pouring tea were District Presidents, Mrs. Earl Onderdonk and Mrs. Don Chisholm and Branch Presidents Mrs. Gerald Stratton and Mrs. Mac Nobes.

Tea tables were convened by Mrs. J. Parrott.

Other members of the Institute assisted in serving and replenishing and convened the sales tables.

There was a large attendance including members and guests from the different Institutes in the Trent Valley Area.

FINAL TOUCHES — Soviet technicians place the fairing — the smooth and streamlined surface — on a one-man Vostok space ship in an assembly building. The conic part of the covering contains the recoverable capsule of the craft which contains the cosmonaut's cabin. The Soviet Novosti press agency says most of the six Soviet cosmonauts who made earth orbits in Vostok space ships were ejected at 21,000 feet, landing separately from the capsule. (CP Photo)

COSMONAUT'S CABIN — A Soviet cosmonaut sits in the compact cabin of a one-man Vostok space ship surrounded by dials and controls. The Soviet Novosti press agency recently reported that most of the six Soviet cosmonauts who made earth orbits in these space ships landed by parachute separately from their capsules. To achieve this the entrance hatch of the capsule was automatically opened at 21,000 feet and two seconds later the cosmonaut and his arm-chair were ejected. (CP Photo)

READY FOR RERUN — This Soviet space capsule, a sphere about 7½ feet in diameter and weighing 2.4 tons, has been through all the rigors of an earth orbit, and is fit for another flight. The capsule of the one-man Vostok space ship, which contains the cosmonaut's cabin, has withstood a 20-ton resistance, and a temperature of 10,000 degrees when it was enveloped in flame while passing through the atmosphere. (CP Photo)

USSR Discloses Cosmonauts Land Outside of Capsules

OTTAWA (CP)—Most of the six Soviet cosmonauts who made earth orbits in their one-man Vostok space ships landed separately from their capsules, it has been disclosed here.

With the delivery to the U.S.S.R. Economic Achievements Exhibition in Moscow of one of the Vostok space ships, the Soviet Novosti press agency has revealed details of the capsules and their performance.

Besides the six one - man flights, the Russians sent a multi-seater ship named Voskhod into orbit last Oct. 12 with an engineer, a scientist and a doctor as crew. Last March 18 Voskhod 2 was fired and one of its two-man crew stepped out into space at the end of a tether.

Novosti says "usually, the cosmonauts who were flying Vostok ships landed separately from the capsule."

In such a case, the cover of the entrance hatch of the capsule was automatically opened at 21,000 feet and two seconds later the cosmonaut and his arm-chair were ejected with the parachute opening.

SUPPLIES ALSO DROPPED

At 12,000 feet, the arm-chair was separated from the cosmonaut and fell freely to earth while the space-man, in his hermetically - sealed suit, floated down at about 18 feet a second. With him fell emergency rations, equipment and a boat that would automatically inflate if it landed in water. The capsule itself would float to earth by its own parachute system.

If the cosmonaut landed in the capsule, the cover of the ship would be opened by the space-man only after his ship touched ground.

Novosti also revealed that the Vostok is in two parts—the capsule with the cosmonaut's cabin in one and in the other the motors for orienting the ship, oxygen and fuel tanks and communications devices. The part outside the capsule is jettisoned and burns up on re-entry into the denser atmosphere.

The capsule itself is a sphere about 7½ feet in diameter and weighing 2.4 tons.

... of the instruments in front of the cosmonaut is an automatic globe which helps him determine the point of the earth over which he passes at any given moment. It also helps choose the right time for switching on the braking rockets to kick the ship out of orbit and land in a pre-set area if the pilot lands the ship himself.

HEAT CONTROLLED

The capsule carries life-support supplies—food, air and water—to last for 10 days. The heating system can be adjusted in a temperature range between 53 and 77 degrees Fahrenheit. Even during the white heat of re-entry into the atmosphere, the system prevents cabin temperature from going above the set limit.

Novosti also said that while the ship's body protects the cosmonaut from radiation, he can use special protective chemical agents should the radiation become dangerous.

With television cameras focused on himself and his cabin, the cosmonaut lives in a veritable goldfish bowl when his capsule crosses the Soviet Union.

The Vostoks were put into orbit by powerful multi-stage rockets, fixed to send the capsule around the earth once every 89 minutes with an inclination to the Equator's orbital plane of about 65 degrees.

Novosti says that all six Vostoks were put into their orbits with high accuracy and their actual orbits were close to the calculated ones. With such an orbit, the capsule could stay up for as long as 10 days and even if the braking rocket failed, the ship would enter the denser layers of the atmosphere and with the help of the landing system would make a landing on earth.

Some People Drape Mantle Of Kennedy Around Wilson

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP)—Harold Wilson may not really see himself as Britain's answer to the late John F. Kennedy, but some people here seem determined to drape the mantle around him.

Before last fall's general election, Wilson, a keen admirer of the late president, spent his summer vacation studying Theodore White's celebrated analysis of Kennedy's 1960 electoral victory, The Making of the President.

Since then hardly a Wilson speech has been without the Kennedy quotes, and so striking was the eventual similarity between the two razor-edge elections that Wilson's secretary, Marcia Williams, said: "We hardly knew whether we were at Hyannisport or Los Angeles."

Now the process is taken a step further with two political reporters, Anthony Howard and Richard West, compiling what one critic describes as an "oft White" account of Wilson's own rise to power.

Inevitably, the book is called The Making of the Prime Minister.

FOCUS ON LEADERS

Although largely about the British parliamentary election in which the opposing leaders are only two of 630 contestants for power, the book is focused on Wilson and former prime minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home in what one reviewer calls "quasi - presidential terms not really applicable to Britain."

The parallel with White's book is pursued in the method of conveying an insider's eye-view of events, trailing the two leaders from committee-room to TV studio to hotel bedroom, describing almost every pipe - draw and every cup of coffee consumed along the way.

"What the prime minister had for breakfast is hardly history," comments Robert Carvel, political correspondent of The Evening Standard, who calls the book "the longest gossip-column ever assembled."

There are, however, some intriguing sidelights of the campaign and on the leadership struggle that nearly splintered the Conservative party in October.

There is a glimpse of the ebullient Randolph Churchill at a hotel bar dispatching a sheaf of telegrams to Butler all signed with different names for all urging Butler to stand down in favor of Quintin Hogg — who Howard and West say came remarkably close to grasping the leadership prize.

There are illuminating vignettes of the two leaders on the stump. Wilson, ever the professional, climbs the highest of his evening speeches for precisely 9:16 p.m. to catch the BBC television news-time. Home, the political ingenue, frittering away valuable campaign time in Northern Ireland — copper-bottomed Tory territory—and publicly accepting the gift of an Ulster tie, a move that Wilson gleefully calculated would lose his opponent thousands of Roman Catholic Irish votes in Liverpool and Clydeside.

The Tories did in fact lose four of their six Liverpool seats.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"Oh, dear, if only Herbert were here! I'd know exactly how to tail him how to fix it."

Car Accident Death Toll Up 10 Per Cent

OTTAWA (CP)—Motor vehicle traffic accidents killed 305 people in March this year, up 10.1 per cent from last year's March total of 277, the bureau of statistics reported today.

The March fatalities brought to 780 the number of traffic accident deaths in the first three months of this year, compared with 781 in the first quarter of 1964.

Property damage, limited to individual cases involving $100 or more, was estimated at $30,731,000 in the first quarter of 1965, compared with $23,853,000 in the same period of 1964.

FORECASTS COMPLETION

OTTAWA (CP) — The "loose ends" involved in working out the Canada Assistance Plan with the provinces will probably be tied up by the autumn John Munro, parliamentary secretary to Health Minister Judy LaMarsh, said Tuesday night. Mr. Munro was replying during a Commons adjournment debate to Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) who objected to Miss LaMarsh making speeches about the benefits that would flow from the plan without bringing in the required legislation.

Malaysians Offer Tour Of Brothels

JOHORE BAHRU, Southern Malaya (Reuter)—A free tour of the shady side of local night-life is being offered by the civic authorities here to anyone who is ready to testify in court about their experience.

The municipal council's main targets are illegal massage parlors—often a cover for brothels.

The council's acting president, Inche Samudin Bin Abdul Manas, told reporters: "All our legal proceedings against them have been dismissed in court for lack of evidence.

"In view of the unease by the general public against the existence of these parlors, we are now inviting the public to help.

"All they have to do is to come to us and say they are willing to assist in the campaign against the illegal parlors. We will pay their expenses to have a fine time there.

"The only condition is that they will have to give evidence in courts against the operations."

Teen-age Canada
Fine Creative Writing Now Being Produced

By JACK HUTTON

Creative writing — possibly the best some teachers can remember for generations — is being produced in Canadian classrooms at a rate that would amaze even the most prolific of 19th Century writers.

And after reading about 1,000 samples in one day I have one piece of advice for established writers in Canada and south of the border: LOOK OUT.

I was one of four judges asked to select the best essays from a mountain of mail sent to the Canadian National Exhibition's annual school essay contest. What I saw on May 26 still has me shaking.

The topic, you may remember, was a country you would like to visit. The four judges sat down about 9:15 a.m., and read steadily, with an hour's break for lunch, until 4:30 p.m.

I'll confess the thought of several hundred travelogues faced me a little in advance. What new, for instance, can you say about Paris? Would any one want to write about the frozen Canadian north? What's so intriguing about the South pole?

Don't feel badly, friends, if your essay wasn't selected. It was my first involvement with the competition but others said the quality was possibly higher than it had ever been before. You were up against stiff competition.

How can you describe Canada in a way that will capture the imagination of someone who has never seen our country? I found out shortly after 11 a.m., when I came across an essay written by Suzanne Grabriel of Edgfeld, Sask.

"The lush green carpets of pastureland; a towering church steeple rising remindingly out of the morning dawn with a crucifix mounted redeemingly on top; the billowing fields of golden grain being swallowed into the throat of a combine, the majestic mountains looming out of the misty fog;

"The elegant, streamlined sea freighters tooling their foghorns; the blinding bolt of lightning striking direily into all corners of the sky; the bold, resounding voice of thunder echoing overhead; the calm, gentle waves riding dreamily on the sleepy surface of the water . . ."

I looked at the age — 11. "Tell me," I asked a principal sitting beside me, "do you think an 11-year-old could have written this?"

He looked at the essay which continued in the same powerful technique of piling image on image. And he blinked. "No," he said. "As a matter of fact, I couldn't."

ELEGANT PROSE

But less than 20 minutes later we were shaking our heads over the compelling, elegant prose of Susan Sills, a Grade 8 student at Macdonald High School, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que. This was 14-year-old writing!

"I think perhaps it was the picture. It was a painting, and the supreme beauty of it radiated peace and forgiveness. A Buddhist priest stood meditating, and golden trees rose wraith - like behind him. The whole impression given was one of complete tranquility and acceptance; acceptance of what I do not know. One thought prevails though — that someday, somehow, Japan will be my destination."

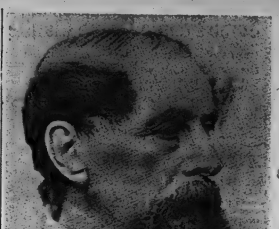
Then there was Hillery May, 16, of Saint Mary's Girls High School in Calgary who wrote about a city she had already visited.

"Paris . . . Paris, Paris, Paris. Paris. A name, not only ordinary name, but a name! French: oh certainly how very French it is, but in the sense that one relates gourmet foods and grand ballets to it. Let yourself drift with me to that very French and very exciting metropolis. Relax. Can you now see the color and figures taking their form and shape?"

I could. I could indeed.

The results, which haven't been announced while I'm writing this column, unfortunately fail to mention the many sparks of creativity and sensitive concern about other countries. There was the student who wanted to visit Vietnam so she would know the real futility and personal horror of war.

If I mentioned all the names that impressed me, the list would require every column of space on this page. But I can't help mentioning the mastery so many of you demonstrated with imagery, the many who successfully tried narrative technique.



It was intriguing to notice in almost every case that creative students didn't bloom alone. Whenever one essay stood out, there were others from the same school. You saw the mark of an inspired teacher like Sister Thomas in Edgefeld, Sask., or Laura Kinrade in Toronto forcing students to reach deeper into themselves.

But why not? Read the biography of almost any famous writer and you'll find that he or she was filling notebooks at the age of 12 or 13. They may have read like trash — but they were developing.

If you were one of the many to enter the contest from across the country, I salute your efforts. Consider this a humble honorary mention from one of your judges.

POSTSCRIPT: Suzanne placed first for Grades 7, 8 and 6; Susan was first for Grades 7 and 8; and Hillery was first among high school entries.

ELLIOTT MOTORS STAFF HOLDS EMPLOYEE - OWNER RELATIONS MEETING

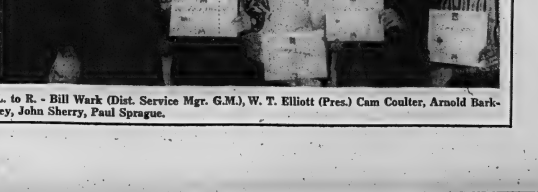
L. to R. - W. T. Elliott (Pres.), Ross Boyce, Fred Thibaudeau, Chas. Musclow, Orm. Reid, John McMechan, Don Walsh, Larry Brown.

On Saturday evening May 29th, the staff of Elliott Motors (Belleville) Ltd., 366 North Front Street, attended an employee owner relations meeting conducted in their new modern service department.

Bryce Phillip, Vice President, acted as chairman for the meeting, which got under way at 7.45 p.m. with the discussion of several items of business pertaining to the different departments in the dealership operation. He also noted the percentages of increase in business which has been evident since the company moved to the new location in north Belleville.

It was further pointed but that each person at Elliott's share a vital job in common — that of keeping their customers completely satisfied with their G.M. products and their dealership. This is what assures their customers loyalty and their loyalty is what assures Elliott Motors their success in business. The fact that they have so many regular customers returning to the dealership for normal service of the cars and trucks is proof Elliotts' are pleasing their customers with their professional workmanship and their reasonable prices. The excellent make-ready for delivery to owners of their new G.M. cars and trucks as well as all Goodwill used units is another strong reason for their high customer loyalty. With the continuation of their practices, plus working as a team for even greater owner satisfaction, Elliott Motors hope to make their future buyers and present owners the most cared-for customers in the world.

Mr. Bill Wark, District Service Manager for General Motors Products of Canada Limited, was also in attendance for the meeting and assisted Mr. Elliott, the President, of Elliott Motors, with the presentation of several Achievement Award Certificates to several members of the Service Department staff.



The awards are given each year to any G.M. trained parts or service personnel for writing one examination per month. The examination (based on knowledge of servicing and repairing G.M. cars and trucks) when written entitles each contestant to a membership in the General Motors Technician Guild.

The presentation with the Gold Seal Award for 100% correct answers were made to: Ross Boyce - 10 Year Achievement; Charlie Musclow - 10 Year Achievement; Fred Thibaudeau - 10 Year Achievement; Orm Reid - 8 Year Achievement; Larry Brown - 7 Year Achievement; John McMechan - 5 Year Achievement; and Don Walsh - 4 Year Achievement.

The Silver Seal Award for years of qualification were presented to Gerald Bentley - 8 Year Achievement; Cam Coulter - 5 Year Achievement; Paul Sprague - 4 Year Achievement; John Sherry - 2 Year Achievement; Arnold Barkley - 1 Year Achievement and Mike Sprague - 1 Year Achievement.

A special gift was presented for 10 years of qualifying to Ross Boyce and Cam Coulter for 5 years of qualifying for these Achievement Awards.

Following the showing of a Owner Relations film from General Motors the meeting adjourned with the serving of sandwiches, donuts and coffee through the courtesy of Dougs Food Service, Belleville.

L. to R. - Bill Wark (Dist. Service Mgr. G.M.), W. T. Elliott (Pres.) Cam Coulter, Arnold Barkley, John Sherry, Paul Sprague.

Davie Fulton Refuses to Give Answer

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Davie Fulton was back on the capital stage Wednesday, reluctant to answer questions about the Progressive Conservative leadership race for which he is generally considered a candidate.

The 49 - year - old British Columbia leader and former justice minister addressed a Conservative men's club but pulled up short when a score of reporters steered him into an impromptu press conference.

He maintained he isn't giving press conferences, mostly because he's questioned about his reported hopes of succeeding to the mantle of Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

After some coaxing he went before the reporters and turned aside a question about the party leadership by saying:

"The question of the leadership is one which I have given notice I am not prepared to discuss."

He was concentrating on winning re-election to the Commons in his former constituency of Kamloops. As B.C. leader, he was "urging the Tories in British Columbia to be ready for a general election this fall."

MADE FOR INITIATIVE

In his speech to the Confederation Club, Mr. Fulton called for federal government initiative to help solve municipal problems which have become national in scope.

It was no longer enough for Ottawa to say that the municipalities are creatures of the Provincial governments. They faced staggering tasks in water and air pollution control, urban centre redevelopment and the cost of new traffic facilities.

It was up to the three levels of government to work out long range solutions to municipal financing and possibly a system of municipal priorities on a national basis.

At the press conference, Mr. Fulton said he views as "improper" any proposals to restrict publicity of the names of accused persons before they are convicted. The laying of a charge was a matter of public record and it was, wrong in principle to suggest it be done in secret.

Rev. James Alan Munro Named New Presbyterian Moderator

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. James Alan Munro, 66, of Toronto was elected moderator of the 81st general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada Wednesday night.

The moderator's post by David P. Rowland of York Memorial Church, Toronto.

Rev. H. Lloyd Henderson of Portage La Prairie, Man., was also nominated but withdrew in favor of Dr. Munro.

Rev. Donald Campbell of Zion Church, Charlottown, nominated by the presbytery of Newfoundland, chose not to stand for nomination.

REV. J. A. MUNRO

Dr. Munro, a native of Winnipeg who has administered the home missions of the Presbyterian church for the last 16 years, was chosen for a one-year term.

Dr. Munro was padre overseas of the 47th Battery of the 5th Light Anti-Aircraft Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery, raised in Belleville, Cobourg and Napanee. He rose to the rank of colonel, was awarded the Military Cross and was mentioned in despatches.

Dr. Munro, elected by delegates to the general assembly, succeeds Rev. Hugh A. MacMillan of Toronto.

Called to the ministry while teaching in Coleville, Sask., he completed the theological course at Knox College, Toronto, in 1931 and became minister at Rosetown, Sask., after his ordination.

Six years later he was called to Cooke's Church, Chilliwack, B.C., and left that pastorate to enlist as a chaplain in the Canadian Army during the Second World War.

Dr. Munro served with the 5th Canadian Division during the Italian campaign, was mentioned in dispatches and awarded the Military Cross for "gallantry and devotion to duty" in the Liri Valley in 1944.

He held the rank of lieutenant colonel when he retired from the chaplaincy in 1946.

Dr. Munro then was appointed secretary of missions for Western Canada. In 1949 he was made secretary of home missions for the entire Presbyterian Church in Canada.

The new moderator, a freeman of the City of Winnipeg, received a degree of doctor of divinity from Knox College in 1955.

Last year, he submitted his resignation as secretary for home missions, effective August, 1965.

Dr. Munro was nominated for moderator by Rev. Donald Campbell of Zion Church, Charlottown, Nfld., and was elected by acclamation.

Pearson May Be Middleman At Commonwealth Parley To Be Held in London

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson may well find himself in the familiar position of international middleman at next month's Commonwealth conference in London.

As was the case last year over Rhodesia, his main role may be to try to keep the lid on sources of division and unpleasantness among other Commonwealth premiers.

It may mean another intervention in the Rhodesian dispute along with such questions as Indian - Pakistani border troubles and creation of a Commonwealth secretariat.

Informed sources say that, at this stage at least, Mr. Pearson has no dramatic proposals in his pocket for the closed - door conference which opens June 17.

They indicated rather that while the prime minister will have "a few ideas" to put forth on items coming before the week-long meeting, his main efforts more likely will be developed on the spot.

This was the situation last July when Mr. Pearson intervened in the argument between Britain and several African nations over the status of Southern Rhodesia. After months of able backroom diplomacy, he emerged with an agreed conference resolution on self - determination and racial equality.

ISSUE MOST DIFFICULT

With Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith in front of a unilateral declaration of independence still pending, sources say they expect this issue again will be the most difficult one on the coming agenda.

Some African countries are said to feel Britain should be putting much more effort to liquidate his internal policies toward the Negro majority. Sources said Canada does not share this view and is ready, if necessary, to intervene to head off a threatened split or a bad squabble on the subject.

Sources say there is little disagreement over the basic idea of establishing a Commonwealth secretariat to act as sort of a clearing house. But there is some question of how far Britain and the British and Australians reported less eager to provide it with broad terms of reference.

Informants said Canada is willing to support a "reasonable active" organization, leaving the way open for it to develop with experience.

Canada has no candidate for secretary - general of the new organization in attitude Arnold Smith, now under - secretary in the external affairs department. The government's attitude, it is understood, is that, while Canada would be happy to see Mr. Smith get the job, no attempt will be made to push his candidacy if the conference consensus seems to favor another person.

DISCOUNT REPORTS

Sources here discounted London reports Mr. Pearson is ready at this stage to act as personal mediator between Prime Minister Shastri of India and Ayub Khan of Pakistan in their continuing border quarrel.

But they do not rule out the possibility Mr. Pearson could develop in this regard in light of Shastri's visit to Ottawa immediately prior to the London conference.

Other topics likely to arise include Commonwealth trade, disarmament, Viet Nam, the Malaysian - Indonesian dispute, particularly a proposal backed by a group of British MPs for creation of a Commonwealth court.

Mr. Pearson will fly to London June 14 with Mr. Shastri. Plans for a possible side trip to Europe following the conference have been dropped and he will return to Ottawa June 27.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

WEDNESDAY, June 2, 1965

The Commons continued debate on government proposals to streamline House procedures.

The Conservatives served notice they will continue debate unless the government drops its debate-limiting proposals.

Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg South Centre) asked for inter - party negotiations for the proposals. "The worst form of closure."

Douglas Fisher (NDP—Port Arthur) suggested discussion of a permanent Speaker for the Commons should be ruled out of order.

The Senate gave final approval to the bill setting 75 as a retirement age for future Senators.

It was given Royal assent along with amendments to the National Housing act and a bill providing interim spending authority for the government until June 30.

Traffic Officer Beats Charge Of Speeding

SARNIA (CP) — Everything turned out all right for a 24-year - old Sarnia police constable, but it was a policeman's nightmare for a time.

Const. Roland Phibbs, whose job is catching speeders, was charged April 24 with speeding by a man he had just stopped for the same offence.

Magistrate W. S. Pearson dismissed the charge Wednesday when Kenneth Capes, 37, of Sarnia, testified he couldn't recognize Phibbs as driver of the cruiser.

Capes said he received a ticket for driving 44 miles-an-hour in a 30-mile zone from two officers in a police cruiser.

He left his own car and sat in the back seat of the police car to receive his ticket, when the driver of the cruiser took after another car.

While the officers returned Capes to his own car, Capes said he looked at the speedometer and noticed that the police car was travelling at 65 miles an hour.

Capes said he asked the officer why he was travelling that fast.

Capes said the policeman replied: "I guess we're in a hurry. Capes, since you were speeding."

Capes then went to the police station, learned the name of the officer and charged Const. Phibbs with speeding.

He said Wednesday he could not identity either of the constables who were in the cruiser at the time.

Motion for dismissal was granted after the magistrate explained to Capes that unless he could call some evidence other than the officer's name from the police station, he would have to dismiss the charge.

Commitments Not Extended Says Pearson

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said Wednesday Defence Minister Hellyer has committed the government only to consider possible co-operation with the allies to strengthen the mobility of North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces.

Questioned in the Commons by New Democrat Leader Douglas on reports that Canada had said in Paris Canada had committed additional mobile forces to NATO, the prime minister produced a transcript of the defence minister's statement which made no new armpower commitments.

Mr. Hellyer said in his statement the prime minister told the House, that Canada supports suggestions for greater mobility permanent mobility among NATO forces and that this concept is in keeping with Canada's existing military planning and policy. On this basis, Canada was ready to consider further co-operation with other NATO members to improve mobility.

Mr. Pearson added that Mr. Hellyer would make a statement to the House today on the Paris meeting of NATO defence ministers.

Britain Cuts Bank Rate

LONDON (AP)—The Bank of England rate, which sets the pace for interest charges in the United Kingdom, was cut today from seven per cent to six per cent.

The seven-per-cent rate had been in effect since Nov. 23 when the Labor government jumped it to that level from five per cent in a move to bolster the pound sterling by encouraging the investment of foreign funds in Britain.

However, the high rate had damped down borrowing for business and industry, mortgages, and the government had been anxious to reduce the high rate as soon as possible.

JUDGE HONORED

TORONTO (CP)—An Ontario Supreme Court judge has been named a Knight Commander of the Order of Saint Gregory the Great by Pope Paul. Mr. Justice W. D. Roach receives the honor on the occasion of his retirement this year after 27 years on the bench.

Presbyterians, United Church Holding Talks

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Free Press says representatives of the United Church of Canada and the Presbyterian Church have been meeting in secret sessions in Toronto in six months in an attempt to lead to closer affinity between the two bodies.

It says the talks, involving men from the two churches were revealed following an announcement this week that Principles of Union had been agreed upon by committees representing the Anglican and United Churches.

'Specialized Relationship'

He Thought He Had Right To Sign 'Wac' Bennett's Name

VANCOUVER (CP) — Public relations man Al Williamson, charged with forgery in connection with the now famous "Dear en Ital" letter, is to continue testimony in his own defence today before an assize court.

Wednesday, the 69 - year - old former newspaper man told of behind - scenes political activity on behalf of the Social Credit party in British Columbia.

While Mr. Justice F. C. Munroe and the 12-man jury listened in apparent fascination, he painted a self-portrait of a political jack-of-all-trades who had dealing with men in high places, including British Columbia Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

Defence Counsel Lloyd Mc-Kenzie said before calling Williamson to the stand it was important the jury "understand his highly-specialized relationship with the premier of the province and his highly-specialized relationship with Einar Gunderson." Gunderson is a former finance minister and close advisor to the premier who holds positions in several government entities.

Williamson is charged with writing a letter over the forged signature of the premier and sending it to Hal Dornan, an aide to Prime Minister Pearson. It purported to plead the case of American millionaire Harry Stonehill, then seeking landed - immigrant status in Canada which he has since been denied. Stonehill has left Canada.

The public relations man is also charged with seeking to have Dornan deal with the letter as though it were genuine.

Williamson has pleaded not guilty to both counts. He has said the letter resulted from the urging of both Gunderson and Dornan.

HAD AUTHORITY

McKenzie said the defence is that Williamson "had an honest belief that he was authorized to write the letter" because of his long - established relationship with the premier and Gunder son for whom he had done confidential work for many years.

Earlier RCMP Staff Sergeant Donald Brown, a handwriting expert testifying for the Crown, used displays to demonstrate his findings that:

The signature on the letter to Dornan was not that of the premier and appeared to have been drawn from a model.

He said that after a study of handwriting he could not either identify or eliminate Williamson as the man who executed the signature. But the letter had been written on an electric typewriter taken from Williamson's office.

Williamson said that after Mr. Bennett came to power an arrangement was agreed upon by which he would do public relations work for the government-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway and confidential political work for both the premier and Mr. Gunderson.

He said he wrote speeches for them both. He wrote letters to the editor for them, letters to newspaper publishers and reports on political activity and handled political campaigns.

He said he would confer with Gunderson about political matters before talking to the premier. But political funds were never discussed with the premier although at Gunderson's suggestion he collected political contributions from selected individuals and firms for the party.

De Gaulle Will Likely Reject U. S. Proposal on Strategic Nuclear Planning

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The United States proposal to broaden strategic nuclear planning within the North Atlantic Alliance, particularly through the use of more "hot lines," may blunt the complaint of smaller countries that the U.S. doesn't consult with them often enough on issues that could involve the alliance in war.

Washington now has hot lines with Ottawa and London and under the U.S. offer, to be explored in detail by the NATO council, such leader-to-leader telephone lines might be extended to Paris, Bonn and possibly Rome. This could largely rule out any American excuse that in an emergency situation, the U.S. sometimes has to act without fully consulting its allies, as in Cuba in 1962.

But, by themselves, the hot lines would add nothing to NATO authority over the employment of the U.S. strategic nuclear force which is 95 per cent of the free world's nuclear power.

What French President de Gaulle has demanded in the past and what he undoubtedly still wants is a French finger on the U.S. nuclear trigger. In 1958, de Gaulle suggested there should be a three-country nuclear directorate, including France, which not only could plan employment of nuclear forces—the long-range strategic planning—but also have some authority in saying when nuclear bombs are to be dropped.

The U.S. has always maintained it cannot, under its laws, yield to anyone else the control over its nuclear warheads. The American offer, now under NATO examination, does not change that U.S. position. Indeed, as NATO continues its examination, it may find the U.S. offer to form a club to deal with nuclear strategy may have more to do, with long-range planning than with day-to-day nuclear operations.

Thus a number of seasoned observers have already concluded that de Gaulle eventually will reject the U.S. offer or make demands for further concessions that Washington may find necessary to resist.

The view in high British quarters is that de Gaulle is simply seeking to gain all the advantages of the alliance without meeting any of its obligations. Such a policy is bound to lead to demands for revision of the existing pact when it comes up for reconsideration in 1969.

But the fact that the U.S. had to make its offer—received with enthusiasm in Bonn where the Germans are seeking at least some association with nuclear strategy—is an acknowledgement that the U.S. diplomatic position in Europe needs bolstering. In 1958, the U.S. easily rejected the de Gaulle demand; now there is a move at least to meet him half-way.

The U.S. is well aware of the grumbling in Europe over U.S. activity in the Caribbean and the Far East. Even Britain, which upholds U.S. operations in South Viet Nam, now worries that American bombing north of the 17th parallel could bring a direct conflict with Russia if the bombs happen to hit Soviet anti - aircraft missile bases around Hanoi.

The U.S. hopes friends and the offering of a nuclear strategy club may be more of a concession in that direction than in accepting more fingers on the American nuclear trigger.

Accused Admits Killing Girl Says Witness

TORONTO (CP)—A 27-year-old Toronto man, being tried here on a charge of manslaughter, admitted to a companion that he had killed a girl early New Year's Day when he was awakened by noises at his kitchen window, an Ontario Supreme Court jury was told Wednesday.

Jean Paul Barchet, 19, who was staying in the apartment of the accused, John James Wright, said Wright told him that he grabbed somebody while investigating the noises.

Barchet said Wright told him that when he discovered the person was a girl, he pulled her inside the apartment to prevent her, but she had a spasm and died.

Police identified the victim as Eileen Patton, alias Cecile Lavergne. Pathologist Hans Sepp said the woman died of asphyxiation of her stomach contents and there was evidence of manual strangulation.

Barchet said he had been out New Year's Eve with his girl friend, Wright allegedly told him about the girl when Barchet returned to the apartment about 6 a.m. He was shown where her body had been placed on a rooftop outside the kitchen window, he said.

Wright said the girl had been in the apartment earlier in the night and had planned to return.

A detective testified Tuesday that Mrs. Patton was a known prostitute and drug addict.

Equality of French, English Culture Must Be Guaranteed

-- Fulton

TORONTO (CP) — The Progressive Conservative party can improve its position in Quebec if it accepts the fact that Canada's constitution guarantees the equality of French and English culture, E. Davis Fulton said Wednesday night.

Mr. Fulton was addressing the York Mills Progressive Conservative Association after flying here from Quebec. He carefully avoided comment on his relationship with Progressive Conservative Leader John Diefenbaker, and denied he was in Toronto to campaign for the leadership of the Conservative party.

Tonight he will address a closed meeting of the Toronto Progressive Conservative Businessmen's Association, and will spend the rest of his three-day stay in Toronto holding private meetings with friends and party officials.

He said the Conservative party must show recognition of the bilingual and bicultural nature of Canada if it is to recapture the confidence of Quebec. Once this confidence is established, he said, "I think we can get our fair share of representation from Quebec."

"It can be done now," he said. "It is being done to show that despite differences and misunderstandings, the basic Conservative policy is not one of hostility to Quebec."

DEFENDS FORMULA

Mr. Fulton, who had said in Quebec that the proposed formula for amending Canada's constitution should not be imposed if Quebec objects to it, defended the formula Wednesday night.

He said it was essentially the same formula as he had proposed in 1961.

The formula had been criticized as too rigid, he noted. "This criticism is, in effect, a criticism of the constitution. They say it is too rigid. It is so precisely because our constitution is a rigid constitution."

The federal-provincial conference that drafted the formula did not try to work out a new process of amendment, he said. Instead it tried to codify the method by which amendments were already made.

Mr. Fulton called for a federal - provincial conference on economic goals. He said such a conference would be the best way to establish the priorities of six economic goals cited by Finance Minister Walter Gordon.

No Cash --So Built Own Auto!

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—Back in 1907, when there were only six automobiles here, 22-year - old Herbert Hambrecht wanted one but lacked the money. He decided to build his own.

The result was a homemade vehicle that was similar to the 1903 Cadillac, with two speeds forward and a reverse gear that also acted as a brake. It was chain-driven by a rear-mounted engine with water and gas tanks at the front.

Mr. Hambrecht, now 80, recalls that at first it wouldn't climb a hill he wanted to climb but that this was remedied by the installation of a larger rear sprocket.

A skilled machinist, Mr. Hambrecht was soon known to auto-makers and in 1909 began working for McLaughlin-Buick in Oshawa, Ont. He was later hired as chief engineer for Kenbody Motor Car Co., Preston, Ont., which turned out 175 autos designed by Mr. Hambrecht before it folded.

He quit the auto business in 1923 and today takes more interest in motor boats. But he has a reminder of the old days — a model he made 12 years ago of the 1907 car complete with movable parts, lamps and radiator filling.

BRIDGE TO BOOST BUSINESS — A bridge under construction across the mile-wide St. Lawrence River two miles west of Trois-Rivieres, Que., is expected to boost business in the area when it is completed in 1967. One wholesaler who currently makes five weekly deliveries across the river, by ferry says he intends to make 35 trips a week when the bridge is completed. An asbestos producer located on the south shore expects to market 80 per cent of his produce across the river compared with the 20 per cent at present. The four-lane bridge will carry 5,000 cars an hour over its 10,020-foot length. (CP Photo)

Bridge Over St. Lawrence Aid to Economic Development Of Stable Three Rivers Area

By GERARD McNEIL

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP)—A wholesaler in Nicolet who now makes five deliveries here weekly plans to make 35 once a major bridge across the mile-wide St. Lawrence River is completed in 1967.

An asbestos producer, also on the south shore, who now markets less than 20 per cent of his produce through this port, plans to step it up to 80 per cent because of the four-lane bridge two miles west of Trois-Rivieres.

"With the ferries, they never knew their trucks were going to get back," says Laurent Paradis, secretary of the Corporation du Pont de Trois-Rivieres.

"The river was always a barrier to economic development of both sides."

The ferries Radisson and Laviolette can handle about 60 cars on each half-hour crossing, but big trailer-tractors often take up most of the space and the ferries are hopelessly swamped at rush hours and in summer.

The ferries made $1,500,000 last year and Mr. Paradis says confidently the corporation expects 2½ times the traffic on the four-lane, 10,020-foot bridge.

5,000 CARS HOURLY

It will be the only bridge between Montreal and Quebec City and estimates are it will carry 5,000 cars an hour. Many will be going to and from the steel mill that will go into operation in 1969 at Becancour, eight miles east.

Mr. Paradis believes the decision to build the bridge was a factor that helped bring the $225,000,000 steel mill to the district. The two projects are expected to do wonders for a city that has been "rather stable" in recent years.

Meanwhile, the Quebec government also is building an auto-route along the north shore from Montreal that TriDuvians hope will reach here in time for the world's fair in Montreal.

The present north shore highway is as pokey and inadequate as the ferry service. Besides the lineups at the ferry dock, service now is slowed by the fact that the Radisson and Laviolette often must hold off in midstream to allow taxkers, freighters and lakes barges to plow past at 11 knots.

FERRIES BARRED

Ask the crew where the bridge is and they'll point glumly to the pillars two miles west of St. Angele on the south side. They hope the ferry service might be moved to Becancour, running to the Trois-Rivieres suburb of Cap-de-la-Madeleine.

It is a forlorn hope. The legislative bill that allowed construction of the bridge stipulated that no ferry service may operate within 25 miles on either side.

The day the bridge is completed, the corporation will buy and dispose of the ferries. About 400 men will work on the bridge this summer and work is slightly ahead of schedule.

A group headed by the late Francois Nobert began pushing the project in 1949 but although the member for Trois-Rivieres was no less a man than Premier Maurice Duplessis, it was hard going.

The corporation raised $30,000 through public subscription for preliminary studies and gradually sold the idea. Even the late premier was coming around before his death in 1959.

18TH CUB AND SCOUT AUXILIARY (Park Dale)

The May auxiliary meeting was held at the home of Betty England when eight members were present. Thanks was expressed to the mothers who so kindly donated the cakes for the refreshment booth at the Variety Night.

Plans are being made for the Cub camp June 26 and 27th. and those in charge would appreciate volunteers from the Cub mothers to display their culinary art.

The final meeting will be a social evening in June for the ladies and their husbands at the new home of a former member, Muriel Thompson.

The meeting was concluded with the hostess serving lunch.

Unknown Tribe Discovered in New Guinea

PORT MORESBY, New Guinea (AP)—A tribe of between 800 and 1,500 New Guinea people has been discovered in a remote corner of New Guinea's Sepik district. The tribe was sighted from a helicopter by Assistant District Officer James Wearne.

In Port Moresby, the acting director of district administration, T. Aicheson, said the government had been aware there were some people living in the area, but had no idea they were in such numbers. Patrols often skirted the area, he said, but never had been able to penetrate and make contact.

Aicheson said a patrol would be sent as soon ar possible to contact the tribe. He said he expected the people would be similar to Telefomin tribes people, who have attacked several government patrols.

The Bay of Quinte Country Club garbed in her spring best with lush greens and fairways and a brand new clubhouse look proudly plays host to her first Ontario Golf Association tournament on Friday, June 10th.

It is the Seventh Annual Best Ball Championship for the Oshkiah Trophy, a stroke play competition of 18 holes, played in four ball matches—the better ball of each team (two) to count.

The tournament will be arranged, the draw made, and held under the general supervision of officials of the Ontario Golf Association. T. A. Carruthers, of Quinte, will be the OGA director here in charge.

Course superintendent and club pro George Raines and his associates are leaving nothing undone to have the course in excellent shape.

The excellent playing conditions in the club's first venture into the realm of "pros and top flight amateurs" at the inaugural "Festival of Golf" last year brought warm praise from many top golfers playing the course for the first time.

It is highly possible that the fine comments were a factor in the selection of the course by the OGA for the 1965 Best Ball Championship.

Entries will be accepted in pairs from players (handicap limit 8) who are members of the OGA or members of member clubs of any recognized golf associations.

The entries must be in pairs but not necessarily of the same club.

Entry fee for the championship is $10.00 ($5.00 each competitor) and must be received at the OGA office by noon Monday, June 7th. Only entries that are signed and included full name, home address, name of golf club and handicap will be accepted. The entry will be limited.

To the pair returning the lowest gross score for the 18 holes, goes the handsome Oshkiah Trophy, replicas and other awards. In the event of a tie for first place a sudden death playoff will take place immediately.

There are also prizes for the pairs returning the second, third and fourth low gross scores. All ties at 18 holes will be decided on the scores for the best 17 holes. If the tie is not broken, then the best 16 holes and so on retrogressively.

As was noted before all entries must reach the office of the Ontario Golf Association, Suite 612, 1123 Bay Street, Toronto, by June 7th. There isn't much time left.

Royal Canadian Golf Association rules will govern all play with Rules 37-5 and 37-7 strictly enforced. All entries are subject to the approval of the Tournament Committee which reserves the right to amend the program before or during the championship if considered advisable.

Incidentally golf cars will not be allowed. A practice round has not been arranged.

R. M. Lowry, Toronto, the tournament chairman, says an OGA handicap-membership card with handicap certified within 30 days of the tournament must be presented before starting. This rule will be strictly enforced.

No caddies will be available at the course, an official said today.

"A good entry is expected for the tournament," he said, "with likely the maximum field being here. OGA officials will be here the Thursday night previous for a course inspection and to make final arrangements."

An estimated eight "pairs" from the Bay of Quinte host clubs are expected to enter. It is understood the host clubs are limited to ten double entries under tournament regulations.

A big gallery from the immediate and distant golf districts is expected to be on hand to see a lot of the province's top golfers in action.

American Athletic Pot Boils

NEW YORK (AP)—A spokesman for the U.S. Amateur Athletic Union said Wednesday that if the National Collegiate Athletic Association boycotts the AAU national track and field championships at San Diego, Calif., June 26-27, the AAU will "go it alone" in the U.S. meet with the Soviet Union in Kiev July 31.

The spokesman was referring to the warning Tuesday from Everett D. Barnes, president of the NCAA, that if college athletes compete in the AAU championships, their institutions will violate the NCAA bylaws and face penalties.

The first two finishers in each event in the AAU championships will be named as the U.S. team to oppose the Soviet Union.

"Actually, we could field a strong team even without the college fellows," the AAU spokesman said. "We hope they will be with us. But the meet is scheduled, and the international rules are clear. If a boy doesn't earn the right in San Diego, he just can't make the team."

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros have drawn 734,139 fans to the $31,650,000 Harris County domed stadium in 27 home baseball games this year. This is 8,366 more than the number who saw all home games last year in outdoor Colt Stadium.

'Hot' Drysdale Cuffs Cards For 9th

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Don Drysdale's dew point is higher than his winning percentage but not much higher.

St. Louis humidity wilted the Los Angeles Dodgers' premier right-hander after six innings Wednesday night but didn't stop him from becoming the winningest pitcher in the majors as the National League leaders cuffed the Cardinals 4-1.

DON DRYSDALE

Reliever Ron Perranoski nailed Down Drysdale's ninth victory in 12 decisions with a scoreless three-inning relief after the Dodgers' starter tired in 79 per cent humidity at Busch Stadium. The thermometer, which launched a 14 - game road trip for the Dodgers, boosted their league lead to four games-the biggest margin they've had this season.

Cincimatti Reds moved into second place, three percentage points ahead of San Francisco Giants, by trampling Houston Astros 5-2 in a game called after six innings because of rain. The rest of the schedule New York at Chicago, San Francisco at Milwaukee and Philadelphia at Pittsburghwas washed out.

ALLOWS FIVE HITS

Drysdale allowed five of the nine St. Louis hits, picking up his third straight victory and 150th since he broke in with the then-Brooklyn Dodgers in 1956. His nine victories this season top the Cardinals' Bob Gibson and Cincinnati's Sammy Ellis, the winner Wednesday night against Houston, by one.

Wally Moon and John Roseboro paced the Los Angeles attack with their first homers of the season and Moon drove in another run with a single. Maury Wills stole two bases, bringing his league - leading total to 32.

Tommy Harper's three - run double and homers by Gordy Coleman and Johnny Edwards gave Ellis all the help he needed in the rain-shortened Astros-Reds game.

The Astros, playing without injured regulars Jim Wynn, Leo Maye and Eddie Kasko, clipped Ellis, 8-2, for two runs in the fourth. The five runs scored on Pete Rose's throwing error, the other on Bob Lillis' single.

Pointers Shade Daubers

Playing their third consecutive extra-inning contest, the young Point Anne Downtowners squeaked past Tar-Hear Daubers 9-8 in eight innings in Commercial softball play at the Point last night.

Daubers bunched their runs, getting four in the fourth, three in the seventh and one in the eighth. The Downtowners never got more than two per inning but a single in the bottom of the seventh tied it 7-7 and their pair in the eighth pulled out the win.

Hits by Horwood and G. Maher set up the winning play. The next man went down swinging but the catcher had to throw to first for the out and the tying run scored. A wild return peg to the plate netted the winner on the same play.

The Cementmen have arranged to postpone two scheduled games next Tuesday and Wednesday, due to players writing high school examinations. They will be re-scheduled as soon as possible.

Vern Whalen was the winning pitcher, in relief of D. Browning in the fourth frame. They gave up six hits.

B. Jeffery allowed 12 hits while hurling the route for Tar-Hear.

G. Maher collected a double and three singles. M. Cook a home run and double while Pt. Anne. V. Whalen, R. Summers, P. Everett, T. MacDonald, J. Horwood and D. Maher shared the other safeties.

H. Pointer and D. Moore got Tar-Hear doubles while B. Dugan, G. Donaldson, M. Hamlin and R. Pointer added singles.

Sea Bird Not Entered

Favor Meadow Court For Irish

By CARL MOLLINS

LONDON (CP)—The trainer and jockey of Max Bell's Meadow Court are suffering from the second-guessing pangs that come naturally to runners-up.

Shrewd Irish strategist Paddy Prendergast and top-flight English rider Lester Pigott permitted themselves to muse briefly after Wednesday's Epsom Derby that, just maybe, different tactics might have beaten Sea Bird II.

But then, with the fresh memory of Sea Bird's apparently effortless stretch run past Meadow Court, the horsemen shrugged regrets and concluded that their colt would never beat the French star over the 1½-mile Derby distance unless Meadow Court should sprout wings.

Prendergast was a little critical of himself after Sea Bird had sped past Meadow Court to win the 186th classic for three-year-olds by two lengths without a reminder from winning jockey Pat Eddery's whip.

"Perhaps I shouldn't have tried down Lester with waiting orders," said Prendergast, referring to the fact that Meadow Court was kicked into high gear well into the stretch.

"If I hadn't been instructed to ride a waiting race, I might have gone closer," said Pigott, 30, three times a Derby winner. "But I'm sure I couldn't have beaten him."

And Prendergast, who has placed horses in five of the last six Derbys but has never won it, concluded that Jean Tarsitring's Sea Bird is a fine animal that would beat Meadow Court at any distance up to a dozen furlongs.

As if to confirm that the Meadow Court team's worry about tactics was idle regret, the rider of third-place I Say, Roger Poincelet, chimed in with the thought that perhaps he should have waited longer to open up for the wire. I Say headed the 22-horse field briefly before Meadow Court and Sea Bird began their final sprints.

As for owner Bell, the Calgary newspaper publisher was pleased enough to be the first Canadian to place a horse in the Epsom Derby.

"That French colt is a great horse," Bell said. "It was all we got as close to him as we did."

He noted that Sea Bird won't be around when Meadow Court contests the Irish Derby June 26, "for we might have a better chance then."

The bookies agreed and made Meadow Court a 2-to-1 favorite to win the Irish event when they opened the book Wednesday night.

Parsons Edged By Batawa 2-1

Parsons Cleaners, the Belleville entry in the Kingston and District Soccer League, saw their record evened at one and one last night by dropping a 2-1 decision to Batawa.

Belleville makes its first home start on Saturday night, against Kingston's Flying Dutchmen. Game time is 6.30, at Zwicker's Island.

The clubs played tight defensive ball through a scoreless first half at Batawa last night, although Bob Rutherford of Parsons and Cazzar of Batawa missed good close-in scoring opportunities.

Play flashed from one goalmouth to the other as the second half opened and after about five minutes of play, Batawa took a 1-0 lead. Jones Cameron caught the Parson defences napping and headed home a neat goal.

Minutes later it was a 2-0 contest when John Colambos broke through on the left wing and sunk a hard, close-in drive.

Parson's battled back and pressed Batawa, twice having goals disallowed for offsides, before finally netting one that counted.

Chuck Eddy bounced a shot off the Batawa goalkeeper's front wing. Graham Geldart's rebound shot hit the goalie but Bob Rutherford pounced on the loose ball and put it home for the 2-1 score.

Belleville continued to press for the equalizer but failed to make it, despite Alan Brown hitting the crossbar, Rutherford a goalpost and having another goal called back for offside.

HORSES KILLED

PADUCAH, Ky. (AP)—Nine horses were killed in a fire Wednesday at Carson Park, a former fairground now used for horse shows and stabling. The horses, owned by individuals, were housed in a shed-type stall west of the main barn. Albert Childress, trainer for the Carson Park Riding Club, estimated the horses were worth about $350 each.

Minor Softball Results

Belleville Minor Softball games were played in the Squirt division's East and West Hill sections last night.

On the West Hill, the Cubs clawed Stevenson's Mustangs to the tune of 10-1.

On the East Hill, Redskins scalped Stephen Licence. Dodgers 17-13, Kiddies' Korner Astros dumped the Shopping Plaza Rams 27-7 and Browns defeated Vaughan's Packers 17-5.

Changes in the squirt division schedule, on the West Hill, were announced.

On June 9, Cubs and Cardinals will play at Queen Mary field while the Steelers and Lions game will meet at King George. The same switch will also be made when these teams play again on July 23.

Stirling Nips Bloomfield

A Four-Bagger Fiesta

PICTON (Special) — Stirling outscored Bloomfield 5-4 in a hard-fought game of 8 innings here last night, preventing the losers from taking over undisputed possession of first place in the Belleville and District Softball.

The game was one of the loop's best this season and moved Stirling into a three-way tie for third place.

Tonight, Trudeau Motors play host to Trenton at the Belleville Fairgrounds, at 8:00, while Ellis Juniors travel to Stirling for an 8:15 tilt.

Bloomfield took a 3-0 lead early last night, scoring one in the first on singles by MacDonald, Forester and Weese. They plated a pair in the second on the first two of a home run trio in the game. DeMille and Lockwood hit the blasts.

Stirling took the lead with four in the top of the sixth. Noble led off with a homer, Smith walked and Hagerman singled. Donohoe crashed a three-run homer and put his club ahead 4-3.

That lead was short-lived. Guernsey clouted a solo homer for the homestars in the bottom of the frame.

Stirling netted the winning run on a final homer in the eighth, this one by Bolte, to right field.

The game was errorless although outfielders misjudged a couple of the home run blasts.

Wayne Shaw pitched the victory, scattering 10 hits, striking out nine and walking but one.

Ken DeMille allowed just five hits in a losing cause, striking out 11 batters and passing a pair.

Ron Weese had a four-for-four hit for Bloomfield, with a double and three singles, while Keith MacDonald had two base knocks. Homers by Ken DeMille, Jim Guernsey and Dave Lockwood, and Frank Forester's single, completed the attack.

Bob Donohoe, Bolte and Noble had the Stirling homers, Clair Hagerman and Wayne Shaw adding singles.

Howard Sparks Senators' Twin Wins

6 Hits, Two Homers

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

A National League veteran turned American League rookie, Frank Howard, continued his steady batting climb Wednesday night as Washington Senators swept their fifth doubleheader of the season, most in the majors, by mauling Los Angeles Angels 13-0 and 9-1.

The genial giant collected six hits in 10 at-bats, including two homers, and knocked in five runs as the Senators slipped ahead of New York Yankees into eighth place in the league.

His performance gave Howard the league lead in runs batted in with 39, a tie for the lead in home runs with 10 and a tie for the lead in hits with 57. He also raised his average 17 points to .302, putting him among the league's top ten hitters.

The sluggers' best year in the majors so far was in 1962 when he batted .296, slammed 31 homers and drove in 119 runs. At his present rate, he should surpass that record. He certainly should finish ahead of his 1964 performance of .226, 24 homers and 69 RBI.

TWINS DEFEAT SOX

In other league games, Minnesota Twins defeated Boston Red Sox 6-3 and Baltimore Orioles trimmed Kansas City Athletics 6-4. Rain washed out Detroit at New York and Chicago at Cleveland.

Howard slammed two homers and a double for four RBI in the first game while Joe Cunningham drove in five runs with three hits, including a homer, all in support of Phil Ortega's five-hitter.

Howard's three singles in the nightcap increased his average against the Angels to .458 in six games. Ken McMullen slammed a two-run homer in the first inning and added two singles as Bennie Daniels and Ron Kline combined for a six-hitter.

Jim Perry turned in a brilliant relief sing for Minnesota, relieving starter Jim Grant with two on and one out in the second inning and allowing only one Boston baserunner, on an error, until Lenny Green singled with two out in the seventh. The Twins' Harmon Killebrew and Jimmie Hall each smashed a two-run homer.

Baltimore overcame a 3-0 Kansas City lead on Curt Blefary's two-run double and a two-run homer by Norm Siebern in the sixth inning. Dick Hall pitched the final four innings for the Orioles, limiting the Athletics to two hits, one of them Dick Green's ninth - inning homer.

Wild Pitch Defeats Crackers

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) A wild pitch by Atlanta Crackers' reliever Dave Ellers let Pancho Herrera lumber home with the winning run Wednesday night as Columbus Jets came from behind in the last of the ninth for a 7-6 International League win.

The Jets, downed 6-5, routed second Cracker pitcher Chi Chi Olivo on successive singles by George Spriggs, Herrera and Purnal Goldy, the latter driving in the tying run.

Ellers relieved Olivo and purposely passed Bob Perry, whose two doubles and a single figured in three earlier scoring innings. The wild fling came with Jim Price up and still none out.

Sam Jones gained the victory although in his one inning of work he allowed Atlanta to break a 5-5 tie when he threw wide of the plate on Ed Sadowski's sycamore bunt, allowing Adrian Garrett to score.

Atlanta went in front 2-0 in the first inning on home runs by Tommy Aaron and Jim Mc-Knight and led 5-3 when they chased Columbus starter Frank Bork in the fifth.

Steve Blass held the Crackers with eight strikeouts in 3 2-3 scoreless innings while the Jets caught up with two runs in the fifth and one in the eighth the latter when catcher Sadowski dropped a perfect throw from the outfielder on Johnny Powers' fly.

BESTOWS POWER

PARIS (Reuters) — The French government plans to give the organizers of the 1968 Winter Olympic Games in Grenoble power to take over land or buildings without notice in order to speed up work for the games. The National Assembly Wednesday adopted a government bill aimed at speeding up work on installations for the Winter Olympics. The French government provided 5,000,000 francs ($1,100,000) last year towards the Games and will provide a similar amount annually for the next three years.

INCREASING PRECISION ON SHORT SHOTS

Accuracy is the prime goal on short shots to the green. The good golfer does everything he can to keep his swing simple on such shots so that he can expect straight shots.

In the illustrations I am demonstrating how to execute a full shot with the pitching wedge. I would like you to pay special attention to my left heel.

You will note that this heel remains firmly planted throughout the swing, though my legs move and my hips and shoulders tilt and turn.

I feel that by keeping this heel on the ground, I eliminate one more moving part from my over-all swing machinery. This decreases the chances for error and increases chances that my clubhead will return to the ball squarely, facing in the same direction it was in at address.

It may be necessary for some golfers to raise their left heel on longer shots in order to make a full backswing, but since a long backswing is not necessary — or even desirable — on short shots, I think everyone will get better accuracy by keeping the left heel firmly planted throughout.

Belvedere Clubbed By Warners

Stewart Warner snapped out of a four-game losing streak in smashing style at Prince Charles School last night, clubbing Belvedere Hotel 14-3 in Commercial League softball.

The winners spotted Belvedere two in the top of the first but came in front 4-2 in their half of the frame and led 9-3 after three heats.

Harry Powers fired four - hit ball on the Stewart Warner hilltop over the distance, clipping seven on third strikes. He did not walk a man.

J. King went the route for Belvedere, allowing 11 hits, issuing five and walking a pair. He recovered and the loss of shortstop W. Brown after he was ejected for disputing a call in the third inning, hurt the losers' cause. They completed the game with eight players.

Chuck Rowbotham rapped three singles, John Trendell two bagsides and Floyd Crawford a double and single to spark the winners' attack. Hytie Bryant added a double, Rod Turner, Bob Benn and Gary Wood a single each.

J. Lucas hit a two-bagger. G. Percy, K. McLeod and J. Hughes a single apiece for the Hotelmen.

35 Face Parr'er Saturday

Jim Clark, Surtees In Running For '200'

BOWMANVILLE, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian Racing Drivers Association today announced a field of 35 drivers, including world champions John Surtees and Jim Clark, will be in the running for $70,700 prize money in the Players' 200 Saturday, a 200 - mile race for production sports and touring cars.

Surtees, the British driver who captured the 1964 world champion s hip, will drive a Chevrolet-powered Lola. Clark, the Scottish sheep-farmer who won the 500-mile Memorial Day race at Indianapolis Monday, has a Lotus 30. Clark was 1963 world champion.

New Zealander Bruce McLaren, who holds both the lap and distance records at nearby Mosport Park, will be making his second straight victory bid on the 7.6-mile circuit in an Oldsmobile-powered car of his own design.

McLaren won the Player's 200 last year, setting the 100-mile record of two hours seven minutes, 42.2 seconds in a Cooper. Last September he set the 100 - mile record of one minute, 30.5 seconds in an Olds-powered car in the Canadian Grand Prix.

This time the New Zealander will have one of the only two cars in the race with automatic transmission. The other will be driven by Jim Hall, Midland, Texas, millionaire whose Chevrolet-powered Chaparral won the 12-hour race at Sebering, Fla., this spring. Hall has been a competitor in international races at Mosport since the track opened four years ago.

The Dutch teams of Ben Pon and Rob Slotemaker will drive Porsche 904s but the sleek German - built cars have not distinguished themselves at Mosport since one first appeared here last spring driven by British airlines pilot Hugh Dibley. Dibley, who finished 12th in last year's international race, is driving a Chev - powered Lola this time.

Two - rated Canadian is Ludwig Heimrath of Toronto, Canadian racing champion in 1961 and 1964, who will drive a Ford-powered car designed by Mo-Laren. His chief Canadian competition is expected to come from Ethal Maier, German-born salesman from Thornhill, Ont., driving a Ford-powered Lotus, and Craig Hill of London, Ont., in a Lotus-Ford.

Other Canadian entries are Max Merriere, Weston, Ont., with a Lotus Elan; John Bannbrook, Montreal, with a Merlyn Climax; Wayne Kelly, Trenton, Ont., in a Porsche, Walt McKay, Toronto, in a Cooper Ford; Bob McLean, Vancouver, in a Lotus 23; George Chapman, Winnipeg, in a Lotus 23; Nat Adams, Toronto, Lotus Climax; Vic Yachek, Cleveton, Lotus Climax; and Dave Greenblatt, Montreal, Singray.

Qualifying trials Friday will begin a carnival weekend at the track 45 miles east of Toronto. Last year 41,224 went through the gates for the highest paid attendance at any sports event in Canadian history. Thousands camp over night among the trees of the infield.

The twisting track itself demands more in driving skill than power. Its uphill and downhill turns put a premium on braking and gear - box handling.

Intercollegiate Sport

Bodies Reach Compromise

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The governing body of intercollegiate sport in Canada reached a compromise with an Ontario-Quebec affiliate Wednesday that ended at least temporarily a rift between the two.

At odds were the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union and the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association.

Bob Pugh of MacDonald College in Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que., president of the Canadian association, commented: "At least it shows that both sides have good intentions of eventually reaching a compromise.

"Up until today, both were adamant in their beliefs."

The moves came as the Canadian association opened a three - day annual meeting at the University of Windsor. Besides representatives from Ontario - Quebec, there were delegates from the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association, the Ontario IAA, the Maritimes IAA and the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Athletic Association.

The Ontario - Quebec group is embracing such universities as Montreal, McGill, Toronto and McMaster has insisted that its players be eligible for intercollegiate sports as long as they are at university, without time limit. In the Canadian association's policy calls for a five-year limit on player eligibility for its member conferences.

The compromise Wednesday which will allow Ontario - Quebec to remain a member in good standing calls for a two-year "respite" in the matter of eligibility for national tournaments.

The matter came to a head last fall when Ontario - Quebec despite being the host conference, withdrew from the Canadian intercollegiate swimming championships because three of its team members were ruled ineligible for the competition under the five-year regulation.

The agreement Wednesday will allow Ontario - Quebec to compete at the national level for two years under its own eligibility regulations while attempting to find ways of complying with Canadian association standards at the end of the two-year period.

Grudge Battle In Belmont

By ORLO ROBERTSON

NEW YORK (AP) — They're advertising Saturday's renewal of the $125,000-added Belmont Stakes as a grudge race between two half - brothers — Prudkuan winner Tom Rolfe and runner-up Dapper Dan.

Lurking in the background, however, is Hail to All, a stretch runner capable of taking it all.

"He's fit and ready," said trainer Eddie Yowell, who is keeping Mrs. Ben Cohen's flashy son of Hail to Reason at Monmouth Park until Friday before shipping in for the final leg of the triple crown for three-year-olds.

Yowell is asking Hail to All for a difficult task since the Florida-bred colt raced Monday at Garden State Park, winning the Jersey Derby by 1½ lengths for his first major triumph.

He'll go into the Belmont with a career record of six victories and the same number of seconds and thirds in 21 starts.

Meantime, the two sons of the unbeaten Italian stallion—Ribot —owned by first cousins (Tom Rolfe by Raymond Guest and Dapper Dan by Ogden Phipps) have been taking it easy comfortably since their thrilling finish in the Preakness May 15.

Tom Rolfe, blessed with plenty of speed, and Dapper Dan and Hail to All, both of whom like to trail the early pace and strike in the home stretch, are the big three of the small Belmont field. The other expected starters are Select from Lawrence Katz's Valley Farms and lightly - raced Lucky Debonair by J. R. Straus.

With only five starters, the race will have a gross value of $144,150 with $100,500 going to the winner. Second place will be worth $25,000, third $12,000 and fourth $6,250.

Settle Suit Out Of Court

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP)—A $24,900 suit filed by race driver Parnelli Jones against the Indianapolis 500-mile whirling team of Lotus Ltd. was settled out of court Wednesday.

James M. Nicholson, Jones' lawyer, said details of the settlement have not been set, "but Parnelli is being paid what is due him."

Federal District Judge William E. Steckler Tuesday issued an order of attachment holding up the $24,900 of the Lotus record $34,621 winnings on Jones' contention that the Lotus firm owed him that amount for two major races last year.

THE ARNOLD Palmer Method
by GOLF'S 4-TIME MASTERS WINNER
AN EASY WAY TO MAKE SHOTS FROM ROUGH
When hitting shots out of rough, your aim ensures should be to control the ball squarely with a short and abbreviated follow thru surrounding grass.
You will want your clubhead to enter the hitting area on a sharply descending path so that it will move into the ball relatively unhindered.
One way to assure yourself of such a clubhead path is to cock your wrists earlier than normal on the backswing and to retain most of your weight on your left side (see illustration).
This sort of swing will also discourage your body turn and thus aid in making more contact with the ball.

NEW YORK (AP) — Sam Snead and Cary Middlecoff are among the 430 golfers who must try to qualify next week for the 65th National Open championship.

Chuvalo is also scheduled to fight Dave Bailey of Philadelphia in a 10-rounder June 19 in Glace Bay, N.S.

Ungerman, promoter Ron Brothers said Chuvalo will fight a 10-round non-title fight there next Monday, possibly against Tiger Wright of Detroit.

Ungerman said the Saint John bout is not definite.

"If they do come up with Tiger Wright, we might just accept it," he said. "George will probably know in a day or two. We're going to Sydney and Antigonish this weekend and we'll know then."

Bailey was a sparring partner and a heavyweight champion Cassius Clay during training for last week's title fight against Sonny Liston in Lewiston, Me. Clay knocked out Liston in the first round.

Thinks Canada Has Chance

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) Canada's young Davis Cup tennis team was described Wednesday as a proud and hungry quartet that will give the United States a thorough test in the zone matches here this weekend.

"It definitely have a chance to win," said Jim Mackes, nonplaying captain from Vancouver. "They have been training for nine months, and we are in top physical shape."

Mackes noted the veterans Chuck McKinley, slated only for doubles duty, has been playing irregularly, and such young American players as Marty Riessen and Gene Scott lack Davis Cup experience.

Arthur Ashe joined the U.S. team Wednesday, and McKinley is due in Thursday night from New York, where he is in the brokerage business.

Pancho Gonzales, coach of the U.S. team, will also arrive Thursday.

The draw for pairings will be held Thursday.

Engineers scored single runs in the first and last frames while getting pairs in the fourth and fifth.

Fred Hall pitched two-hit ball over the route, getting errorless support while striking out 10 and walking five. Terry Pope was his catcher.

Etcheverry And Als Denies Position Offer

MONTREAL (CP)—Sam Etcheverry, former Montreal Alouette and St. Louis Cardinal quarterback, said Wednesday that while he has talked about player recruiting with Als' coach Jim Trimble, they have not discussed his return to the Montreal football club as an assistant coach.

Etcheverry, who coached the Montreal-based Quebec Rifles of the United Football League last season, said current reports he would replace Als' coach in the Canadian Football League were "pure speculation."

"I've never been offered the job," Etcheverry said. "I would be interested if it did not mean giving up my present job here."

The former all-star is currently employed as a customers representative for a brokerage and investment firm. He parted company with the Rifles when the team moved to Toronto this spring as part of the new Continental Football League.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP)—Owner Ken Kalman was kicking himself after the third race at Greenwood Raceway Wednesday.

He had been trying for years to breed a champion—but in vain. So last winter he sold one of his mares, Bright Memory, to Kentucky interests for $2,000.

But it turns out that Bright Memory is a half-sister to the dam of Hot Dust, winner of the rich Hialeah Turf Cup during the winter, and one of Bright Memory's progeny, Lorne Boy, walked off with the third race.

Lorne Boy, a long-shot winner, paid $26.20, $14.80 and $8.10. The two-year-old gelding was the last Canadian foal Bright Memory gave birth to before departing for Kentucky. His sire is Mister Jive, one of the best developing studs in Canada.

The daily double at Victor's Best in the first and Lucky Seven in the second returned $13, while the quinella of Reefwall and Irish Joe paid $13.30 in the fifth.

DEVICES ARE LEGAL

TORONTO (CP) — Use of electronic saws dropping devices is legal in Canada in obtaining evidence for court cases, says a federal official. "At present it is absolutely legal to listen in on another person's conversations as long as the device is not encroaching on a person's private property," Donald S. Macdonald parliamentary secretary to Justice Minister Favreau, said Wednesday in an interview.

Auto Workers Confer With Trade Minister

DETROIT (CP)—Federal Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp played host Wednesday night to representatives of Canadian and U.S. auto manufacturers in an "idea - exchanging" session that centred on their participation in Expo '67.

Mr. Sharp, accompanied by Industry Minister Gerard Levesque of Quebec, Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau and two officials from Canada's 1967 World Exposition, said the purpose of the meeting was to invite the auto manufacturers to participate in the big fair and to "clear up misunderstandings" about the concept of Expo '67.

No details of the talks in the U.S. auto capital were made public, and Mr. Sharp said another similar meeting would be held this month and more meetings with U.S. industry leaders would be held in due course.

Mr. Sharp called Wednesday's meeting a week ago when it was learned that the three major automobile manufacturers in Canada had withdrawn their options for large, individual pavilion sites at the grounds.

EXPRESS INTEREST

They expressed an interest, however, in joint sponsorship of a single pavilion.

Ron W. Eadie, president of Chrysler Canada Ltd., announced last fall that his company planned a multi - million dollar pavilion at Expo '67.

"We've never been out of Expo. We were all after the meeting Wednesday night. "As of now its all a matter of degree of participation. There was no discussion of dollars and cents at this meeting. We plan to get together again in a few weeks to discuss it further."

Edwin H. Walker, president of General Motors of Canada Ltd. and Karl E. Scott, president of Ford of Canada Ltd., declined to comment.

Also present at the meeting were vice - presidents of the Ford Motor Co., General Motors Corp., Chrysler Corp., and American Motors Corp.

Some Police Officers Asked To Resign

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Arthur Wishart says he has asked some Ontario police officers who are also justices of the peace to resign their JP commissions.

Mr. Wishart, who said he had not been aware police officers were acting as JPs until the matter came up during discussion of his estimates about two weeks ago, said Wednesday the suggestion to resign was made in letters sent to about six officers holding the dual posts.

He said: "The letters say that we know they have done a good job . . . but we are pointing out that it is the policy not to have justices of the peace who are also police officers."

Mr. Wishart said he has the power to end a JP's appointment by order-in-council but he does not think he will have to take that step.

RESTORE EARLY JESUIT SETTLEMENT — Wilfrid W. Jury (right) of the University of Western Ontario is overseeing reconstruction of Ste. Marie Among-the-Hurons, a Jesuit settlement near Midland, Ont., that was the home of a handful of missionaries from 1639 to 1649 when it was burned to prevent it falling into the hands of hostile Iroquois. Mr. Jury visited Italy and France recently seeking facts about the settlement. Picture shows a meeting with Pope Paul and Rev. John L. Swain, vicar-general of the Jesuits. (CP Photo)

First Ontario White Village Is Being Restored on Wye

MIDLAND, Ont. (CP) — Beside the Wye River near this town 20 miles southwest of Orillia, the first white settlement in Ontario is being reconstructed.

Carpenters are raising pointed log palisades, chapels, stables and bastions. By 1967 Ste. Marie-Among-the-Hurons will resemble the 1639-49 home of a handful of Roman Catholic missionaries.

Premier John Robarts announced last year the settlement would be rebuilt and early this year Pope Paul VI gave his blessing to the project.

Originally known as Fort Ste. Marie I, the settlement was burned by Jesuit missionaries to prevent its falling into the hands of hostile Iroquois Indians—but not before the missionaries had spent 10 years venturing into the wilderness with the Christian gospel to Huron Indian villages within a radius of several hundred miles.

Wilfrid W. Jury, a Baptist, is overseeing the reconstruction as honorary curator of the Museum of Indian Archeology and Pioneer Life at the University of Western Ontario. He and Mrs. Jury recently visited Italy and France seeking facts about the original settlement which also housed the first hospital in the Canadian interior, the first blacksmith shop, the first organized agriculture and the first library.

VISIT ROUEN

In France the Jurys visited Rouen, home of Charles Boivin, master builder, whom the Jesuits of Normandy brought to Huronia along with French artisans to build their wilderness outpost.

The new buildings will follow Norman design but will not have traditional Norman slate roofs. Instead, they'll be roofed with elm bark, the substitute the French had to accept from the Hurons.

The Huronia Historical Development Council has been given authority and funds by the Ontario government to handle Ste. Marie reconstruction.

Students from the University of Western Ontario are employed seven days a week as guides at the project.

Samuel de Champlain, commandant of the Colony of New France, and Rev. Joseph Le Caron, a Catholic priest, left Quebec in 1615 in separate canoe flotillas to introduce Christianity to Huronia, home of 30,000 Huron Indians.

The first four missionaries were Recollets, succeeded in 1626 by the Jesuits who founded the settlement 13 years later as a mission-house and administrative centre. Soon it also became a place of refuge for Hurons fleeing from the Iroquois and a place of instruction for Indian converts.

TV-Radio Column

Popularity of Modern Spy Literature Is Discussed

AT THE PARK — A brunette for the first time—in her film career which so far has earned her an Academy Award, Shirley Jones is Tony Randall's romantic interest in Universal's comedy in color, "Fluffy," opening today at the Park drive-in theatre, first feature with showings at the same program as "The World of Abbott and Costello." All their best comedies rolled into one. Complete shows at 7.00 and 8.50 p.m.

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacques Barzun, educationist and essayist, has been meditating recently on the popularity of modern spy literature—specifically Ian Fleming's James Bond books and Charles Forsyth's The Spy Who Came. in From The Cold.

He concludes that "the soul of the spy is somehow the model of our own; his actions and his trappings fulfil our unsatisfied desires."

Writing in the American Scholar magazine, Barzun finds that the reader readily identifies with the character who has the right to kill in line of duty.

"The advantage of being a spy as of being a soldier is that there is always a legal reason—a reason of state—for making any little scruple or nastiness shrink before intelligence," he said.

The author, perhaps, is not much of a student of television for it would have been difficult to resist comment on all of its spy shows with similar licence to kill.

There are the agents of The Man from U.N.C.L.E., who dispatch villains on a wholesale basis each week and Secret Agent, who rarely permits the heavies to escape with their lives.

There are also the soldier-heroes as the infantrymen of Combat who landed on a beat a platoon of Nazis a week, and the brave air force boys of 12 O'clock High.

There are, also, the quick-draw lawmen of television's old west. Marshal Dillon regularly drops evil-doers in their tracks for "a larger reason," which is law and order, as do a host of others.

Barzun suggests further that our interest in cloak-and-dagger stories is based on something "older and deeper than our anxieties of the cold war" — the most often-heard excuse for enjoying so-called "escape literature."

By the same token, then, perhaps we television fans watch these adventure stories to calm our fears by their weekly demonstrations that such fearful difficulties "yield to technique."

In a television series the expert hero is even more comforting than in a book: We know that he — and right — will triumph, because there has to be another episode next week.

Madoc

CHURCH PARADE

At the exercises held on Wednesday, in St. Peter's Auditorium, Anne had the honour presented with the Dr. McNulty Memorial Prize for proficiency in the operating room. CONFIRMATION SERVICE

The service of Confirmation and Holy Communion was held in St. John the Baptist Anglican Church, Madoc, with the Bishop of Ontario, the Rt. Rev. K. C. Evans, D.D., officiating and celebrating. The 100-year-old church was beautifully decorated with lilacs, tulips, gladioli and 'mums. Many visitors and friends filled the church to witness twelve persons receive the laying on of hands.

The service had been prepared by the rector, the Rev. James H. Thompson. Those confirmed were: Daniel H. Alt, William Brian Armstrong, Millbridge; Ian and James McNab, Terry W. Morgan, Edmund A. Ray, Harold Wayne Redding, Nancy E. Redding, Carole L. Smith, of Bannockburn; Thomas E. Ross, Dale C. Smith and Ruth Ann Tanner, Madoc.

A reception was held in the parish hall following the service, where the members of the Women's Auditiary served light refreshments.

At the Belle

Ben-Ben of Merrimont Served up by Cary Grant Leslie Caron in "Father Goose"

Romantic adventure comedy at its scintillating best is served up in Universal's "Father Goose" starring Cary Grant, Leslie Caron and Trevor Howard, now animating the Technicolor screen of the Belle Theatre, where it offers one of the season's most rewarding cinema treats.

The superb production is a boon—box of celluloid entertainment. One of the most delectable merriments of recent vintage, and equally as well as ultra - sophisticate, plus just about everyone in between, should find it a rich feast of infectious fun.

Never before in his truly remarkable screen career has Cary appeared before the cameras in anything like the off - beat characterization provided for him in "Father Goose," written for the screen by the same actress, Peter Stone, who authored the star's last previous film hit, "Charade", and directed by Ralph Nelson of "Lilies of the Field" acclaim.

Vanished into limbo is the suavely debonair, elegantly groomed, meticulously tailored Cary of so many memorable performances. Prince charming has been supplanted by one unshaved, bibulous beachcomber clad in soft woolen plaid flannel shirt and tired sneakers, sans socks.

Cary's role is that of an ex-professor of history who has rebelled against the strictures of society and escaped to the south Pacific where, in scenic man-operated launch, he roves the tropical waters, errant as the sea zephyrs.

His idyll comes to an abrupt end when he is pressed into service as a coast watcher to report movement of enemy planes and ships. In the course of his duties his lonely island outpost is "invaded" by Miss Caron portraying the war-displaced daughter of a French consular official, and her seven schoolgirl charges.

Dependable Trevor Howard contributes in large measure to the fun fest, adding precisely to proper touch to his portrayal of an Australian Navy commander who finally gives Cary to "volunteer" for the coast watching service.

"Father Goose" is a lustrous credit to all the behind-scenes staff responsible for its making.

Film Role Leaves Patty Fatigued But Cheerful

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Patty Duke is making her first movie since her academy award triumph in The Miracle Worker, and it's even more strenuous.

As Helen Keller in the film that won her the Oscar as best supporting actress of 1962, she had some battles with her fellow Oscar winner, Anne Bancroft.

Now young Patty is here for her first Hollywood film—The Miracle Worker was a New York product. Adapted from the play Time Out for Ginger, it now is called plain Billie. In it Patty runs the 100-yard dash and hurdles, pole vaults, dances the drug and sings four numbers.

WAS FATIGUED

When I saw Patty in her dressing room at Paramount, she was suffering from understandable fatigue—I think it was the hurdles that did it.' But she seemed as cheerful as ever. Billie should be a breeze for her; she plays only one role.

For two seasons she has been playing a double role on a television series entitled The Patty Duke Show.

"In fact," she said, "this year I played a third role. The girls' southern cousin. That was real fun. I put on a platinum wig and used a southern accent and played her entirely different from the other two girls. We even had a split-screen scene with all three of us at the same time. That was something. The scene was so tight that I could not move my elbows."

Billie is much different from all three of the TV roles, she said. She'll look different, too; her hair now is in a blonde Beatle-bob.

FORECASTS SPENDING

VANCOUVER (CP) — Total government spending on Canada's 1967 centennial celebrations could go as high as $250,000,000, the head of the centennial commission said Monday. John Fisher told the Vancouver Board of Trade it appears provincial and municipal governments will contribute far more than called for by the minimal program.

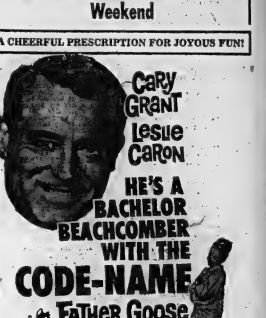
31 Missionaries Slain by Rebels Say Survivors

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (Reuters)—A young Portuguese survivor told reporters Wednesday night he saw Congolese insurgents execute 31 male missionaries in the northern Congo town of Buta Sunday night.

As the Portuguese, one of nine survivors evacuated from the area, told his story, sources close to Congolese Army headquarters today reported Wednesday night he saw Congolese insurgents execute 31 male missionaries in the northern Congo town of Buta Sunday night.

As the Portuguese, one of nine survivors evacuated from the area, told his story, sources close to Congolese Army headquarters today reported fears about 55 whites had been killed by insurgents in Buta.

Three columns of Congo government troops were combing the area, cleaning out rebel pockets and looking for survivors. Congolese Army men who captured Buta Tuesday had expected to find 100 Europeans—mainly missionaries and nuns—estimated to be in the district.



So far, however, only 29 have been accounted for.

Says Canadian:

Britons Shall Overcome Economic Difficulties

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — Canadian supersalesman Bertram C. Butler sails to his new post in the Far East carrying with him optimistic convictions that Britain, a big market for Canadian goods, will overcome its economic woes and thereby widen its markets for Canadian products.

"The British are an inventive people and they are not a people to be written off easily," said the inveterate drum-beater who in his six years as Canada's commercial minister in London helped boost Canadian exports to this country from a figure of less than $500,000,000 in 1859 to about $1,200,000,000 in 1964.

"Sure, they may have to tighten their belts a bit more and they must face the one key problem of increasing productivity at competitive prices. There must be a change in attitude on the part of management and labor. They must accept new ways of doing things.

"But Britons are pretty bright. They have met their problems before and once they face up to the essential tasks, they invariably find a solution."

At 60, the "hard sell" Butler makes a major transition in his own affairs. Closing down a 36-year career in the Canadian trade department where he tramped the world searching for markets, the commercial minister now becomes Canada's high commissioner to Malaysia, a sensitive political post where he also will act as envoy to Burma and Thailand.

ECONOMY CHANGES

A highlight of his bustling life was his six years in Britain where he witnessed a great transformation in the British economy. When he arrived on a grey, cold day in January, 1956, Britain had just made her currency convertible and was preparing to dismantle import controls.

By February, 1960, most of the controls were gone and as Butler recalls, he started "to beat the drum" to awaken Canadian interests to the new conditions and opportunities in this country. He used such gimmicks as trade missions, trade fairs, newspaper and magazine advertisements to get Canadian exporters rolling.

In one year alone—1964—he had the satisfaction of seeing a 30-per-cent rise in Canadian exports, to $1,300,000,000. While 1965 import restrictions may curtail domestic purchases, Butler estimates "we'll still hit another $4,200,000,000 this year, making up on the roundabouts what we lose on the swings."

When Butler arrived, the average British wage was about £19 a week. Now is is about £36.

"When you get one-third of the Canadian population on payrolls, you've got full employment. Here in Britain they've got one-half the population on payrolls. That's a lot of purchasing power.

"Britons tend to complain about the big deficit in Canadian trade. But I tell them that in a way, they ought to cheer. For Britons depend heavily on Canada for raw materials to turn into manufactured goods. Heavy imports from Canada mean there is a big economic expansion in this country."

Nevertheless the Hamilton, Ont., native agrees that Canadians as have made big inroads in British finished-goods markets, earning about $250,000,000 a year in selling "the most improbable things" — from sports clothing to furniture.

"There is no better indication than here in Britain of the remarkable growth in Canadian manufacturing."

And because of the importance of the British market, Butler hopes Britain makes good in its new trade drive in Canada. He anticipates British exporters will make "great use" of the Canadian decision to ease anti-dumping restrictions on imports and hopes that eventually the British deficit in Canadian trade will decline.

"Britain is going through a tremendous historical change. It no longer is leader of an empire with great captive markets. There must be painful adjustments to new conditions. Britons must gear themselves mentally for a great change in attitude towards world competition and I am convinced they have the moral strength to make the change."

Uranium Mines May Open Again Under New Plan

BY KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government's new uranium export policy blocks what industry sources suspect was an effort by France to control world prices for the strategic metal over a long period.

At the same time, it turns the individual Canadian producers loose for the first time to make the best deal they can with possible customers, under safeguards that the uranium oxide will be used only for peaceful purposes.

Prime Minister Pearson announced the new policy in the Commons Thursday night. It provides:

1. Government stockpiling for a five-year period through purchases at $4.80 a pound to keep existing mines producing at present levels.

2. Authorization to Canadian producers to export only on contracts which certify the buying country will use the uranium oxide only for peaceful purposes such as nuclear power projects.

3. Canadian producers may sign contracts to sell uranium for 30 years, "the average anticipated life" of a nuclear power station, for each power station they supply.

4. Experts for stockpiling by the buying country will be limited to five years and only for "reasonable" amounts.

PREVENTS TAKEOVER

Mining sources say the latter two conditions prevent any attempt by France or any other country to get a guaranteed supply of uranium oxide for a long period at current low prices with the ultimate aim of controlling the world price when world demand rises, probably within the next 10 years.

In the past all Canadian uranium oxide sales—to Britain and the United States—have been negotiated by the government which then had the difficult job of allocating the production among the various mines.

Now the Canadian producers will make their own deals, provided the conditions laid down by the government to obtain export permits are met.

And in the current period of low demand, they will be negotiating with France and other countries with the assurance that if they can't reach a satisfactory arrangement the federal government will buy their production at the $4.80-a-pound price.

Currently only three Canadian producers are making sales under long-term contracts at prices ranging from $4.50 a pound to $5.40 a pound. Costs of production are roughly $3.30 a pound.

Canadian and French government officials are expected to meet within the next few days to carry forward discussions undertaken last month in Paris by Trade Minister Sharp on France's bid to buy a reported 100,000,000 pounds over 25 years for $700,000,000.

Mr. Pearson said in announcing the new policy that the government has been aware of the possibility that France might be interested in buying Canadian uranium oxide.

House In Rules Deadlock

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberal government and the Conservative opposition are deadlocked in the Commons over a controversial debate-limiting proposal that would permit cabinet ministers to set time limits on debates.

The impasse arose when the government rejected a Conservative suggestion to scrap the proposal after the Conservatives threatened to drag out the debate.

A week ago Labor Minister MacEachen won acceptance for amendments to ease the guillotine by providing minimum lengths for debates in the event an all-party business committee could not reach agreement on shorter or longer times.

Thursday Solicitor - General MacNaught said the government has met every "reasonable" opposition suggestion and indicated it wants to go no further.

Prime Minister Pearson has said the time limit proposals are a question of confidence—

Wildcat Walkout Spreads

TORONTO (CP) — A wildcat walkout of 1,100 railway workers that hinged on the company's demerit system and dismissal over discipline Thursday spread to other Canadian National Express offices.

Meanwhile, talks between CNR management and union officials broke off without any progress being made.

Besides those out in the Toronto area, 200 CNR express workers walked out at Hamilton and 125 at London in sympathy moves and to protest their own working conditions. All are members of local 227 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC).

SPACE TWINS SETTLE DOWN

THUMBS UP — Gemini-4 co-pilot Edward H. White (rear) gives a thumbs-up gesture to technicians greeting him and command pilot James A. McDivitt on their way to their spacecraft yesterday morning. (AP Wirephoto)

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Young Eddie White heard about his dad taking a solo stroll in space Thursday, then the youngster went to a little league baseball game and struck out his first turn at bat.

Eight-year-old Mike McDivitt, son of Gemini IV command pilot James McDivitt, also left the televised coverage of the space flight for baseball, but deserted the game later in favor of a snow cone. His team won anyway.

While her husband spun around the world more than 100 miles up, Mrs. Edward White spoke hopefully of a vacation in the Colorado Rockies.

"I hope he is somewhere with him," Mrs. White, an attractive blonde, told reporters. "I think they'll give him some time off. If I have my way we'll go to Colorado."

Jim Ring, but apparently weary, Mrs. McDivitt told reporters:

"We were all having a ball and still are."

Mrs. White said she wasn't frightened while her husband was outside the space vehicle and said she recognized his voice when she spoke during the space plunge.

"I could hear him laughing. I wasn't worried. I knew it would work out all okay."

Her children, Mrs. White said, were so proud, "they could bust; they just don't know what to do."

A Jackson, Mich., the father of McDivitt, confident his son was "having a ball up there," relaxed a bit more today as the astronaut rocketed on the second of four days in orbit.

James A. McDivitt, Sr., 62, said: "If I had been younger I would have been up there, too, if I had a chance."

After the liftoff—"beautiful," both parents exclaimed — and White's walk in space, Mrs. McDivitt said she felt three-quarters of the mission was safely completed.

The senior McDivitt, an electrical engineer, shows an intense interest in technical details of the flight.

The family has been sleeping in "naps and shifts," Mrs. McDivitt said, and probably will continue that routine during the 62-orbit mission.

In St. Petersburg, Fla., Whites father, Maj.-Gen. Edward H. White, rated to fly everything from bombers to balloons, said he is happy that his son may one day fly to the moon.

"I'm proud of my boy; I know he did a good job," said the father of America's first astronaut to walk in space. "His definite goal is to make the first flight to the moon, and this will be a step in that direction."

The general, who has been boosting the space program since his son was named an astronaut, and his wife watched their son's adventure on three television sets.

After the historic step outside the capsule, Gen. White said:

"You could tell by his voice that he was having the time of his life out there—rolling and tossing and having a great time. I hope he got some good pictures."

World Pays Tribute to Space Walker

LONDON (Reuters) — Newspapers and commentators around the world today paid tribute to America's Gemini IV flight and the "walk" in space by Maj. Edward White.

Details of White's flight with Maj. James McDivitt were reported at length in most Western newspapers. Moscow radio and East European news media gave factual reports of the launching at Cape Kennedy, Fla., and of the flight.

Pravda, the Soviet Communist party newspaper, gave a prominent half-column on its front page today to report the launching and White's 20-minute jaunt.

Other Russian newspapers carried news of the launching on inside pages, but most dailies went to press too early to include reports of the "walk."

Exultant banner headlines in the British press acclaimed White's achievement as a tremendous feat for the U.S.

Lavish displays of photographs and pictures of the two-man spacecraft in orbit filled columns in every newspaper.

In Manchester, near the Jodrell Bank observatory, Britain's top radio-astronomer Sir Bernard Lovell, today paid tribute to Gemini's two astronauts.

"One's first reaction must be to pay tribute to the incredible bravery of the people who step out in space in this way," he said.

"The American achievement coming quickly after the Russians' demonstrates how closely matched they are for a manned lunar landing.

"Both Russia and America show they are relentlessly moving toward the time when both Americans and Russians will be on the moon."

Most French newspapers hailed White's "walk" as putting the United States on equal terms with Russia in space exploits. Every paper carried large frontpage photographs of the two astronauts.

Routine After Caper

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Space twins James McDivitt and Edward White continued their earth-circling voyage today with a busy routine following White's nonchalant, mischievous 20-minute walk among the stars Thursday.

Part of today's plan called for White and McDivitt, his command pilot, to pretend they are returning from a moon trip and try to orient themselves visually by spotting landmarks such as the Florida Peninsula.

The space twins are scheduled to orbit the earth for four days in their Gemini IV capsule. Both got their first sleep late Thursday night and early today.

At the end of the 11th orbit early today, mission medical officials said the medical responses from both McDivitt and White were "all normal . . . both have settled to a resting rate."

The antics of White, a 34-year - old sandy - haired astronaut with a keen sense of humor, highlighted the first day voyage of Gemini IV Thursday as it streaked around and around the earth.

While stayed alone in space for 20 minutes, double the time spent by a Russian cosmonaut last March, and had to be coaxed back into the capsule by McDivitt, who followed pre-emptory commands barked into space from mission control in Houston.

NOT COMING IN

"I'm not coming in," White jokingly told McDivitt at one point as the capsule hurtled at 17,500 miles an hour over the United States.

"We've got 3½ days to go, buddy," McDivitt told White, after a sharp nudge from mission control.

"I'm coming," White said irjectantly.

He eased back into the capsule, he added: "It's the saddest moment of my life."

The excitement disrupted

Space Dad Exciting But Ball Important

There Was an Ex-Mountie Named Bigg Who Knew How to Get in a Dig

OTTAWA (CP)—Just when the bottom seems to be falling out of a Commons debate, chances are some MP will step into the gap to inject a little new life into the discussion.

It was Jack Bigg's turn Thursday night and he carried it off with a bang.

With debate on proposed changes in House procedure droning through its ninth day with no immediate break in sight, up popped the Conservative backbencher from Athabasca, Alta., to offer his own homespun version of what's exactly wrong — and right — with Parliament.

Forty minutes later he had the place in an uproar.

Here's how ex-Mountie Bigg sized up the state of parliamentary affairs:

On MP's in general: "A group of ambitious men and I'm one of them."

On civil servants: "They sit in their nice little ivory towers making policies. We're supposed to swallow hook, line and sinker . . . these iced cakes which, in my opinion are often full of sawdust."

To minority parties generally and the Social Credit ment: "If you have confidence in the government, then join it, lock, stock and barrel. Make your deals with the government. Get into the cabinet."

On the impact of his own speech: "I don't expect they (his constituents) will read this debate and I will not even bother sending them copies of it. I am talking to the members here. Perhaps it's like the parson talking to the empty pews in church."

On the length of speeches: "I think we should waste a thousand hours in this House rather than deny any well-intentioned member his right to speak. He may have to speak for two years before gaining his point."

On handling prime ministers who don't do their job: "When a British king did not do what he should have done . . . they took him out on the front porch and gave him a very close hair cut."

On the art of compromise: "Let's not compromise to the point at which we become so open-mined our brains fall out."

On the powers of a modern-day prime minister: "He could make me a senator tomorrow, could he not? This is great power, astounding power."

On the need to give the Governor-General more political power: "We have been in the wilderness for 40 years. It took Moses 40 years to smarten up and we have had the same length of time."

On the emergence of full-party status for minority groups in the Commons: "The mistake we made was allowing the camel to put his head in the tent. Now there is no room for the poor old Arab."

And, finally, on ill - informed speeches: "I am as tired as you are, Mr. Speaker, of hearing people talk on subjects about which they know nothing."

Canadians? To Yanks We Are Slow Americans

TORONTO (CP) — What do Americans really think and know of Canadians?

Secondly, we're thought of as "slow Americans."

And thirdly, the American attitude toward the Canadian is said to be best described as one of fraternity, friendship or affinity.

A significant finding was a surprisingly favorable attitude among knowledgeable northerners in the U.S. towards a merger of Canada and the United States.

The institute relied for most of its conclusions on hundreds of so-called "depth interviews" carried out mainly in Great Lakes border states.

The Americans were found to be severely ignorant about Canada's present political state. About 38 per cent of those interviewed felt Canada was not independent but was ruled by Britain.

There was an implied criticism that a country which was so much like the United States lacked the American initiative or strength of character to achieve full independence from Britain as did the U.S.

Whether or not Americans were ignorant of the way of life in Canada, they had sterling thoughts regarding the solidity of the Canadian citizen.

"Almost without exception our respondents regard Canadians as honest, hard-working, trustworthy people of high moral calibre," the researchers found.

This, however, was not considered altogether good when it came to selling Canadian-made products in the states.

"Lacking is any strong feeling that Canadians are innovators, that they provide leadership in the world community, that they have made and are making a mark on world history," the report says.

What was needed to sell Canadian products in the U.S. was to make them more exotic, more foreign, more unique.

Humane Society Awarded Charter to Operate Branch

The inaugural dinner of the Quinte Branch of the Ontario Humane Society was held last night in the Prince Edward Suite of the Quinte Hotel. Theodore Rhenius, president of the branch, explained that a small group of citizens had made application to the Society for a charter on February 25, 1965, and that they had just received their warrant to operate as an official branch.

Mr. Rhenius introduced Tom Hughes, the General Manager of the Humane Society's 83 Ontario branches, who was the guest of honor at the dinner. The Quinte Branch is now authorized to carry on the work of the society in Hastings and Prince Edward counties, he declared. This work involves enforcing the laws of the Criminal Code, which protect animals and thus to prevent cruelty to animals. The local branch will endeavour to assist by providing an inspector for their area.

Mr. Hughes pointed out that the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act gives his organization full police powers and that the inspector will be a police officer, who will inspect commercial establishments such as slaughter houses and logging camps. He also explained that the Ontario Humane Society and the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals are the same organization, the shorter title being the name used in day to day work.

SUPPORT CONTENTION

The great weakness of the laws that protect animals in the Criminal Code is that they do not prevent a person convicted of cruelty from continuing to possess animals. Mr. Hughes thought it certainly was that Canada is the only civilized country without such laws and that many magistrates and crown attorneys support his Society's lobby to have them enacted. He feels that if the privileges of operating an automobile may be removed for abusing it, the certainly ownership of animals should be denied to those who treat them cruelly.

The Society does far more than with large animals than with dogs and cats, but it is nonetheless interested in the smaller ones. The Belleville Animal Shelter was criticized by Mr. Hughes as not being up to the standard of a modern community. However, he stated that the city should be proud of its recently installed Electrothanator which carries out the unfortunate but necessary job of destroying animals quickly and painlessly. This is a step in the right direction, he feels, and progress could be considered if the Quinte Branch were to build a new shelter. If this were to happen the city council would be asked to provide operational expenses and Belleville would enjoy the facilities expected of a modern community.

Dieoff of Fish In Bay Has Subsided

Although the dieoff of fish in the Bay of Quinte has subsided, laboratory analysis of samples has not yet brought to light the causes.

R. E. Whitfield, fish and wildlife supervisor at Tweed, said today he was rather "sceptical" that analysis would reveal anything.

"By the time we got them most of the fish were rotten," said Mr. Whitfield, "and the dieoff could have been caused by any one of a hundred different sources of bacteria or fungus".

Five danger in the area still remains in the high range, according to forest protection supervisor Bert Dunn. Up to May 30 there had been 80 fires and 671 acres had been burned. This was a big increase over last year at the same time, when only 18 fires were reported with a loss of 187 acres.

Mr. Dunn attributed the increase in part to a dry spring and delayed growth.

Habitual Drunk Wins First Case

An habitual offender -- regularly charged in Belleville magistrate's court with drunkenness -- today won his first court case.

The man pleaded he had taken only one drink when an officer picked him up staggering into store windows on Front Street. His condition, he said, was compounded by drugs -- and he produced a doctor's prescription to prove it.

"I plead guilty to being in a stupor, I admit I had one drink," he told the court.

Assistant Crown Attorney Ralph Graham said it didn't matter to him whether the man was convicted or not. However, he pointed out, no matter the complications he was still technically drunk -- even if he had taken only one drink to do it.

"As far as I'm concerned the whole thing is academic," said Magistrate Wills, suggesting the accused be given the benefit of his story.

"You'll have him back in a week", he confronted the prosecutor who "You'll have him back with the same story", warned Mr. Graham.

"Then he won't", said the magistrate suddenly serious. "He can only get away once (with the same claims)."

'Open House' Planned for Lawn Bowlers

When the weather warms up the thoughts of many turn to lawn bowling, and in this city there is one of the finest bowling greens in the Province.

Many of the regulars are back getting in a few practice licks but this appeal is going to be to the older bowlers, who have left the club in recent years and to any that have thoughts of taking up this fine summer pastime.

Next week will be "Open House" week at the Bowling Club and manager, Wilfred William Wright, the directors and the members at large extend a cordial invitation to one and all to come up and look the facilities over, enjoy a game in which expert instruction will be given. Bowling is not a strenuous exercise but is a most pleasant recreation for both the best of fellowship and sportsmanship is involved.

The management of Walker Hardware have kindly donated a display window in their store for the week's end in which a number of trophies will be exhibited, a set of new bowls in comparison to the old wooden ones used years ago and honor plaques that have been won by the Bowling Club over the years. The shield for the Doubles Champions of Canada, Bruce Miller and the late Gordon Watkin will be on exhibit as well as many district shields.

Lawn bowling is not hard to master. It is a game that grown on one, that can be played and when ready for tournament play it is a pleasure to journey to other clubs to meet the splendid sportsmen and women. The social side of the Club is an important factor and at the Belleville Club there are many activities of a social nature such as euchre parties, pepper jitneys and cookouts. Each Saturday night there is a social affair of some kind going on.

If you are interested come on up during the next week and see some of your friends and some new ones and try your hand at lawn bowling. You will like it.

Salmon River Watershed, Selby, Marysville Creek Now in Napanee Authority

Pending an order in council to be passed by the Ontario Government, the Napanee River Conservation Authority will soon more than double its present area.

At a special meeting held Thursday afternoon at the Sheffield Township Hall at Tamworth, members of the Napanee Authority voted to take in the Salmon River watershed, as well as the Selby and Marysville Creek areas which empty into the Bay of Quinte.

At the same time municipalities making up the three smaller watersheds voted to join the Napanee Authority.

The present area making up the Napanee Authority is 307 square miles while there are 357 square miles in the areas to be added to the Authority making a total area of 664 square miles.

By way of comparison the Moira River Conservation Authority has an area of 1,050 square miles.

CHANGE ATTITUDE

The decision of the municipalities in the Salmon River watershed to join the Napanee Authority is a right about face from the attitude taken three years ago when a move to form an authority on their own failed to meet approval.

At that time the eight municipalities represented split 4-4 in the vote to form an authority while a two-thirds vote is necessary.

Yesterday the vote to join the Napanee Authority was unanimous.

Following the provincial order in council the municipalities in the Salmon River watershed will appoint representatives to the Napanee Authority. Current chairman of the Napanee Authority is George Grant of Verona.

The Salmon River empties into the Bay of Quinte at Shannonville and has its headwaters in Lennox and Addington county north of No. 7 highway. Marysville and Selby creeks empty directly into the Bay of Quinte between the Salmon and Napanee River watersheds.

ELIGIBLE FOR GRANTS

Beaver and Inglesby Lakes at Erinsville are the main bodies of water on the Salmon river which in the lower parts of the watershed runs through Tamworth, Roblin, Forest Mills and Lonsdale.

Chairman of yesterday's meeting at Tamworth was chief conservationist Fred Jackson who briefly outlined river authority organization and the method of local assessment.

He told municipal representatives from the Salmon river watershed, that foregoing their own authority, or joining with another authority was the only way in which they could become eligible for government grants for conservation projects. Grants ranged from 50 to 75 per cent for regular conservation projects to 75 per cent for water storage projects.

Mr. Jackson said one disadvantage of a small river authority was that administration costs were high compared to the size of any projects which could be considered.

By joining with another authority these administration costs could be reduced.

LAND AVAILABLE

A reforestation area in Kennebec township was suggested as a possible project for the new larger river authority.

A representative from that area said that about 1,000 acres of sub-marginal land in his township could be purchased for reforestation. If this were done the cost of operating a school bus and the cost of road upkeep could be eliminated, he said.

Decision on conservation project for the Salmon River watershed, however, will be a matter for later full Authority action.

One municipality lying between the Salmon and Napanee river watersheds—the town of Deseronto—actually is not included in any watershed, but voted anyway to join the new enlarged Napanee Authority.

"We feel that the Authority can do something to reduce pollution in the Bay of Quinte, so we decided to join," stated Deseronto Reeve Gerald Long.

meaning a defeat would bring an election—but there was no indication yet the deadlock was beyond solving.

Despite the differences over the time limits on legislation there is general agreement among all parties to other reforms.

AGREED POINTS

These include more committees to examine estimates, abolition of appeals of Speakers rulings and limitation of the daily question period to 30 minutes.

A Conservative amendment that would restrict speakers to 20 minutes each during a debate with time limits exempt for the prime minister and the Opposition leader was defeated Thursday 122 to 93. It drew support only from the 68 Conservatives present and Leon Balcer (Ind.—Trois - Rivieres).

Afterwards, the New Democrats withdrew an amendment to permit extra speaking time for all party leaders when the government offered a compromise to leave decisions about length of speeches to the all-party business committee.

The guillotine was opposed during the day's debate by New Democrats Frank Howard (Skeena) and Arnold Peters (Timiskaming).

Mr. Peters said the guillotine would give too much power to party whips to decide which MPs could enter a debate. He and Mr. Howard said backbenchers should be free to express their views at any time.

Maurice Moreau (L. — York-Scarborough) said the NDP speeches showed "the hypocrisy so often evidenced by that group." The NDP last fall had called for time allocations but "when called upon to put up we find they sing a different tune."

Fourth Offence Brings 3 Months

A Belleville man was jailed three months today on a fourth offence for driving under suspension.

"This situation can't be tolerated," Magistrate T. Y. Wills told Albert Moore. "You've got to appreciate that it is going to hurt you. You can't go on defying the law."

Thursday evening, 100 members of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association met at the Glenburnie Restaurant, west of Trenton, to say a fond farewell to E. J. Neville, inspector of separate schools in District Four for the past six years. Frank Evans of St. Peter's School and Miss Theo Taggart, president of the district O.E.C.T.A., presented Mr. and Mrs. Neville with a gift. Mr. Neville will take up duties with the Department of Education at Toronto.

their sleeping and eating habits.

While took the first four-hour sleep shift. Medical reports showed his blood pressure was still high, apparently because of his jubilant feelings over the successful space walk.

Dr. Dwayne Catterson, mission control medical expert, said White slept so lightly that he was aroused when the capsule radio became active.

McDivitt reported that he had eaten "little more than one of the meals," mission control-centre said, instead of the scheduled three meals Thursday. Catterson said McDivitt "didn't eat more because they were elated and excited."

Later mission control said McDivitt slept a full four-hour shift and said White slept sounder his second time asleep.

Throughout the remainder of the flight McDivitt and White are scheduled to alternate in four-hour sleep periods and eat four meals a day.

The launch went off flawlessly Thursday after a one-hour, 15-minute delay, but there was a measure of disappointment.

McDivitt's plan to pull within a few feet of the tumbling second - stage Titan II rocket was cancelled. Too much fuel was used in chasing the abandoned booster, itself an orbiting satellite.

SPACE STROLL THRILLED

But the crowd-pleaser Thursday was the space stroll when White, linked to the capsule by a slim gold-coloured leash, cavorted in the void eight minutes longer than planned.

Dr. Charles Berry, the astronauts' physician, told a press conference that White was not disoriented while outside the spacecraft, as his Soviet predecessor had been.

"He even walked on the spacecraft," Berry said. "Ed was all over the Gemini IV ... under, behind and on top of it."

The astronaut propelled himself about space with a special rocket gun.

The order from Houston mission control for White to return to the capsule was the second time ground control ordered the pilots they were not on a space picnic.

"Take some pictures," ground control ordered McDivitt and White earlier.

"One thing, when Ed gets out there and starts wiggling around, it sure makes the spacecraft tough to control," McDivitt said soon after the space walk began. In space there is no resisting friction and the 7,600-pound spacecraft moved with each touch.

While returned safely to his contour couch but there was difficulty closing the hatch. mission director Chris Kraft told reporters later. As a result, the space twins were unable to dump some of the equipment that became surplus after the space walk. It left the capsule "somewhat crowded," Kraft said.

At a late afternoon briefing, Dr. Robert Seamans, National Aeronautics and Space Administration associate director said he was "extremely pleased" with the flight. "We have already learned a lot that will be helpful in future missions."

The wives of the two stayed at their homes watching television until White completed his walk, then visited mission control headquarters, the heart of the space agency centre about 25 miles southeast of downtown Houston.

The women returned home after about 45 minutes at the control centre.

While originally planned to leave the capsule during the second orbit pass, it required more time than expected to get him hooked to his special gear —the golden tether, an emergency oxygen chest pack, the manoeuvring gun shaped like bicycle handlebars with a camera attached.

On the second orbit White reported getting a good view of Florida through his porthole—"We can see it from the top to the bottom."

Another time he said they were "looking right down at the Cape (Kennedy) now. You can see the launch complex down there quite clear."

The Gemini IV flight of 62 revolutions will take an estimated time of 97 hours and 30 minutes at 94 minutes for each circuit. It ends Monday morning.

The next Gemini flight, set for August, calls for a seven-day trip. After that an attempt will be made to actually hook up a manned spacecraft with a satellite, all a part of the man-on-the-moon program.

Activated Carbon Will Be Used in Filtration Plant

TRENTON The Trenton Public Utilities Commission, meeting on Thursday, voted to try activated carbon in the filtration plant in east Trenton with the hope of making the water more palatable. Equipment will be installed immediately, as the river water will soon start to warm up, and the taste worsen.

If the activated carbon works, the RCAF station to the east of the town will benefit, as the station uses river water exclusively. East Trenton residents for the most part are given the same spring water used by west side residents. When the canning factory in west Trenton starts working full time, east side residents may be given a mixture of Sidney Street well-water and the filtered river water.

Clifford A. Baker, commission chairman, said today the RCAF users were complain about their water, but some east Trenton residents complain all summer long, even when they're using spring water. River water was used only two weeks last summer in east Trenton, but the complaints still poured in to the commission.

As the utilities has some needed equipment, the trial run of the carbon will cost the commission only $3,000 (or less).

The unpleasant taste of the river water, (which is "pure" by rigid standards), is due to algae in the river, and carbon overcomes this in some cases . . . doesn't in others. The trial run will tell.

The Ontario Water Resources Commission engineers and the consulting firm of Gore and Storrie will not guarantee that carbon will help in Trenton's case . . . but say it's worth taking a chance.

SMALL LOSS

Around 3:15 a.m. today, Trenton firemen were called to the home of John Mumby, R. R. 4, Trenton, where a partially built one-car garage had caught on fire. Loss was small.

Teen-ager Will Not Miss Examinations

Magistrate T. Y. Wills today remanded a false-cheque charge against a 16-year-old youth, already on probation, so the teenager would not miss high school examinations.

The father of the youth — who hails from Picton and is charged with uttering a cheque for $30 — said he could see no point in getting a lawyer since it would "add more cost."

However, the magistrate, noting the date, hesitated.

"Don't you think it might be a good idea to enlarge this case until exams are over?" he suggested.

"I think it might be," agreed the accused's father.

Nazis in Toronto

Bedlam broke loose in Toronto recently at a so-called Nazi rally in Allan Gardens.

The problem arose when a Nazi rally was advertised by the mass media and about 5,000 persons turned up to protest it.

A rally never materialized. A riot did.

Toronto police insist that no Nazis were in the park when the riot started and that the people beaten up were victims of mistaken identity.

During the protest, several innocent people were beaten as Nazis and nine persons were arrested.

It is not hard to understand the strong feelings of the people protesting the rally—many of whom had suffered deep personal losses or injury at the hands of the Nazis.

One man was heard crying to police as they carried him off to the paddy wagon, "But what about my mother, what about my mother? They (the Nazis) murdered her!"

Nevertheless, mob rule can be neither tolerated or excused.

While many people were viciously attacking youths they thought to be Nazis, others shouted encouraging things like, "Get him" and "Kill him."

These cries were commonplace, by Nazis, in Germany under the Hitler regime, and were to be expected, but in Toronto in 1965 one does not expect people to lose sight of their moral code so completely that they would cheer for the use of the very Nazi tactics they had come to protest in the first place.

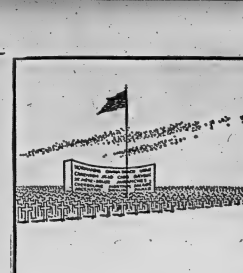
The right to political belief is sacred in a democracy.

But beliefs work two ways. One has the right to protest, but one also has the right to not to protest and to agree.

It is a sad thing to see the formation of a Nazi Party in Canada, but if our system is to remain intact, and we are to remain true to the things we have fought two wars to protect, these people have a right to their views.

Rather than mob rule, let us depend upon the good judgment of most Canadians and not lose our rationality over the actions of a few misguided individuals.

Latin-American Problem



Not long ago we referred to the Dominican revolution as likely to prove merely the forerunner of several similar revolts in Latin American countries—revolutions of the people rather than palace revolutions like those so numerous in the past, which have involved no more than a changing of the guard by the privileged classes.

The Associated Press interpretive article out of Washington now corroborates this viewpoint, though its point of focus is somewhat different. The dilemma which faced the U.S. and Latin American countries in the Dominican Republic, "and will hit them again somewhere else," the article says, is how to prevent communism from seizing control, while still adhering to the Organization of American States charter forbidding intervention, direct or indirect, in the internal and external affairs of another state.

The problem, as stated, is insoluble. What can possibly be achieved is a formula for united intervention in cases where prior intervention by communist states has occurred. A good argument can be advanced for the stand that any communist-aided revolt is proof of outside communist intervention.

The alternative to agreement on such a formula is unilateral intervention by the United States. What makes this so intriguing to some Latin American countries is that such intervention is based on reports by the CIA, or Central Intelligence Agency. That was the agency which presided over the Bay of Pigs fiasco, in the fond belief that the Cuban people would rise up against Castro at the first opportunity. It was the CIA which told President Johnson that the Dominican rebels were communist-dominated, or at least communist-infiltrated. "Now," says the Associated Press, "there are serious doubts that [in Johnson's] information was correct."

In any case, Johnson has given the FBI the task of checking on the accuracy of the CIA reports. After J. Edgar Hoover's estimation of the aims and integrity of Dr. Martin Luther King, there will be some who will wonder whether even the FBI can be trusted always to make an objective analysis of a movement with revolutionary objectives. But even if the FBI were infallible in its role as judge, having the CIA act as the "arresting officer" is likely to make more than communists in Latin America lands a little dubious about the validity of the claim these lands are truly independent.

Norwegian Chemist's Work Helped Curb Retardation

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Will you please explain the PKU disease? — B. G. W.

Gladly. "PKU" stands for phenylkenonuria, or the presence of phenylalanine in the urine.

The danger lies in the fact that this means that the body is not using up the phenylalanine derived from food.

In about 1930 a Norwegian chemist discovered that some retarded children had this excess of phenylalanine. The discovery was one of the important steps in preventing retardation.

Here is the picture. Phenylalanine is one of the amino acids, or "building blocks of the body" which we get from protein. It is essential. We have to have some. Yet when we do not properly use up this amino acid, and it accumulates in the body, it can do harm. Serious harm. It can damage the brain. And hence cause retardation.

This accumulation is the result of what is referred to as an "inborn error of metabolism." Some individuals are born with a defect in an enzyme which is vital in making use of that particular amino acid.

The child is born with normal intelligence, but as the phenylalanine builds up, the damage occurs. Once this has happened, it cannot be undone. (Even quite late in life, it is very, to some improvement, but limited, can be brought about so fas as simple activities are concerned, but such things as reasoning power and the more subtle mental processes cannot be restored.)

What, then, can be done? If the condition is discovered early in life, the child can be given a special diet which will include only small amounts of phenylalanine. The child then grows up without impairment of mental ability. It is, in short, one of the few types of mental retardation which we definitely know how to prevent!

The basic point is to feed protein from only that part of the phenylalanine has been removed. This can be done, and the child can be given a substitute as a special preparation for such children.

Low-protein foods (fruits and vegetables) can be eaten in normal quantities, along with generous amounts of carbohydrates and modest amounts of cereals. Vitamins and iron are added.

The diet must be continued indefinitely. If it is stopped, then the phenylalanine will build up again, and can damage the brain.

Obviously, the important point is to discover this PKU condition very early in life, certainly in the first few months. How do you know when a baby has PKU?

I'll discuss this tomorrow.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am taking epsom salts bath in an effort to lose weight, especially in my legs. What is your opinion of diet? — R. C.

Such baths aren't going to reduce you even by an ounce. What goes through the mouth by way of calories and what your legs and other tissues burn up as energy (exercise) affect the weight.

Note to J. P.: Psoriasis is a rough, red, scaly-breaking-out of the skin, occasionally itchy, but objectionable mostly because it looks bad. It isn't dangerous, isn't catching, and isn't predictable. Various salves can keep the skin soft and stop the itching. Since even without treatment it is known to disappear, sometimes quickly and sometimes slowly, in many cases nobody knows whether a remedy worked or the psoriasis disappeared anyway. There is no certain cure for it.

Strictly Personal

Friends Not All Chosen For Virtues

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A woman in Kansas wants to know how it is possible that a friend of hers — "a sweet and generous woman" — can have as another close friend a woman "who is a malicious gossip of the worst sort." She is puzzled by what her friend "finds" in the gossip.

What she finds, I expect, is a deeply repressed part of her own personality. Some of us do our own dirty work; others must get someone else to do it for them. For we become friends with people not only for their virtues but also for their vices.

Her example reminds me of married couples I have known, in which the husband was mild, quiet and courteous, while his wife was loud, aggressive and contentious. People observing them in action would invariably ask, "Why does he put up with it, why does he let her get away with such behavior?"

The only answer that makes sense is that he covertly enjoys such behavior. She is acting out for him some part of the attack others — a need he is unable to express directly. A large share of her initial attraction for him, no doubt, lay in his (perhaps unconscious) realization that she would be glad to do some of his dirty work for him.

The "sweet and generous" woman who has a malicious gossip for a confidante probably resents being so sweet and generous all the time, but lacks the temperament to be otherwise. So, with the cunning with which our infantile needs take revenge upon us, she selects gratefully upon a "friend" who allows her to enjoy malice without suffering any of its consequences.

What we consider "odd" friendships or marriages can hardly be explained on any other basis. Each of us has actualized only a part of his full personality; the unactualized parts (which are unacceptable to us) often find their expression through the friend or mate (or gang) we choose. This is the true meaning of the maxim that "opposites attract" — they attract because they are not really opposites, but complementaries. They expand our possible range of reaction to the world.

It works both ways, of course. The malicious gossip is in the grip of a compulsion she cannot understand or control; and as she buys an indulgence against her sins by making friends with someone who, in turn, expresses a buried part of the gossip's nature. For just as no one can be "all that sweet," no one can be all that malicious, without release.

Why should the German people have chosen Hitler? I look upon it less as more than a political or economic choice — that Europe's most orderly, most industrious, most rational, most educated, most instinctually repressed nation should have voted in the archdemon of irrationality.

Big Mules Are Kicking

Detroit Free Press

The big mules, as they call them in Alabama, are beginning to kick and kick hard.

The mules are what we in the North Country call "the power structure," or the business and professional leaders. And the mules in Alabama are kicking mostly at Gov. George Wallace.

The latest to make himself known is Winston M. Blount, president of a big Montgomery contracting company. In a speech at Birmingham, Blount said that "for too long, too many of us have permitted our region's worst enemies to speak for Alabama."

Getting more specific, he called Wallace "unbelievably callous" when the governor said after the murder of Mrs. Liuzzo that he was "glad" it was on Highway 80 than in the subways of New York.

"We cannot minimize the gravity of these deeds by comparing them with similar events in other parts of the country," Blount said. "Talk about crimes in Washington, New York or Chicago all you want, but these events occurred here, in our state."

What raised the wrath of Winston Blount is something that only he knows, but what has caused the other big mules to kick is simple: business.

According to one of the biggest mules the Free Press talked to, business in Alabama is going to pot. The tourist trade is non-existent, except for those hurtling through with as few stops as possible.

Gov. Wallace is refusing to locate in Alabama, not as a result of the call for a boycott by Martin Luther King, but because they can't get their best people to agree to move south.

Industry is also aware that it must sell its products locally, and Alabama is gradually falling to the bottom of the economic pile.

According to our big mule, private surveys show that the rate of economic growth in the state in the past decade has been the slowest in the nation. The increase in local school support is also on the bottom, with the result that of living has done well to hold its own.

The big mules are getting the message.

Their reaction is encouraging. Social changes which are long overdue have often come about from economic pressure. It is only after money has dictated a change that men will become willing to do it.

As our big mule put it, "You can't eat magnolias."

Perhaps there is hope for Alabama yet.

Too Fat for Snowshoes

Edmonton Journal

Worried about your waistline? On a diet? Your problems aren't new. Indeed, dieting came to this region 30 years after the settlement came to the North Saskatchewan.

The first fat man on record arrived at Fort Edmonton 119 years ago. He stayed several weeks before having for the Rocky Mountain House. He earned his place in history by being the first white man in the west to go on a diet.

He was a Jesuit missionary from Belgium, Rev. Jean de Smet, SJ., who had been called here in the fall of 1845 when he was a guest of the Hudson's Bay Company factor, John Rowland.

Father de Smet had undertaken a job well in keeping with his calling. He was trying to make contact with Blackfoot Indians, mostly Piegans, to persuade them to call off their bloody feud with the neighboring Flathead Indians.

Father de Smet's mission brought him from the west in the upper waters of the Missouri River system. He went from Fort Edmonton to Lac Ste. Anne and then on to the headwaters of the Athabasca River in his search for the warring Blackfoot.

At the Lac Ste. Anne mission, Rev. Father Lacombe, OMI, had begun a mission among the City Hall Clock Badly In Need of Repairs; Working in Three Weeks

Mr. Lawrence R. Doxsee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Doxsee, 36 Sinclair Street, Belleville, who will receive his Bachelor of Arts degree at the 183rd Convocation of the University of Western Ontario on June 4th. He attended Queen Mary School and graduated from Quinte Secondary School in 1962. He is with the personnel department of the Kellogg Company of Canada at London, Ontario.

Time points no public fingers in Belleville these days. It doesn't even have any heads.

The historic old city hall clock has mystified many a man in recent with its eccentric selection of times of day. Lately all reason seemed to have fled the old mechanism. Things got so bad, 'twas whispered, the pigeons smoaked off. Now, in recent days, even the hands have left the timepieces.

But, if you'll just hold on awhile, they'll be right back — with the right time.

The disappearance of the monster minute and second hands from the four faces of the clock are the only public sign of the biggest overhaul job in the old tick-tock's 85 years of tracking time.

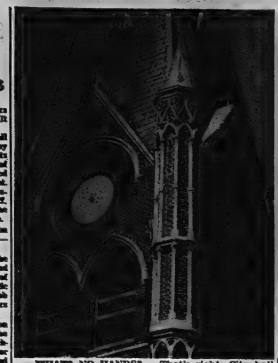
In the past two weeks — on orders of city council — the whole complex city clock mechanism has been taken apart for examination, cleaning — and replacement where necessary.

Supervising the project is the firm of O'Connor's Jewel Box, whose watchmaker Edward Imhoff — who hails from Switzerland — has been plotting the repair pattern.

It's a big job, but Mr. Imhoff hopes to have the clock running within three weeks.

Not the least part of the project was removing corrosion from the works dating back to the days of John A. Macdonald's second premiership. In fact, it took eight gallons of cleaning fluid to unearth the original surfaces of the clock's massive superwheels.

SOME REPLACEMENTS



This chore also helped point up the need for replacing some of the twelve-inch-bronze points had worn down with years of manipulation.

Shafts turned by these wheels in turn turn the hands on the clock faces. These drive shafts, originally of galvanized tin now will be replaced by aluminum products.

As for the hands themselves —this led to the biggest surprise.

Unknown to the citizenry at large, the hands have provided their city clock with a uniquely Canadian feature. They are made of wood, thickly coated with black paint.

Despite this, they are in excellent shape, said Mr. Imhoff, and need not be replaced. All that is required is a good resurfacing, on the giant-size indicators whose minute hands are almost seven feet long.

WHAT? NO HANDS? — That's right. City hall clock faces are minus hands while mechanism is overhauled.

EDWARD IMHOFF scrutinizes big minute hand of city hall clock. Those are cogwheels from clock works he's holding.

New Assessment for First Four Months Is $772,000

The city assessment department added $772,000 in new assessment to the collector's role during the first four months of 1965, according to the city manager's administration report.

At the same time, however, the city fire department reported losses of $693,000 for the same period.

Of the 772,000 added to the collectors role, 504,430 was made up in residential assessment and $288,540 in non - residential.

The big fire loss was due mainly to the razing last February of the West Robertson Block with an adjusted loss as of April 30th of $633,017.

Field work for assessment purposes for 1965 is aproximately 90 per cent completed and is expected will be finished by the end of June.

Main reason for completing the field work as early in the year is due to the contract being entered into by the city with Web Computer Services for data processing of the assessment roll.

During the first four months of the year the assessment department made a total of 9,991 calls, made up of 8,473 residential, 350 non residential, and 1,159 return calls.

Mr. Meltzer on Real Estate
"What's Your Problem?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER*

I have always advocated that a property owner never negotiate with a broker on a net listing basis (a net amount set by the owner with the broker getting the balance). Many property owners, in their ignorance, think they are placing themselves in an advantageous position if they can get the broker to accept such a listing. Often, it places the owner in the situation described below (but usually with a less ethical broker).

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am a real estate broker wrestling with a problem of conscience. Your counsel would be appreciated.

A property owner, after much haggling, gave me a net listing for $20,000 (the broker retains as a commission everything in excess of $20,000). I have received an offer of $20,00 for the property. I agree an $8,000 commission would be exorbitant. Yet the owner, of his own free will, set the price and committed himself. My role as a businessman is clashing with my conceded moral responsibility. What would you do? — A Harassed Broker.

ANSWER: A realtor finds that greater success is achieved when professional ethics and his business interests coincide. I very doubt the truth of this statement ask any successful broker. In the above case, the broker can perhaps get a temporary windfall by an unethical act, but in the long run it does not only come back to haunt him but also means less business success.

Your conscience needs are not exactly clean in this situation. If the property could be marketed for you as agent for the owner, you were duty bound to inform him. If your ignorance contributed to the great spread between listing price and offer, then you are not exactly blameless either. The professional and ethical thing to do would be to renegotiate the deal based upon a fair commission.

As an aside, the above should be a valuable lesson for readers as to the inappropriateness of net listings. You are not putting anything over on the broker if you make that type of agreement. If the price is too high, your property lies unattended as a dead listing. If it is too low you are cheated. The broker knows much more about real estate markets than you do. Take him into your confidence. Don't fight him! You can't win.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I know it's ghoulish! My father has been in his grave less than two weeks and my brothers and sisters are already fighting over his estate (there are five of us). About the only asset of value is the house in which we were raised.

It's an insult to my father's memory, but the only interest my brothers and sisters have is money. We are now fighting over the manner in which the house is to be sold. I am of the opinion that we will get more money if we put the house up for auction. The only thing we can agree on is to take your advice. — Ashamed.

ANSWER: Your family really needs much more than real estate guidance. But since it's a matter of money in all that interests them, I will limit my advice to this sector.

A typical house will usually bring a higher price in a private sale than in auction. Negotiating is the part of every transaction. An auction sale should be considered for the unusual property or when legal requirements indicate its use — but for the average house, a seller can usually obtain a better price in a private sale.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I recently signed a listing for my sliding on my house. The salesman said that his company was offering "lifetime" guarantees. I would like to know how long a period of time a guarantee of this type is good for. Perhaps you are they talking about? I tried calling the salesman for an explanation, but unfortunately his phone has been disconnected. — Mrs. J. L.

ANSWER: Practically, in your case, your "lifetime" guarantee covers the short period during which time that you signed the contract and the time that the note was discounted at the bank — a period I would estimate of approximately 24 hours.

If a guarantee is only as good as the people or company behind it. If you check with your local Better Business Bureau (which you should have done before you signed) I am sure you will find that the "lifetime" of the company has already expired.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I would like to brighten up the walls of my bathroom by replacing the hideous boards that now exist with ceramic tile. Could you please give me a guide as to what it would cost? The total I can make my plans? — Mrs. P. R. K.

ANSWER: Glazed ceramic tile wainscoting of average good quality will cost installed $1.20 per square foot. The price includes all labor and material. It may vary slightly in different localities.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answers as many letters as possible through his column.

press and less — than — carload freight shipments in and out of Toronto was extended to Hamilton, London, Brampton and Oakville in the second day of the work stoppage.

A CNR official said this does not mean that freight piled up at outgoing points (such as Toronto) will be shipped free to use other means of shipping.

The men were apparently angered over the demotion of one driver to porter. But William McGavin, recording secretary of local 440 said the drivers have been restive under the demerit system for more than a year.

Under the system points accumulate for rule infractions. Workers who accumulate 60 points may be discharged, but demerits can be worked off at the rate of 10 a year.

CNR officials said earlier that no negotiations on the demerit system can be carried out until the workers return to their jobs.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Some 25 Canadian National Railways Express freight handlers, members of local 125 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Transport and General Workers (CLC), returned to their jobs Thursday.

Officials here described the walkout Wednesday as a "protest against their working conditions" and vehemently denied any connection with a similar wildcat strike in Toronto.

Paul J. Kane, grievance chairman for the local here, said two of the three workers' most pressing problems, were the gradual abolishment of passenger train freight express department, and the company practice of not providing a relief man for a worker on vacation, both local issues only.

Sunday School Lesson
The Tragic Monument

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

In the valley of Shaveh, also known as the King's Valley, where Abraham once met with the kings of Sodom and Salem (Genesis 14:17), there once stood a strange pillar. This pillar was erected by Absalom, David's son, as a monument to himself lest he die without children, and so fail to be remembered (II Samuel 18:18). Absalom, however, managed to get himself remembered, but not with veneration. To this day, many children throw rocks at what is thought to be his grave, and even spit on it, because Absalom violated the sacredness of his family ties by rebelling against his own father.

Uniform Sunday School lesson for June 6: "David and Absalom". II Samuel 15 through 19:10.

The Rev. George Keely, a former pastor of the First Baptist Church of Haverhill, Mass., lived to see his son serve for 18 years as a deacon of that church and then for years as its Sunday school superintendent. One of the histories of this 200-year-old church says of this pastor that his son was "his greatest contribution to the church." David was not so fortunate by concerning his son, Absalom. Instead of being a credit to his father, Absalom turned out to be an ungrateful, rebellious son who would even have killed his own father to satisfy his selfish ambitions.

SOMETHING GOES WRONG

What went wrong between David and his son Absalom, we do not know. Perhaps Absalom was so inherently selfish and ambitious that nothing David could have done would have made any difference. Thomas Fuller once pointed out that often in the Bible a good father had a bad son, and sometimes a bad father had a good son. This, he humorously concluded, showed that one cannot inherit his father's piety. "That," he wrote, "is bad news for me." But neither can one inherit impiety. "That," wrote Fuller, "is good news for my son."

But perhaps the problem was not in Absalom, but in the situation in which Absalom found himself. David may have been an indulgent father. Concerning his son, Adonijah, we are told, "His father had never at any time displeased him by asking, 'Why have you done thus and so?'" (I Kings 1:6 RSV) Perhaps Absalom was so pampered and spoiled, he wanted more than he deserved — even his father's throne.

A better guess is that David had too little time for his son. After all, David was king, and kings are busy people. Solomon later said of his father, "It was in the heart of David my father to build a house for the name of the Lord." (I Kings 8:17 RSV) But David never got to fulfill that dream. A glance at the record shows one reason why. David was kept so busy fighting the enemies of Israel and building the nation, he had no time left for peacetime pursuits.

Certainly this is a problem for present-day fathers. A man's work often requires so much of his time, he has little time left for his children. He may have success, but his children do not know him. His may get rich, financial security, but very little of himself. Yet what does it profit a man to gain the whole community's leading business man if he remains a stranger to his children?

DAVID'S LOVE UNFAILING

Certainly the problem with Absalom was not a lack of love on David's part. David trusted his son. He refused to leave him capable of disloyalty until the situation became so serious David had to flee for his life. Even then, when Absalom was leading an army against him, his father's orders to the commanders, "Deal gently for my sake with the young man Absalom." (II Samuel 18:5 RSV) His first question after the battle was not, "Who won?" but, "Is it well with the young man Absalom?" (IISamuel 18:32 RSV) And when he learned of his son's death, he wept, "O my son Absalom, my son, my son Absalom! Would I had died instead of you, O Absalom, my son, my son!" (II Samuel 18:33 RSV)

Absalom's stone pillar is gone. The memory of his disloyalty to his father remains. This has become his tragic monument. But not all his disloyalty could destroy his father's love for him. In this, David reflected the father heart of God. God permits His sons to rebel against Him, but His love never forsakes them! We see this love reflected in Hosea's cry over Israel. We see it reflected more in the cry of Jesus, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem . . . how often would I have gathered your children together as a hen gathers her brood under her wings, and ye would not." (Matthew 23:37) watched the Gemini launching by television beamed via the Early Bird satellite, evening papers came out with banner headlines proclaiming: "In Orbito."

The Dutch radio relayed a direct broadcast from the Gemini launching site, this was followed by hourly progress surveys.

Moscow radio reported that Gemini launching and first stages of the flight Thursday night. It gave factual accounts of the unsuccessful attempt to approach the second stage of the rocket and the delay in White's space "walk."

In East Berlin, the East German news agency ADN reported the launching, then gave a fuller account including the failure of the space ren dezvous plan.

Czechoslovaks watched television shots of the launching while a television commentator told viewers: "The launching of Gemini IV shows the Americans are successfully developing their space program."

In Havana, Cuban press coverage of the Gemini flight contrasted strongly with the banner headlines and long descriptive accounts usually accorded Soviet space exploits, and radio news bulletins did not mention Gemini.

One morning newspaper, Hoy devoted a small two-paragraph item on the back page to the project.

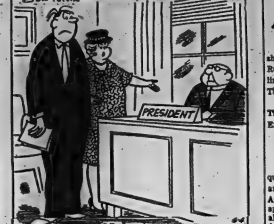
ing the new policy that Canada may soon be the world's largest single uranium supplier) It was vital that Canadian industry be in the best possible position to take advantage of expanding markets for peaceful uses of uranium.

Before sales abroad are authorized, "the government will require an agreement with the government of the importing country to ensure, with appropriate verification and control, that the uranium is to be used for peaceful purposes only"



He said outside comments that both the United States and Britain, Canada's only customers in the past were consulted on the peaceful use restriction and showed "complete understanding."

Mr. Pearson's statement said the restriction would be open to all companies that have produced uranium in Canada. He emphasized outside the House that this would apply to mines that had produced but had closed because of fading demand.

The glamorous 1965 Studebaker Daytona Sports Sedan, shown above, is the first Canadian car with transistorized ignition as standard equipment. See this sportiest version of the Common-Sense car for '65, with its decorator-matched vinyl top and smart styling. Drive it with its peppy new 195 h.p Thunderbolt V-8 engine.

Theatre Guild Plans Fall Production

Ibsen's play "Hedda Gabler" is the next aspiring production which the Belleville Theatre Guild hope to have ready for presentation in the fall.

Ibsen has often been called the father of modern drama." His works on dramatic form to ideas, to vital human problems and to the follies of the human soul. "Hedda Gabler" unfolds with intensity a character portrayal of a woman with tragic flaw that ultimately destroys her. It is a study of self-defeating individualism.

There are eight characters in "Hedda Gabler" and readings will be held at the Elks hall on Monday, June 7. Jim Alexander will direct this play and it is hoped that a play such as this will attract interested newcomers who are interested in any phase of drama.

At the same time as the play casting, there will be a casting session for the next radio play, "Hail Fellow, Well Met" by Eric Nichol. This is a comedy with 12 roles. All interested are urged to attend.

Marina Alice Bates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Bonard, North Park St., received her Bachelor of Arts degree from Queen's University at Convocation, May 22nd. Mrs. Bates has accepted a teaching position with the Frontenac District School Board.

Stenographers Engaged in Pilot Project

VANCOUVER (CP)—If a pilot project is successful, student stenographers in Vancouver can look forward to an "internship" to gain valuable on-the-job experience.

A dozen senior commercial students at the Vancouver Technical school are taking part in the project, in which each girl takes a regular stenographer's job with one of 12 participating firms.

The project, sponsored by the school and the Administrative Management Society, may be extended to commercial students in all 16 Vancouver secondary schools in September.

A typical student works from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. under the watchful eye of a head secretary and tackles all jobs usually done by professional secretaries and stenographers.

Mrs. Shirla Cameron, head of the school's commerce department, said: "They can learn more in a few hours in a real office than in listening to hours of lectures."

Mrs. Cameron said the girls get no pay.

Pat O'Brien, president of the Vancouver chapter of the Administrative Management Society, saw the plan in operation in parts of the United States and said he finds it helpful to employers.

Three Girls Are Eligible For Ballet Instruction

Three young Belleville girls have danced their way into exciting recognition — in a nation-wide competition.

They have qualified for instruction at the school of the National Ballet - in a contest noted for its rigorous demands.

The trio are student ballet dancers 16-year-old Susan Brickwood, Sally Horne, 12 and 10-year-old Angelica Bock.

All participated in National Ballet selection exercises — which draw entrants from across Canada and the United States earlier this year.

Word now has arrived they may — if they and their parents so desire — further carry their studies in the art of the dance under the tutelage of the nation's greatest ballet organization.

Susan already has seured the exciting opportunity and has enrolled in the National Ballet school — with her parents' hearty approval.

Sally Horne says she definitely will attend the Ballet's summer school, while 10-year-old Angelica also may take summer training.

Meanwhile the Belleville Ballet Guild — one of a nation - wide network of local organizations affiliated to the National Ballet — has announced formation of a fund to assist local students of promise.

Ann Landers

Successful Man Gives Credit to Nagging Wife

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Every now and then you print a letter proving that behind every successful man is a plucky, game little woman. I'm a man who has succeeded in the asphalt jungle and you are right.

My wife must be credited with a tremendous contribution to my success because she drove me out of the house with her nagging, criticizing and complaining. The office was infinitely more quiet and peaceful — and I enjoyed my work, so I became a 15-hour-a-day man, six or seven days a week. When a man puts in that kind of time, over a period of years, he's got to amount to something.

I hope you will print this letter so my wife can see it. I want her to get the credit she deserves. — CUSTOM MADE SHIRTS.

DEAR CUSTOM MADE — It's generous of you to want to give your wife all the credit. But I think she deserves some credit only for your smashing success in business, but also for your miserable failure at home.

Some men who don't want to go home don't want to stay at a motel either. They go scouting for trouble and they find it. Presumably you avoided this trap. So what do you want from me — a medal?

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Please tell me if you think our 12-year-old boy is eating too much. Last night Louis had three helpings of chicken, three helping of mashed potatoes, two pieces of apple pie and two glasses of milk. He says he's been on a third glass of milk if I had said O.K. My husband does not eat nearly so much as this boy and neither does our 14-year-old son.

Yesterday Louis came home from a Scout hike and told me he ate three hamburgers and drank three bottles of pop. He boasted "Even the Scout Master didn't eat that much." Does this sound like a problem? — A MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER — Yes. It sounds like a boy who can't get attention through acceptable channels. Some kids would eat a dishrag dipped in vinegar to capture an audience.

When you make a point that Louis eats more than his father and older brother it suggests that he is overeating to show off. His braggadocio about outeating the Scoutmaster is additional evidence.

Take the boy to a physician and let him decide if Louis should be on a diet. And stop talking about how much he eats.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'm a 30-year-old girl who lives at home and attends junior college. Last week I was dialing a friend and got a wrong number. The party on the line was pleasant, cultured and interesting. This may sound crazy but I couldn't bring myself to hang up so we talked. He said he is 34, single and gainfully employed. We are of the same religious faith although I am a regular and he is not. We have similar interests in art, books and records.

He asked for my name and number so he could call me. I refused but agreed to call him again. We've had five conversations and I am so fascinated with his voice that I can't wait until we speak again. To be honest, Ann, I'm dying to meet the fellow. Yes or no? — ANNABELLA.

* * *

DEAR ANNABELLA — Since you are both of the same faith, an ideal place to meet is in church.

If he declines the invitation disconnect him permanently. And congratulations for being smart enough not to give him your name and number.

* * *

When necking becomes petting, watch out. To learn how the smart girl keeps both her dignity and her boy friend, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting — and How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 30 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Argyll Chapter Announces Many Future Events

The closing meeting of the season was held by the Argyll Chapter of the I.O.D.E. on Wednesday with a large attendance. A most pleasant time was spent in the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Smith, starting with a bonnington-potluck supper.

Following the opening by the Regent, reports were given from the different departments.

The June project is the party to be held in the adopted school at Consecon. Mrs. H. Vaughan is convener and several of the members will assist her. This is the time a $10 bursary is presented to the pupil of highest standing, entering high school.

Mrs. A. Duffy reported 22 pounds of books sent overseas and 110 articles of clothing and knitting to H.Q. Any sewing or knitting to be finished must be turned in by the November meeting.

Mrs C. Bristol announced the date for the Citizenship Court on June 23rd at 2.00 p.m. to be followed with a reception in the Officers' Mess under the auspices of the St. Julien and Argyll Chapters.

Mrs. K. Willcocks spoke highly of the reception following the "Trooping of the Color" and on behalf of the C/O thanked Mrs. A. Cunningham, under whose chairmanship decorations and refreshments were in charge.

Mrs. P. M. Till spoke of the Blood Donor Clinic being held June 10th. Mrs. E. Refuasse read several excerpts from the reports of the Dominion convention held in Winnipeg.

The annual regional dinner will be held September 15th in the Educational hall of Holloway St. United Church. The St. Julien Chapter is the hostess branch and this event is part of their 50th anniversary program. The Argyll Chapter is holding a dessert bridge and fashion show later in September. An antique show and sale is being held in Whitby early in September.

At this time two new members, Mrs. D. Campbell and Mrs. M. Evans were inducted and welcomed into the chapter.

On behalf of the chapter Mrs. K. Willcocks presented gifts to Mrs. W. Cochrane, Mrs. T. Burtt and Mrs. R. F. Hatton who are leaving Belleville.

A sincere vote of thanks was offered to Mr. and Mrs. Smith for the use of their cottage and the meeting adjourned.

WOMEN TEND SECONDS

In the Kabyle region of Algeria, women look after the vegetable gardens while their men tend the more important olive trees.

Club Activities

2nd THURLOW — About 30 members and visitors of the Neighbor's Aid gathered at the Aid Hall on Wednesday afternoon. The president, Mrs. Manley Mitchell was in the chair and thanked the hostess, Mrs. William Lazarike. The treasurer, Mrs. A. Mitchell, gave the financial report.

Mrs. Gerald Smeltzer will be June hostess and Mrs. Thomas Belmap will convene the last euchre for the season on June 9th.

The meeting was handed over to the program convener Mrs. Fred Mitchell, who called on Mrs. A. Mitchell to introduce the guest speaker, Mrs. Eyrie Sammons (nee Kay Homan.) Mrs. Sammons lived in Armdale, New South Wales, Australia, for about five years, and showed slides of her trip to Australia, starting at Calgary and continuing through Vancouver, Hawaii, Fiji Islands, New Zealand, Sidney, Australia. She told of the sheep and wool industry, and of how rough land which cannot be ploughed is seeded to permanent pasture by airplanes. Mrs. Sammons also told about the growing and harvesting of sugar cane.

Mrs. Mitchell presented Mrs. Summers with a gift as the conclusion of her talk. Mrs. Manley Mitchell played an accordion solo and the meeting closed with lunch served by Mrs. Gene Stratton, Mrs. J. Kirk and Mrs. H. Grills.

Readers' Friday Column

QUESTION:

. . . Please advertise in the meal column again the Hollandaise Sauce Never Fail . . . Thanking you in advance . . . No Name.

ANSWER:

Please remember next time to send your name and address.

NEVER FAIL - HOLLANDAISE:

Beat 2 egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Add ½ teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper. Melt ½ cup butter. Add 2 tablespoons butter, a little at a time beating constantly. Then slowly beat in remaining butter alternately with 1 tablespoon lemon juice.

QUESTION:

You mentioned sweetening raw pineapple with sucaryl. Would you tell me how to do it? . . . Mazzie R.

ANSWER:

SHREDDED PINEAPPLE (sugarless):

Wash pineapple, and with sharp knife cut off spine and a slice from bottom, then cut skin off in long strips. Remove all eyes with small sharp paring knife. Stand pared pineapple on large platter and with strong four-pronged silver meat fork shred it right down to the core. Put pulp in bowl. In 1 cup boiling water dissolve 7 or 8 sucaryl tablets and stir into shredded pineapple.

NOTE:

You could use 1 or 2 more sucaryl tablets or sucaryl liquid to taste if you prefer.

QUESTION:

My husband likes beef pot roasts, but I gave myself a burned hand from spattering fat and want to know if pot roast could be done in the oven . . . Marg. E.

ANSWER:

Yes it can and yours is a good question because beef seems to be selling at bargain prices during recent weeks.

OVEN POT ROAST:

Turn oven control to "preheat" at 500 deg. Fahr. with door slightly ajar.

For a 4-lb. tied blade roast melt ¼ cup shortening or bacon drippings in roasting pan on top of stove. Remove from heat. Salt and pepper the meat. Carefully lower prepared roast into melted fat in pan and put in oven to sear at high heat with top surface of roast not more than 4" from top burner, cautiously turning roast over when top is brown to brown other side. (Note: This type of searing does not decrease the roast as much as top-of-stove searing but later roast takes on typical rich pot roast dark color.) This oven searing takes about ¼ hour. Add ½ cup water, cover, reduce heat to 275 deg. Fahr., shut oven door and turn oven control to "bake". Roast for 5 hours. One and one-quarter hours before serving time add potatoes (large ones should be cut in half), carrots, small onions and sprinkle with salt. Raise heat to 375 deg. Fahr. Cover and after ½ hour turn vegetables over, cover again and cook 30 minutes longer.

Susanna's Family Fare

COTTAGE COLLAGE

Dear Susanna: We've just come home from a happy cottage weekend and it reminded me of a most successful project our family undertook last summer.

One beautiful day we returned from a two hour walk in the country and together we constructed a mural of the sights we had seen.

First we covered an area of one wall of the cottage with large sheets of plain smooth paper. Then we reproduced everything we could remember about our outing. It was one of those undertakings where "anything goes" and if ever there was a cottage, this was it! Someone would paint a blue sky while the next person added fleecy clouds of absorbent cotton—this is also good for representing sheep grazing. Pine trees had real needles and baby pine cones stuck to them, while strips of dark brown cardboard from a box of chocolates were cut to make railroad ties. Ice cream sucker sticks made fine crossing signals. Brown wool was used to sew an outline of a car onto the background and a long strip of crinkly foil wrap made a lovely, sparkling stream.

We worked on it, off and on, for days, and when father came up on the weekend, to every one's delight he was absolutely flabbergasted by our masterpiece. This makes a really fine summer undertaking and I wish theatre designer.

would certainly recommend it highly as a holiday project. — Mrs. P. M. Whitney

Would birds be fun as a bit of variation? The dearest ones I've seen were made from cardboard toilet tissue rollers. The roller is the body — paint it any color, and let the child use his own imagination and materials to shape and form the head, tail, wings, and legs — tissue paper, play dough, felt, pipe cleaners, felt, cotton — almost anything will do. — SUSANNA

CLEANING CEMENT

Dear Susanna: A paste of washing soda and water is ideal for removing grease patches from the garage floor or the driveway. Sprinkle the paste on so that the spots are well covered — leave them overnight and hose off with water and an old broom in the morning. You will see the grease roll away before your eyes.

You may be interested to know I am compiling a scrapbook of your hints and keep adding to it — it must be getting quite interesting as my friends borrow it quite often now. — Mrs. H. G. Jahrow

Use an OLD cement or asphalt only — washing soda might make new cement scale! — SUSANNA

U.C.W. Meetings

CANNIFTON U. C. W.

The Evening Unit of Cannifton U.C.W. met in the church, recently.

The President, Phyllis Parks welcomed the guests from the Afternoon Unit. Doris Ellsworth read the minutes and Mildred McPherson gave the card report.

The Afternoon Group extended an invitation to their open meeting on Wednesday evening.

Doreen Reynolds gave a short reading to open the worship service. She was assisted by Margaret Shorey.

GUEST SPEAKER

Miss Pam Eadie, a teacher at the O.S.D.; was guest speaker and she showed some interesting slides of her work with the deaf in Puerto Rico, a few summers ago. There are 15 or 16 pupils in the Mission school out of 3 or 4 thousand deaf on the island and this is on a par with other education here. The Spanish language is the common tongue but the children are taught the Gospel by sign language as it is much quicker. Miss Eadie asked the Unit to pray for the Deaf and the great need on the island.

The meeting closed and coffee and doughnuts were served.

Successful Living

Wife's Successes Too Much, Hubby Loses Self-respect

DEAR DORIS — At what point would you say a marriage is no longer worth trying to save?

Our first ten years were happy. Then my husband failed in business and had a breakdown. I went to work, cared for the children, shuttled back and forth to see him in hospital.

Then a peculiar thing happened. My husband seemed to pull away from me, and couldn't bear to have me touch him. The psychiatrist said he would come out of it.

He never has. He is rude to us and unhappy. So now we live in the same house, I cook his meals, make his bed (we've slept apart for three years), and I still work half-time. We rent two rooms to college students so I feel he doesn't even have to support me.

In all fairness I must say the children love him and he them. But I don't think the atmosphere in our home is good for them to grow up in. — SEARCHING.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR SEARCHING — The shock of failure and illness was too much for your husband. You rescued the ship but in the doing dealt a death blow to his self-respect.

No longer does he see you as a lovable clinging vine, and apparently a competent business woman is not his idea of a helpmate. He can never put this into words; to do so would be admitting something.

Until he can perish the thought that he is just an "also ran" he'll probably remain withdrawn. Is there food for thought here? Could you talk things over with a counsellor? You at least have his love for the children on which to build.

* * *

Confidential to NEED HELP — Wait a little longer. When you do tell your friend about your past, explain the circumstance and make it clear that you are very sorry for this one mistake. He must understand that you don't want to hurt him, but that you prize his friendship too much to fail to tell him the truth.

* * *

(Ask Doris for the information you need. If she doesn't know she'll find out from one of her consultants. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Mother's Helper

IF YOU'RE out shopping in the dime store, pick up a few ten-cent toys (if you can find them) to put away for emergency use. Then when there's a rainy day or a sudden illness, you'll be prepared with a supply of surprises for your youngsters.

Wives of Gemini Spacemen Watching Historic Flight

HOUSTON (AP)—The wives of the Gemini IV spacemen visited the tightly guarded mission control centre here Thursday to watch scientists direct their husbands' historic flight.

Mrs. Edward H. White told reporters as she left the nerve centre that her two children are so proud of their father "they could burst; they just don't know what to do."

Asked if she recognized her husband's voice when he spoke from outside the spacecraft, she said: "I could hear him laughing. I wasn't worried. I knew it would work out all okay."

"I hope to go somewhere with him," the pretty blonde said. "I think they'll give him some time off. If I have my way, we'll go to Colorado."

She said her mother, Mrs. Daniel J. Finegan, of Washington, D.C., was just as thrilled by the flight as she was. She talked to her mother on the telephone during the day, and planned to call her husband's parents later.

Mrs. James McDivitt, looking a little tired but wearing a broad smile, drove to the control building with a space agency official. "We were all having a ball," she said laughingly to reporters, "and we still are."

The vivacious brunette was somewhat taken aback by all the attention she was getting, but seemed to enjoy it all.

The women returned to their nearby homes after spending about 45 minutes at the control building. They did not talk to their husbands on the Gemini communications facilities.

The Gemini IV mission was the first space flight to be controlled by the Houston space centre.

Nurse Schools Are Proposed

OTTAWA (CP)—Health Minister Matthew B. Dymond of Ontario said Thursday the province plans to create 24 new regional nursing schools by 1971.

Dr. Dymond said the new schools, aimed at meeting Ontario's growing need for registered nurses, will increase the number of nurses graduating annually to 5,000 in the next six years.

About 110 Ontario hospitals would be involved. Each of the new schools would draw on the facilities of surrounding affiliated hospitals.

Dr. Dymond outlined the plan at the first of four special conferences on nursing education which was attended by over 90 delegates from 25 Ottawa Valley hospital boards. Further details are to be given at conferences in London June 7 and in Toronto June 9 and 11.

A life resident of the Bay of Quinte area, Mr. Vanclief was born in Prince Edward County and attended high school at Belleville Collegiate before joining the John R. In June, 1963, he graduated from the Canadian School of Embalming and in August of the following year left Bush's to become a casket salesman.

However, he continued to live in Belleville at 105 West Bridge Street. He is a member of Holloway Street United Church and belongs to The Belleville Lodge, A.F. & A.M., No. 123.

POPULATION RISING

EDMONTON (CP)—Canada's population will increase to 22,000,000 within four years, Dr. Yoshiko Kasahara of the bureau of statistics said Thursday. It now is about 19,000,000. Dr. Kasahara told the annual meeting of the Canadian Public Health Association that the increase will come from a sustained high birth rate, coupled with a new flow of immigrants.

Strike Could Halt Many Big Contracts

OTTAWA (CP) — Close to $200,000,000 in commercial construction will be halted here Monday if about 2,000 laborers bricklayers and carpenters carry out their threat to strike.

A public works spokesman said about $31,000,000 in government projects alone would be tied up by the three-union walkout.

The strike would affect 6,000 workers — about 4,000 outside the union—with an estimated payroll of about $1,000 000 a week.

The unions are the International Laborers' Union, with about 1,000 members, the Bricklayers, Masons, Tile and Terrazzo Workers, with about 350, and the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, with about 800. All three are associated with the Canadian Labor Congress.

The laborers and the bricklayers have asked for a closed shop, the right to refuse work on a project where there is work-stoppage or a picket line a clause required by contractors to hold back money when the sub-contractors are not meeting pay days and the right for union agents to visit job sites.

A union spokesman said the contractors had offered them an 18-cent-an-hour raise over a two-year period, while they had asked for a 30-cent increase over a one-year period.

The parties said negotiations never reached wage discussions. The contractors had given a flat no to their other demands.

Isle Royale, Lake Superior, One of Last U.S. Frontiers

By HARRY McCULLAGH

Coast - to - coast train travel in Canada today may be enjoyed for little more than the proverbial song. Those who have made this fascinating journey are familiar with the Lake Superior coastline from Marathon, Ontario, west to the Lakehead cities of Port Arthur and Port William. From Marathon the railroad winds its way beneath towering cliffs, past bays and rocky inlets, and through lakeside communities with picturesque - sounding names like Terrance Bay, Schreiber, Rossport and Red Rock.

From the train you gaze upon the world's largest freshwater lake, a vast inland sea which, in the gentle calm of summer, is blue perfection — and in rough weather a seething maelstrom as dangerous as any storm at sea. In winter the lake sometimes freezes in its entirety, as was the case two years ago. Mariners fear and respect Lake Superior, for it has many moods.

At Port Arthur is some of the most spectacular scenery on the entire trans-continental route. Guarding the entrance to Thunder Bay is Sibley peninsula ("The Sleeping Giant") once a region of valuable silver deposits, today a summer resort. Over toward Port William are Mount McKay in winter the haunt of skiers, and the aptly - named Pie Island.

But beyond all this, beyond the confines of the harbor region and Thunder Bay and Sibley peninsula is a long, thin outline on the horizon which arouses the curiosity of every observant traveller.

This is the island of Isle Royale, whose rocky shores are among the hazards shipping on the lake must face. Apart from that, Isle Royale is a geographical, historical and political anomaly. For although it lies closer to Canada and was once claimed—unofficially at least—by Canada, the island is actually United States territory.

A national park and game reserve, as well as an off-the beaten-track vacation resort, Isle Royale belongs to the state of Michigan.

The island's curious geographical position once caused a flurry in relations between the United States and Canada when, so the story goes, some Lakehead citizens felt the island should be ceded to Canada. Then in 1907, in a comic re-enactment of this earlier claim, an "invasion party" of bearded Lakehead citizens, celebrating there were regarded as magic tall mans and traded with tribes as far away as the Aztecs in Mexico. Today, the old mine shafts which the Indians worked long ago are still pinpointed in large scale maps of the island.

Linked as it is with the early history of the North American continent, before the coming of the white man, Isle Royale came by its modern name during the 17th century French explorations of the region. It was a French merchant, Sieur Dulhut who gave his name to the city of Duluth.

But although Isle Royale is on the map, it is somehow not of this world. Like some special island of the imagination, a Ball Hai, it remains today a remote, lonely place of forest trails, lakes and wild life — one of the last frontiers, known only to a few.

BRITONS CLOTHE RUSSIA

British firms now are selling more than $1,000,000-worth of wool textiles to Russia each year.

Port Arthur's Centennial Year landed at Isle Royale's Washington Harbor and planted a Union Jack on this remote corner of U.S. territory. This little sally was taken in good part, and the only "shooting" that was done in defence was by a handful of rather dumb-founded Americans — armed with cameras.

But Canadians wishing to visit the island in the ordinary way must cross the border into Minnesota where, at Grand Portage, boats leave for the island during the summer months.

Legend has it that when the Indians saw an island rise slowly from Superior some 5,000 years ago they believed the Great Spirit, Manitou, had created it as a sacred place. The pure copper nuggets they found

Taste this label

Tastes like paper, doesn't it? All labels taste like that. Yet there are people who are "label tasters" when it comes to wine. Give them an "imported" label and the wine—excellent! Give them a Canadian label—faugh!

Hide the label on any of the fine wines listed below and these poor people are bewildered. Because these wines taste as good as wines imported from any country in the world. They should. They're made from grapes every bit as good as those grown anywhere. We should know. It took us almost thirty years and well over a million dollars to grow them here.

President Champagne Canada's prize champagne. For any dinner, all gala occasions, especially weddings and anniversaries.
Cream Sherry A favourite of sherry connoisseurs. An appetizer wine of outstanding merit.
President Sauterne A light white wine for the table. With fish, fowl, white meats, salads.
President Port A distinguished dessert wine. With cheese, desserts, after dinner.
President Sherry Ideal before dinner; with hors d'oeuvres, soup course.
President Extra Dry A dry delicate wine that inspires encomiums from all who try it. With fish, white meat, salads.

Dear Hal Letter Case Goes to Jury Today

VANCOUVER (CP)—After a week of listening to testimony about politics and persuasion, a 12-man jury is due to retire today for a decision in the case of the "Dear Hal" letter.

The Crown seeks conviction of public relations man Al Williamson, 60, on two counts of forgery in connection with a letter he admits writing May 4, 1964, and which bore the signature "W. A. C. Bennett," premier of British Columbia.

It is charged that the letter is a forgery and that Williamson uttered a forgery by causing recipient Hal Dornan, aide to Prime Minister Pearson, to act on it as if it was genuine.

Williamson's lawyers have sought to prove a privileged relationship between Williamson and Premier Bennett, allowing him to write letters on behalf of the premier. They state the signatures was genuine.

With the last-minute introduction of a surprise witness, lawyers concluded their evidence and cross - examination Thursday.

Today the lawyers were to deliver their summations and Mr. Justice F. Craig Munroe was to turn the case over to the Supreme Court jury.

FACES CHARGES

The letter is purported to support millionaire Harry Stonehill in his application for landed immigrant status in Canada. Stonehill, American who came here after making a post-war fortune in the Philippines, has been denied this status. He now faces charges in the U.S. under the American Bills of Lading Act.

The last person on the witness stand Thursday was Einar Gunderson, former B.C. finance minister and a confidant of Mr. Bennett.

Testifying for the Crown in rebuttal, he gave his version of a conversation with Williamson last Feb. 19.

Gunderson said Williamson "told me of an indiscretion he had committed."

"Then he suggested that I get in touch with the premier, who had by then denied sending the letter, and ask the premier to make a statement that he had forgotten he sent the letter and acknowledge that he had actually sent it.

"I told him that if he had a confession to make he had better make it to the premier himself."

READ FROM DIARY

Williamson's version of the same conversation came from an entry in his diary. The defendant quoted Gunderson as saying there was "no case against me as I had written many letters for W. A. C. B."

"In this case I had only exceeded my authority. 'It's too bad we didn't have the premier send the letter. But don't worry about it.'"

An RCMP handwriting expert testified earlier that the signature on the letter was not written by the premier.

Williamson said Thursday that the signature was on a sheet of the premier's letterhead, which had been taken to his office among material left over from a trip with the premier up the Pacific Great Eastern Railway line in the fall of 1963.

Williamson said that over several years he had often received samples of the premier's signature to place on various statements and reports the office was preparing.

Parliament At a Glance

THURSDAY, June 3, 1965

The Commons continued discussion of the proposed rules changes, voting down a Conservative amendment.

Prime Minister Pearson announced a uranium stockpiling program and restrictions to ensure all sales abroad are for peaceful purposes.

Uranium oxide would be purchased at $4.50 a pound from companies which have produced it previously.

A proposal by Gordon Aiken (PC — Parry Sound - Muskoka) was defeated by a vote of 122 to 69 in the rules debate.

It would have limited speaking time during debates to 20 minutes for all MPs except the prime minister and the opposition leader.

Solicitor - General Mac-Naught said proposed time limits during legislation debate should come to a vote.

Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg North Centre) said the government should drop the proposal.

An NDP amendment that would have set 20 minutes as the time limit for all speakers except party leaders was withdrawn.

George McIlraith, government House leader, then brought in one that would allow time limits if they are agreed to by an all-party committee.

Marines Repulse Attack

From AP-Reuters

SAIGON (CP)—Heavy ground fighting continued across South Viet Nam today and government casualties today rose to at least 239 killed, missing or wounded during the last 24 hours.

South Vietnamese troops were caught in two more Communist ambushes, one a following action by the Viet Cong to an earlier ambush near Lao Thien, about 150 miles northeast of Saigon.

In the Mekong Delta, government forces fought a day long battle Thursday trying to bottle up strong guerrilla units at Cai Lay, about 50 miles southwest of Saigon.

The Viet Cong, blasting back with .50-calibre machine-guns, broke out of the envelopment but suffered heavy losses, a spokesman said.

LOSE TWO MARINES

U.S. marines beat off an attack by an estimated 50 guerrillas in a 15-minute skirmish near Le My, a Communist-infested string of hamlets about six miles northeast of the Da Nang air base. Two marines were wounded and three guerrillas were known killed.

The battle was described as the hottest the 2nd Marine Battalion has taken part in since it arrived in Viet Nam April 10.

U.S. navy and air force planes made seven strikes against targets in North Viet Nam, including a Communist military headquarters and communications centre at Ban Ma Mouk, 90 miles southwest of Hanoi.

Meanwhile, a high - ranking U.S. military officer today reported strong evidence of North Vietnamese troops were cut to pieces in a double ambush Thursday.

The officer, speaking at Pleiku, headquarters of the South Vietnamese 2nd Corps, said men of the North Vietnamese 325th Army Division appeared to be operating in four provinces — Pleiku, Kon Un, Darlac and Thu Bon.

"Thu Bon province was the scene of Thursday's Viet Cong ambush of South Vietnamese in an area 25 miles northeast of Saigon and 50 miles southeast of Pleiku.

Only 80 survivors were reported of the 350-man South Vietnamese battalion. U.S. military officials said the fate of the rest was still unknown.

Government troops also lost more than 50 men in two other smaller ambushes in Kon Un and Darlac provinces.

3 High School Students To Enjoy Trip to Coast

C. MYWAART

D. BRUNET

L. MINAKER

Three young Belleville high school students, one each from the three Bay of Quinte District secondary schools, early in July will enjoy an early July vacation in British Columbia as guests of the Federal government.

The three young students, Lora Minaker of Belleville Collegiate; Catharina Mywaart of Quinte and Don Brunet of Moira, have been chosen to represent Belleville high schools on the Youth Travel Program sponsored by the Centennial Committee of the Federal Government.

Along with other lucky high school students from this part of the province they will leave July 5th by train for the West Coast.

Purpose of the students' visit is to broaden students' outlook and to increase their knowledge of the sister province.

ONLY ONE FROM CITY

Of the three representatives from local high schools to make the trip only one, Don Brunet is actually from Belleville. He lives at 78 Pinza Square. Catharina lives at R.R. 2, Belleville, and Lora at R.R. 2, Ameliasburg.

For all three it will be the first trip to Western Canada.

While local students are visiting British Columbia, the Belleville area will be playing host to 34 students from Saskatchewan. Twelve boys and 12 girls from that province will be in the Belleville area for about a week late in July.

Sharply-worded Assault Made On RCMP Head

OTTAWA (CP) — Douglas Fisher, deputy leader of the New Democratic Party, launched a sharply - worded assault in the House tonight on RCMP Commissioner G. B. McClellan.

He charged that recent evidence suggested Canada's number one Mountie had "a bit of bigotry and bias in his soul," lacked appreciation for parliamentary democracy and "warranted a good close look" by the government.

Mr. Fisher's criticism, made during a non-confidence amendment debate, drew equally strong support for Commissioner McClellan from Justice Minister Favreau.

He said recent remarks by the commissioner, which drew Mr. Fisher's ire, were fully warranted and added that there was no constructive criticism in referring to "a devoted public servant in contemptuous terms."

Mr. Fisher, MP for Port Arthur, based his criticism on two recent developments. One was a Toronto Telegram interview in which Commissioner McClellan said there are "similar forces" working to destroy the RCMP; the other a letter to the CBC written by the commissioner complaining about a television commentary.

NAMED COMMENTATOR

The reference to bigotry came when Mr. Fisher said the commissioner had referred four times in his letter to the CBC that commentator Anthony Wright of the Parliamentary Press Gallery worked for the West German news agency.

As for the reference to "sinister forces," Mr. Fisher said this appeared to include critics of the RCMP in Parliament.

"If by being critical of the RCMP we are part of a sinister force, then the RCMP and its commissioner deserve a good close look. I for one take a serious view of this gentleman and his views on freedom and parliamentary democracy."

While criticizing the commissioner personally, Mr. Fisher also had some harsh words for the RCMP's performance in general.

There had been one real threat to security recently and that was caused by separatist terrorists in Quebec "And where was the RCMP?"

Charles I. Wilson, left, president of Wilson Concrete, shows the quality of cement produced by the Spiroll machine to A. N. S. Kulasinghe of Ceylon. D. M. Ceylon Plans to Build Three Apartments a Day Says Leading Engineer

One of the world's leading engineers, A. N. S. Kulasinghe of Ceylon, visited Belleville yesterday.

Mr. Kulasinghe is chairman of the State Engineering Corporation of Ceylon and chief engineer of the Colombo Ports Commission.

He was in Canada representing the Ceylon government as part of that country's massive housing campaign designed to alleviate the serious housing shortage in Ceylon.

Mr. Kulasinghe visited Wilson Concrete in Belleville to study the operation of the Spirolll corefloor Extruder, a machine that makes hollow-core concrete slabs in seconds for flooring and roofing.

He is planning to purchase four of these huge machines as a beginning of the Ceylon project.

"We are going to build three apartment buildings a day in Ceylon," he said, "and even this will not be enough to overcome the serious housing shortage.

"I started in this work in 1949 and have 2,000 men in my workshop, most of whom started with me and trained with me since that time.

"We have the manpower and the skilled help to carry out this project. The only thing we don't have much of is money."

Mr. Kulasinghe was accompanied on his inspection of the Spirolll machine by Percy Thompson, field engineer for Spirolll, and by Charles I. Wilson, president of Wilson Concrete, and D. M. Curzon, vice-president.

The Spirolll machine at Wilson Concrete is one of only three now installed and operating in Canada. It was put on the market three years ago, after seven years in the developing stage.

The best machine of its kind available, it was invented in Canada by Spirolll and is manufactured at their factory in Winnipeg. The firm also has a London office. Because of conditions of the Colombo Plan, through which Mr. Kulasinghe is financing his purchases, he will have to finalize the deal through the London office rather than through Winnipeg.

The Spirolll machine turns out long casting beds on a track. The machine is actually propelled along the bed by the force generated from within its molding chamber.

After steel supports are laid along the beds, concrete is poured into the top of the Spirolll extruder, and in much the same way as a coffee machine in a supermarket, operates, concrete slabs are formed.

The machine produces the slabs at the rate of three and one-half linear feet per minute. The density of the concrete, due to the pressure of the machine in operation, will support a man's weight without any sign of a footmark immediately after the concrete is cast.

The next step is to cut the slabs to the desired length with a diamond-edged cutter, after which they are prepared for shipping.

Spirolll's representative Mr. Thompson said, "We are proud to have our machine installed at Wilson Concrete. This company is one of the country's leading operations of its kind."

Mr. Kulasinghe, after leaving Belleville, went to Toronto where he will spend today, and then he will fly to Paris. He plans to return home to Ceylon in about one week.

Presbyterian Church Reports Small Gain

TORONTO (CP) — A statistical report to the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada Thursday showed that the number of communicants in the church only increased by 188 to 202,566 in 1964.

The church has 808 ministers and 1,168 congregations. In the 1961 federal census, some 818,000 persons listed themselves as Presbyterians.

Rev. G. Deane Johnston of Brantford earlier had the committee of inter-church relations that the church is holding consultations with the United Church of Canada to co-ordinate church extension into new residential areas.

Prof. John Wevers of Toronto told the general assembly that further steps have been taken to launch a capital funds campaign to raise $5,500,000 for the church in 1967.

U.S., France Co-ordinate Their Nuclear War Plans

OTTAWA (CP)—The United States and France have co-ordinated their nuclear battle plans to meet any Russian assault, informed sources here say.

This means the U.S. knows which targets the French would hit with nuclear weapons and that France knows which targets the U.S. would take care of. At the same time, each has battle plans to cover as many targets as it can in circumstances under which the other country would not act.

Informants said this is one of the major reasons that Defence Minister Hellyer told the Commons Thursday that the area of agreement among NATO defence ministers on the alliance's defence strategy "are in fact very great."

Mr. Hellyer said that at the NATO meeting in Paris Monday and Tuesday "a concensus did emerge to the effect that the differences were largely theoretical."

The U.S. holds to a policy known as "flexible response" which means, in effect, you answer a bullet with a bullet and don't try to kill one soldier with a megaton nuclear bomb. The French position is said to be retaliation against Russia with nuclear weapons no matter how minor the provocation.

Hellyer believes any Soviet attack would be intended as an all-out smash at Europe and it would build up in a matter of hours to a nuclear exchange in which American and French nuclear forces would be brought into play.

In effect, therefore, there was no practical difference between the U.S. and French strategies.

Canada is aware of Anglo-French - U.S. nuclear battle plans because it has a liaison officer at U.S. Strategic Air Command headquarters.

The targets for RCAF nuclear bombers in Europe are selected by NATO, in consultation with Canadian officers.

Canada has been invited to participate in discussions by the major NATO powers on the U.S.-proposed seaborne nuclear force and the British-proposed allied nuclear force.

Informants said the government has reached no decision on participation but is leaning toward taking part because of the possible effect of these discussions on the future RCAF bomber force in Europe.

SPORTS SLICES

By Geo. H. Carver
Sports Editor

The mighty Yankees, American League and world series flagpole sitters since the Roaring Twenties when baseball's big wigs had their "Murderers Row—Murderers Ball" was top-peach on the hit parade, have fallen from grace.

That, if you listen to the walls and alibis of the baseball buffs who worship at the Bronx Bombers' shrine, is by of these because the old man was an addict, is as great a calamityspe as the hair-lifting hassle at Little Big Horn, two world wars, and the Kennedy assassination.

"It's great to be great," philosophized Muskmouth, our Zorich Island sports analyst, "for the simple reason when you stop being great people either sympathize, wonder why or laugh themselves to death. If you're mediocre or an also-ran, they couldn't care less."

Not since June 1925, have the pride of the Bronx looked anywhere and seen four league pennants looking down their noses at them. Today, forty years later, they are in eighth position with two cellar steps separating them from the furnace room.

And across town from the Stangeless lair of the New York Metropolitans comes the gutteral gurgles of the National League faithful "O Shea Can You See."

Not that the fall of the mighty from grace mattered much. Last year with the Yankees riding high behind their squat, stocky fall guy, Yogi Berra, the Gotham fun faithful stormed the then-new Stadium some 400,000 stronger than the Madison Avenue throng that grey-flannels the Stadium.

But the Yankee pride was hurt. So much that the brass decided to use drastic measures. They wooed 16,000 back drivers of Gotham with a free-ticket plan to see the home games. They wooed the city's high school kids with a special night set aside for holders of school cards. "Ya dropouts need apply." Most of 'em were driving hacks anyway.

The crowning achievement came when they assigned four or five of the most brilliant stars in the Yankee firmament to personally canvass New York firms to buy blocks of tickets for employees.

Imagine Elston Howard, Joe Pepitone, Tom Tresh and Whitey Ford, unfamiliar when not wearing the famous black-striped uniform, getting the brush-off because some assistant secretary to the secretary to the private secretary of a third vice-president thought they were selling refrigerator?

The Yankees consistently sprinkled with stardust, always had three or four scintillating stars in their diadem. Ruth, Gehrig, DiMaggio—you can name them by the dozen over four decades.

But what Yankee team in recent memory consistently had to start the daily chores with three of its shiniest stars in injury eclipse. That's what happened when Mantle, Maris and Elviston Howard were all out of action at the same time.

And if this handicap wasn't bad enough the established regulars who were fortunate enough to escape the injury plague suddenly were shackled with semi-paralysis when armed with bats.

Mantle, when he was able to play, Bobby Richardson and Tommy Tresh were the only ones without tired blood. The rest were slumped in the biggest helpless mire in many a baseball moon.

Chicago, Minnesota, Detroit and the Orioles could come down the back stretch in a thundering neck-to-neck run for the pennant-carers.

But don't forget—back there behind them desperately trying to eat the margin of eight "furlongs" with Jockey Slump Injury holding a tight rein, is "Yankee Hopes" who has many pennants and series flags in his tack room than a dozen Derby winners.

And as Muckmouth opines, "Them that has—gits." With their walking wounded off crutches or out of the casts, and the slump overdue for a vacation, the Damyankees could carbon-copy former years and the Yankees could carbon-copy former years and come in under the wire leading the pack.

That's a possibility. The handicap is a big one with the four current leaders intent upon giving the world series pudding a different American League flavor this year.

CHIEFS BEAT TIGERS

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—Detroit Tigers were limited to one hit Thursday night as their International League farm club, Syracuse Chiefs, shut-out the big American Leaguers 4-0 in an exhibition game. Pesky Mets Clip Bucs' String At 12

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Who has the longest winning streak in the National League? Why, New York Mets, winners of 306 games in a row.

The Mets, unbeaten in four games including a tie with Chicago Cubs last Sunday, replaced Pittsburgh as the team with the longest current winning streak by knocking off the Pirates 8-6 Thursday night and ending their string of successes at 12.

It was that kind of night.

Sandy Koufax started for Los Angeles and wound up as one of nine shell-shocked pitchers when the Dodgers finally whipped St. Louis Cardinals 11-15 and boosted their first-place edge to five games.

Meanwhile Milwaukee Braves crept into second place, downing San Francisco Giants 10-3 despite being held hitless after the third inning.

In the only other game, Houston Astros defeated Cincinnati Reds 9-3.

The Mets scored two runs in the third inning, then exploded for six more in the fourth as Ed Kranepool and Joe Christopher each drove in a pair. Then in the eighth inning with an 8-0 lead Galen Cisco started to play schoolmarm with the Pirate bats.

Roberto Clemente tripled. Willie Stargell homered. Exit Cisco. Enter Larry Miller. Three singles, another run, another Met pitcher, Tom Parsons. Parsons held Dan Pagliaroni to a sacrifice fly and Jerry Lynch to a two-run homer, the 17th pinch-hit shot of his career.

Parsons got out of the six-run inning and then retired the side 1-2-3 in the ninth.

Koufax never got past the third inning at St. Louis as the Cardinals took a 7-3 lead. But there were a few hits still to come. There were 29 in all, 15 by the Dodgers.

After four innings the score was tied 7-7, but the Cardinals pulled ahead in the fifth when Bob Skinner smacked a pinch-hit two-run homer and Julian Javier followed with his first homer of the season.

The Dodgers scored one in the seventh and went in front to stay in the eighth when pinch hitter Wes Parker doubled and scored on Jim Gilliam's single before Ron Fairly put the finishing touches on with a two-run homer.

The Braves jammed all their hits and runs into the first three innings, coupling for nine runs in the third—the biggest inning in the majors this season.

Bob Shaw was the victim of the uprising as winning pitcher Ken Johnson, Mack Jones and Eddie Mathews each drove in two runs. Matthews did his damage with a two-run homer, the 19th and last hit for the Braves, who were handcuffed the rest of the way by Bill Hands and Bob Bolin.

Things were a little more routine at Cincinnati, where Rusty Staub drove in four runs for the Astros with a homer and a sacrifice fly.

A Hassle Of Hits

Trudeaus Trim Trenton

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Belleville and District Softball League followers have been calling it a "fatter's loop" so far this season so Trudeau Motors and Trenton Commercial Printers set out to strengthen the claim here last night.

The teams divided 30 assorted hits as Trudeaus whipped a short-handed Trenton squad 13-6, at the Fairgrounds.

Trudeaus sent ten men to the plate while taking a 5-0 lead in the first frame and they never looked back. The winners held a slim 15-14 margin in the hit department but the difference was in fielding. Trenton erred eight times and the winners but once.

Bill Baldwin got credit for the win after taking over from starter Ken Osborne in the fourth. Baldwin gave up four hits, striking out six and walking one. Osborne was tagged for four runs off 10 hits in the first 3½ innings, fanning one and walking none.

Bob Fox was the only pitcher present for Trenton at game's start, took the loss while allowing 11 runs off 12 hits in 4½ frames. He had one strikeout and one walk. Relieiver Pat Maracle cleaned up by striking out seven and passing one.

Weston's home/ run, in the first frame got two runs, an error scored another while Plano and Duggan got hits to drive in the others. Zakus and Mavety had safeties in the second as an error netted one in the third while Baldwin's solo homer and a two-run smash by Meeker were the big blows in the fourth-run fifth. Then Marsden shut the door.

Mitts and Hutchison drove in runs in the Trenton second and Hutchison's triple scored another and chased Osborne in the fourth. Mitts' homer got Trenton close in the top of the fifth, making it as 8-5 game. He singled and went all the way around on the lone Trudeau error in the sigth.

Paul Zakus led three Trudeau hits, Pete Weston a homer and double, also going all the way on the two-bagger and the error, Tom Meeker a homer and single, Rick Locke, Larry Mavety and Bob Wannemaker two singles each, Bill Baldwin added his solid homer, Ralph Plano a double and Gary Duggan a single.

Billy Mitts wacked the homer and two singles in defeat, Terry Hutchison tripled and singled with two hits each for Roger Evans, Bob McAlpine and Jim Barker. Bob Lott, Don Cole and Jim Whyte, with a double, got the others.

Trenton — Drake 1b, Hutchison rf, Cole cf, Whyte c, McAlpine 2b, Saunders ss, Barker p, Mitts lf, Lott rf, Marsele p.

Crackers Shade Toronto

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Former major leaguer Bubba Phillips has Atlanta Crackers breathing down the necks of the International League - leading Toronto Maple Leafs.

Phillips, who played for Detroit Tigers and Chicago White Sox, smacked a home run in the 11th inning Thursday night to give the Crackers a 3-1 victory over Toronto in the first game of a vital series.

Meanwhile, hatchander Mike Cuellar moved Jacksonville Suns into fourth place a half-game ahead of the idle Syracuse Chiefs with a 6-0 triumph over the last-place Buffalo Bisons. Rochester Red Wings continued their domination of Toledo Mud Hens with a 5-1 win.

Phillips' homer, his fourth of the season, gave relief pitcher Dave Elsey his seventh victory. He hurled 2 3-3 innings.

Cuellar also picked up his seventh victory but worked harder for it as he went the distance for the fifth time. He held the Bisons to five hits and struck out 12.

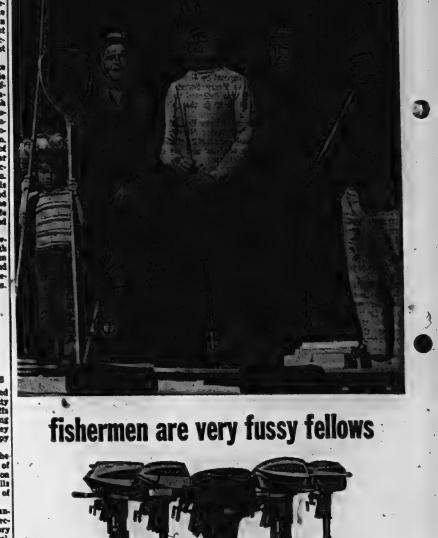
Rochester registered its seventh victory in nine games with Toledo as right hander Tom Phoebus scattered nine hits and fanned 12. The win was Phoebus's third over the Mud Hens.

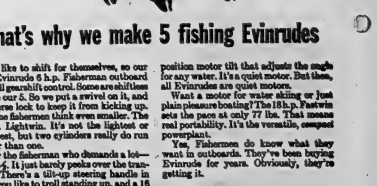
Senior Baseball

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brantford Red Sox, who failed to make the senior Inter-County Baseball Association playoffs last season, found a winning streak Thursday night. They were helped by some sloppy fielding by Guelph CIOYs.

The Red Sox downed the CIOYs 3-1 by scoring all of their runs in the fifth inning at just one bit. Two bases on balls and Guelph errors did most of the damage.





Listowel Mustangs, meanwhile, evened their season record at 1-1 with a 6-5 victory over Galt Terriers in Listowel. The Mustangs are back in the league this year after an absence of several seasons.

fishermen are very fussy fellows

that's why we make 5 fishing Evinrudes
Some like to shift for themselves, so our new Evinrude 6 h.p. Fisherman outboard has full gearshift control. Some are shiftless —like our 5. So we put a swivel on it, and a reverse lock to keep it from kicking up.
Some fishermen think even smaller. The 3 h.p. Lightwin it's the lightest, cheapest, but two cylinders really do run better than one.
For the fisherman who demands a lot—the 9½. It just barely peeks over the transom. There's a tilt-up steering handle in case you like to troll standing up, and a 16 position motor tilt that adjusts the angle for any water. It's a quiet motor. But then, all Evinrudes are quiet motors.
Want a motor for water skiing or just plain pleasure boating? The 18 h.p. Fastwin sets the pace at only 77 lbs. That means real portability. It's the versatile, compact powerplant.
Yes, Fishermen do know what they want in outboards. They've been buying Evinrude for years. Obviously, they're getting it.
All new Evinrudes use a 50-1 gas/oil mixture. It increases engine life, saves wear and squeeze.

Senor Pascual Wins 7th In Row, Ole!

Twins Nip Bosox

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Camilo Pascual, $500 poorer than he would like to be, is busy trying to make himself and his Minnesota Twin team - mates several thousand dollars richer come October.

Pascual, who fought off an attempted $9,000 cut in his almost annual salary squabble with Minnesota owner Cal Griffith, won his seventh straight game Thursday and boosted the Twins 1½ games in front of Chicago White Sox in the American League race.

Minnesota's 4-3 victory over Boston Red Sox was the only game played in the American League.

When Pascual got his 1965 contract offer from Griffith last winter he went into a rage. "I should have asked for a raise," said the Cuban hurler who was 15 - 12 last year after two straight 20-victory seasons.

"I only asked for the same money. I do not intend to take a cut. He figures by starting at $9,000, he will get me to sign for a $2,000 or $3,000 cut. I don't feel I should take a cut."

Griffith was just as adamant. "When a man has a good year, he expects a raise. On the other side of the coin, when he has a bad year, he should expect a cut."

The pitcher finally prevailed and although he made overtures at a $500 hike, Pascual finally settled for $46,500—the same salary he received in 1964.

The way he's pitching right now Pascual must be thinking about some extra cash for October, like a World Series share.

The Twins' ace has a 2.54 earned run average to go with his 7-0 record. He has struck out 55 in 81 innings.

Bob Allison's two-run homer gave him an early working margin Thursday and late - inning help from Johnny Klippstein and Mel Nelson secured the triumph.

Luckless Lightfoots Lose 5-4

Black Diamond Cheese blew an early lead but battled back in an extra inning to nip Lightfoot Construction 5-4 in Commercial Softball action at King George School last night.

The Cheesemen took a 2-0 lead in the first and Lightfoots tied it in the fourth and went ahead 3-2 in the sixth. Black Diamond potted two in the top of the seventh and Lightfoots one in their half to force overtime. A lone marker in the eighth won it.

Sonny Holway buried strong ball on the winner's rubber, allowing five hits over the route. He struck out half a dozen while walking five.

George Young, and Joe Harvey in the eighth, pitched for Lightfoots. Young was the loser while allowing all nine Black Diamond hits. He struck out five and passed one.

Three miscues per team contributed to the Fun total.

Jack Francis led the Black Diamond hitters with a double and single, aided by Lea Wood with two one-base hits. Sonny Holway banged a triple, Doug Archer and Ross Empey a double each, Terry Kelly and Norm Clapp a single apiece.

Joe Clapp belted a seventh-inning homer for Lightfoots, while the club's only other hits were singles by Don Smith, Don Wood, John Hazard and Don Dolan.

The loss was Lightfoot's second after four straight victories.

He took only 26 putts and had 10 one-putt greens in his sizzling round.

Former Buick Open champion Julius Boros held the runner-up spot with a 69.

Tommy Thompson started and lost for RCAF with Phillips taking over in the fifth. Thompson allowed nine of the winner's ten hits, fanned two and passed one. Phillips struck out four and walked none.

College Brass

Approves Huge Olympiad

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A mammoth intercollegiate winter olympiad as a Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union centennial project in 1967 was approved in principle by the CIAU's board of governors Thursday.

The CIAU has been invited to send a delegation to Ottawa for detailed discussion of the planned program with the centennial athletic program committee. The meetings are scheduled for June 18-19.

The University of Alberta has been tentatively selected as host for the project, suggested for the first week in March, 1967.

The olympiad would encompass three national championships currently staged by the CIAU—hockey, basketball and swimming — and other sports such as curling, volleyball, badminton, skiing, fencing, gymnastics, judo and wrestling.

The CIAU named sites and dates for five activities of the 1965-66 national championships.

The basketball tournament will be held at the university winning the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship. The hockey tournament will be staged by the Ontario Intercollegiate Athletic Association at Sudbury, swimming events by Western Canada if tied is with a British Columbia centennial project, and if not by the Ottawa-St Lawrence Athletic Association.

The harrier championship will be staged by the Ontario-Quebec Intercollegiate Athletic Association at Guelph Nov. 26. The sailing championships, sponsored by the Canadian Yachting Association and staged by the Ontario intercollegiate Athletic Association will be at Toronto Oct. 9-11.

New Zealand Flyer Here June 10

Snell-Crothers Duel A Track Classic

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

It was a scorching afternoon in Rome just before the 1960 Summer Olympic Games. A young New Zealand runner, his body covered with perspiration, was doubled over with his hands on his knees.

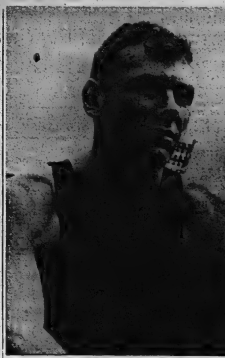
Peter Snell, 21 years old and simply another name in world track circles, had completed 17 220-yard sprints. He was exhausted and almost out on his feet.

"Run another one," said Arthur Lydiard, his coach

"I want to be sick," mumbled Snell.

"Well, be sick," said Lydiard, "and then run another one."

Snell managed a wry grin, straightened up and loped off on another sprint.



He hasn't stopped running since. Four days after that heart - thumping workout he mounted the winner's rostrum to the thunderous applause of nearly 100,000 persons. He was another champion to them and they stood in tribute to the unknown who had beaten the world in the 800-metre run in the Olympic record time of 1:46.3.

The victory made Snell's name a household word among the world's track buffs. But that was just the beginning.

STAGGERED AMERICANS

He has won five gold medals in international competition since then and last Jan. 1 was awarded the Order of the British Empire in the Queen's New Year's honors list. Now the acknowledged world's greatest middle-distance runner in history he is eyeing the 3:30.0 mile.

Snell is the headliner in the Toronto international meet at Varsity Stadium next Thursday night in a head-to-head duel with Bill Crothers, the 24-year-old Markham, Ont., pharmacist and second-fastest man in the world over the 800-metre distance.

PETER SNELL

This will be their fourth meeting since the 1962 British Empire Games at Perth, Australia, and Snell has been the master in each.

His triumph in Rome was a crushing blow to the Americans who had produced four successive Olympic gold medallists in the classic 800 since the 1936 Berlin Games. But there was more to come.

Two years later—at the end of January, 1962—he ran the mile in 3:54.4, breaking by one-tenth of a second the record established four years earlier by Herb Elliott of Australia. A week later he ran the fastest half mile in history—1:43.1—and at the same time bettered the world 800-metre mark with a time of 1:44.3.

Last Nov. 18 this magnificent New Zealand flyer ran the fastest mile ever, a tremendous 3:54.1 effort, at Auckland.

UPSET EXPERTS

At the Perth games he won both the 880 yards and the mile and one of his victims in the semi-final of the half was Crothers who finished fourth and failed to qualify. Snell simply loped around the track and his times were far off world marks.

These performances may have thrown experts off the scent because Snell and Lydiard went to Tokyo last October and he wasn't given a chance in the 800 metres. They called two Americans—Jerry Siebert and Morgan Groth—to finish one-two with George Kerr of Jamaica filling the third spot.

Groth didn't survive the first round. Siebert made it to the final and finished sixth, two places behind Kerr.

Snell won the gold medal in 1:45.1, beating his own Olympic record by more than a second. Crothers, who stayed with Snell until the final 250 metres, won the second-place silver in 1:45.6.

Five days later—on Oct. 21—he won the 1,500 metres with ridiculous ease in the slow time of 3:38.1.

In the post-mortem after the 800, Crothers said he had "failed to respond" to Snell's fearsome finishing kick.

Crothers and Snell have met twice indoors over 1,000 yards. In February, 1962, running on boards for the first time in his career, Snell beat the Canadian by a few yards at Los Angeles. Again at Los Angeles last Feb 13, the New Zealander won easily by four yards over Crothers.

This could be their last meeting. Snell plans to hang up his spikes next spring.

GETS ROUND LAW

LONDON (CP) — The Royal Court Theatre has turned itself into a private club for one play, John Osborne's A Patriot for Me. The Lord Chamberlain, who censors all plays shown in the capital, has banned it, but he is traditionally understood to have no power over plays shown to members only.

Bill Mills Joins Crack Pack

TORONTO (CP)—Billy Mills, the marine lieutenant who gave the United States its first gold medal in the 10,000 metre race, has entered the elite field in the three-mile event of the Toronto International track meet here June 10.

Other top name athletes include Olympic gold medallist Bob Schul of the U.S., Alby Thomas and Ron Clarke, both of Australia, Bill Baillie of New Zealand, Ron Larrieu of Los Angeles, the U.S. six-mile record holder, and Toronto's Dave Ellis.

Mills, who will be 27 June 30, came from virtual anonymity in the track world at Tokyo last October to win the 10,000 metre event of the 1964 Olympic Games.

Minor Baseball

Jaycees blanked Park Dale Ratepayers 3-0 in Bantam and Bad Boys dumped Jaycees 16-11 in B.M.B.A. games played last night.

Two exhibition games are scheduled for the Park Dale diamond on Saturday afternoon. Cobourg teams will meet Belleville Booth Radio-TV tykes at 1.00 p.m. and the Belleville Merchant Peewees at 3.00 p.m.

Last night's bantam tussle, at Park Dale, was a tight pitching battle with the winners getting only one hit and the losers a pair.

Jaycees scored twice in the second and once in the seventh for the 3-0 count.

Jerry McTaggart pitched the two-hit victory, striking out 10 and walking three. Ron Jury was his catcher.

Jim Wood lost his one-hitter when all three of his club's errors proved costly. He struck out four and walked two.

Eddie Christopher was his receiver.

Jack Short's single was the lone Jaycee hit. Ted Shaw and Jim Wood singled for Park Dale.

Jaycees	202 000 1	3	1
Park Dale	000 000 0	2	3

Glen Carleton's heavy hitting sparked Bad Boys to their peewee win. He smashed three home runs, one of three with the bases loaded, while driving in seven runs in all.

Terry Doran had a homer and single, John Vance a double and two singles and David Conley two other base hits.

For Jaycees, Brian Cousins singled twice, Allan Neill, David Nelles and Larry Burnette once each.

Stan Brooks with help from Paul Wolfe is the fifth pitcher the win. They fanned eight and walked four, with Terry Doran doing the catching.

Allan Neill was tagged for 13 hits in defeat while whiffing five and walking four. Larry Burnette did the catching.

"It's your Sis. She says if you're planning to spend the weekend with them, to be sure and bring all your anti-snoring devices."

NORTHERN QUEEN FLIES

OSLO (AP)—Britt Asberg, a tall 20-year-old blonde, has been crowned Miss Norway 1965. She competes early in June in the Miss Europe contest at Nice, France, and June 26 for the Miss Universe title at Miami Beach, Fla. Norwegian runner-up Aud Jansen, 20, will compete in the Miss International Beauty contest at Long Beach, Calif., in August.

New Zealand Coach

Predicts Mile In 3.48

By STERLING TAYLOR

TORONTO (CP) — Some day the one-mile record will be less than three minutes and 30 seconds, predicts Arthur Lydiard, one of the world's foremost track authorities.

"If a man conditions himself to run four 57-second laps—and someone eventually will — the world will have the 3:48 mile," he said Thursday.

Lydiard, 44, who lives in Auckland and trains such notable New Zealand track stars as Peter Snell, Ed Baillie and Murray Halberg, had just arrived in Toronto.

He will remain here to coach the New Zealand contingent in the Toronto International track meet June 10 in which Snell and Baillie will compete.

The New Zealand team will compete against athletes from several countries, including the United States, Canada, Great Britain and Australia.

Lydiard said there is no secret formula for creating great distance runners.

MUST BUILD ENDURANCE

"It's simply a matter of building endurance through cardiac development, not by building muscles," he said. "Anyone can develop this. It can't be done through sustained running. A person has to go out and run on his own time."

By sustained running, Lydiard meant constantly running against a clock.

"By running on his own, the runner might not go too fast or too far at first, but as he builds his endurance, he will increase both" speed and distance.

He favors some sort of international competition for training but says it isn't really the secret to developing strong competitors.

"I convince my athletes of their capabilities. They convince themselves of their own potential as their endurance becomes greater. And of course, after one athlete wins an event it instills a sense of confidence in the others."

The endurance comes from running as much as 100 miles a week.

"The athletes really enjoy running when they are in top condition. It ceases to be a chore."

Canada Meets U.S. Today

Upset In Davis Cup?

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (CP-AP)—Canada's Davis Cup team meets the United States today in the opening singles of the American Zone competition, and the Canadians aren't conceding a thing to the favored Americans.

"We're the most fit, best primed and hungriest Canadian team in years," said Jack Macken of Vancouver, non - playing team captain.

"And we don't think the opposition is all that powerful (Chuck) McKinley can't be as sharp as when he was playing regularly, and the others are rookies in major cup competition."

Macken, figuring there might be an upset, labelled his squad "Canada's best-looking team in years."

Malmstaym of the Canadian team are Harry Fampuier, 22, of Vancouver and Toronto, and Keith Carpenter, 22, of Montreal. They play in the opening singles matches against Gene Scott of St. James, N.Y., and Arthur Ashe of Richmond, Va. Fampuier takes on Scott in the first singles encounter.

Other members of the Canadian team are Robert Fudicombe, 18, and Robert Bardsley, 18, both of Vancouver.

Minor Pros To Interlock

SEATTLE (AP)—Officials of the Western Hockey League will meet Monday in Montreal with representatives of the American Hockey League to complete a proposed working agreement and interlocking schedule of the two circuits, Al Leader said Thursday.

Leader, Western League president, will head the league delegation attending the annual convention of professional leagues.

Details of a proposed reverse draft will be studied carefully by his group, Leader said. The plan would give the American and Western leagues the right to draft from a pool of 60 players owned by the National League.

In return, the major loop would have the right to draft one player from each team in the two minor leagues each season. Draft privileges would be immediate for the Western and American teams, but would not begin for the NHL until the close of the 1966-67 season.

800 Attend Balfour Funeral

REGINA (CP) — Funeral service was held here Wednesday for Murray Balfour, 28, a former National Hockey League star with Chicago Black Hawks and Boston Bruins.

Balfour, who underwent surgery at Harrisburg, Pa., April 5, died here Sunday of cancer.

Pallbearers at the funeral, which was attended by about 800 persons, were Bobby Hull and Billy Hay, former linemates of Balfour at Chicago, Bob Turner, formerly of Montreal Canadiens and Chicago, and Doug Killoh, a former Saskatchewan Roughrider football player.

Other NHL players attending were Bob Baun of Toronto, Pierre Pilote of Chicago, Bill Hicke of New York, and Ab McDonald and Orland Kurienbach of Boston.

Senior Lacrosse

PORT CREDIT, Ont. (CP)— Brooklin Merchants won their fifth consecutive Ontario Lacrosse Association game Thursday night, defeating Port Credit Sailors 10-7.

The victory gave the league-leading Merchants a four-point margin over second - place Brampton.

A five-goal Brooklin outburst in the third period snapped a 5-5 tie.

Team - captain Glen Lotton and Bob Hanson each scored three goals for the winners. Grant Heffernan and Elmer Tran added two each.

George McGaffey, Butch Keegan and Brian Abearne each counted twice for Port Credit with Cy MacNeil scoring the remaining goal.

HUNGARIA WINS

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Hungaria defeated Toronto Abrunzi 1-0 in a National Soccer League game Thursday night on a goal by Andy Invoyj at 15 minutes of the first half.

Fight For Frisco Franchise

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rival factions are battling for a San Francisco franchise in the proposed National Hockey League expansion, it was disclosed Thursday.

Barry Van Gerbig of New York told a press conference that he, Bing Crosby and other associates will bid for the franchise if and when it becomes available.

Owners of San Francisco Seals in the Western Hockey League have also announced they hope to bring the NHL here.

NHL President Clarence Campbell announced March 11 the league proposes to expand its six-team league to a 12-team circuit through the formation of a second six-team division.

No date for the expansion was set.

Van Gerbig, former Princeton University hockey player, said Crosby would have controlling interest in the franchise.

Lands And Forests Dept.

Relaxes Bait Embargo

TORONTO (CP) — An embargo by the Ontario department of lands and forests against the import of bait fish from the United States will be relaxed for the St. Lawrence area, a department official said Thursday.

J. D. Rossborough, supervisor of the fisheries section, said limited imports will be permitted on the Kingston-Gananoque region during periods of bait shortage.

Bait imports have long been prohibited by the department, but up until 1964 it issued yearly import permits to a few bait dealers because of shortages in the Ontario supply.

Last July the department decided to issue no further permits because bait fish were infiltrating the province's waterways, bringing with them new diseases and parasites.

It was hoped Ontario minnow producers, whose production can be supervised by lands and forests biologists, would be able to supply fishermen with their bait needs. But Mr. Rossborough said the bait demand in the St. Lawrence area still was not met.

While there will be no return to yearly import permits, he said, the department will issue permits for individual bait shipments from the U.S. to St. Lawrence area dealers.

Fantastic Weak Word For 20th Century Project

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Would you like a movie in a jugular vein? That's just the kind of film that Fantastic Voyage will be.

Even in Hollywood, fantastic seems a weak word for this 20th Century-Fox project. Producer Saul David is spending $6,000,000 to set a half-dozen actors loose inside a human body.

That's correct: Inside. The time is the undetermined future. All the leading nations of the world know how to miniaturize human beings, but for one hour only. One scientist of a power opposed to the United States knows how to prolong miniaturization, and he defects to the U.S.

But enemy agents crack him up in a car mishap before he can spill his secrets. The importance of his know-how is far-reaching: instant armies could be smuggled into enemy countries in a hat box, say.

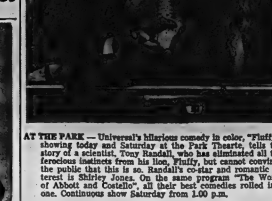
ENTER BODY

The scientist is unconscious, and surgeons inside his ailment can be cured only by an operation from the inside. So six people, including doctors and a nurse, hop into a sub-like craft, are shrunk to microbe size and injected into the poor man's blood stream.

I visited the set during the final days of shooting and found Stephen Boyd, brunette beauty Raquel Welch and other intrepid voyagers in one of their last adventures. Dressed in skin-tight rubber suits with breathing devices, they were crawling up a large, convex, multi - colored, plastic-glassed surface under a cave of canvas.

"They are now climbing over the surface of the eyeball," explained director Richard Fleischer. "Then they will look down into the eye and see the workings of the cones and rods. It will look quite spectacular."

BLINDED BY EYE



The actors went through their paces, like men in the two canvas panels parted, blinding them with light. The patient's eye had opened.

During a break, Boyd explained that they were nearing the end of the voyage, having already visited such areas as the pulmonary artery and capillaries, the heart, lung, pleural sac, lymphatic system, inner ear, brain and optic nerve. All these areas were reproduced on mammoth sets with accuracy.

"Except that we had to guess at what some unseen things look like, such as antibodies," said director Fleischer. The antibodies wrap around Raquel like seaweed in one scene.

AT THE PARK — Lovely Anne Francis plays the only feminine role in Allied Corporation's "The Satan Bug", Deluxe Color-Panavision United Artists release opening next at the Park Theatre. Produced and directed by John Sturges, the film is from Ian Stuart's taut suspense novel of the same title. On the same program "Satan Bug" stars Dick Van Dyke in "The World of Abbott and Costello", all their best comedies rolled into one. Continuous show Saturday from 1.00 p.m.

AT THE BELLEVILLE DRIVE-IN — A Shower of fun for Elvis and Friends! Elvis Presley look over the 'wet' but lovely terrain in this scene from "Roustabout." Hal Wallis' new musical for Paramount which opens Saturday at the Belleville Drive-In Theatre. In this colorful production, Elvis portrays a carnival roustabout (handyman) who becomes a midway entertainer in order to save a dying carnival from bankruptcy. Along with Elvis, the top cast in "Roustabout" includes Barbara Stanwyck, Joan Freeman, Leif Erickson and Sue Ane Langdon. 2nd feature attraction is man's greatest adventure "Conquest of Space", filmed in Technicolor and features an all-star cast.

AT THE BELLE — Cary Grant prepares to show Leslie Caron the art of catching fish barehanded near their South Pacific island where they are marooned. Cary is great fun in Spy No. 1, the most sought after secret agent in the South Pacific in the romantic adventure comedy in Technicolor, "Father Goose". Now showing at the Belle, with the Barbershop Quartet and Chorus in "Keep America Singing".

Blast-off Most Rewarding Moment of Gemini Flight

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The big bird inserted itself smoothly into space Thursday, out of sight but in constant communication with the world. But even so it remained primarily a television — not radio — story.

This was largely due to television's determination and elaborate preparation. The three major networks concentrated completely on the story from 7 a.m. EDT for almost 10 hours. Much of the time was filled with explanations, charts, maps, demonstrations and interviews.

When they finally returned to regular programming in late afternoon, the reporters were showing signs of whiskers, hoarseness and microphone fatigue.

There were two really critical periods during the long day and only one of them could be longed to television. That came when the Gemini - Titan rocket lifted majestically from its pad and soared out of sight. NBC had color cameras stationed at Cape Kennedy and in Houston, but its most rewarding moment came with a single burst of orange-red flame against a blue sky as the great grey tube lifted away.

The other exciting period came when we listened for 20 minutes or so as air force Maj. Edward H. White II engaged in his "extra vehicular activity." It was impossible to catch more than a word here and there since radio reception was poor.

There were periods during the viewers' vigil when it seemed that the TV commentators knew as much about space and spacecraft as the experts.

At any rate, between the network men who had done their homework and the co-operative space agency personnel, the launching of the Gemini astronauts on their four-day journey was thoroughly — exhaustively is perhaps a better word—covered.

Stained-glass Window Will Be Unveiled

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — A stained-glass window with the likenesses of 10 noted Canadians, including newspaper men past and present — four from each province — will be unveiled today at the Men's Press Club of Moncton. Installed in the wall behind the bar at the 400-member club, the window has two vertical panels with faces of memorable journalists. They flank a separate panel showing a club insignia—a town crier ringing his bell and announcing the news in a village square.

The unveiling marks the 15th anniversary of the founding of the club and, coincidentally, the 15th anniversary of the arrival in Canada of Dutch-born artist Frans Claspoore who created the stained-glass ensemble.

Among the men to whom the window pays tribute are Hector E. Atkinson (1905-1943), founder of the Toronto Star.

SHIP SAILS

TRIESTI, Italy (AP)—The 46,000-ton Italian liner Raffaello, sister ship of the Italian line's new flagship Michelangelo, sailed from its shipyard Wednesday night after five years of construction for its first sea tests.

WON'T DISCLOSE PACT

OTTAWA (CP)—The government refused again Wednesday to make public a draft agreement proposed by Canada to France to make possible cultural exchanges between France and Quebec. External Affairs Minister Martin rejected a motion by Paul Martineau (PC Pontiac - Temiscamingue), who argued that the draft should be made available to MPs since it had appeared in the press.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For June 5

Aries (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Be available to special friend or family member. Adjustments may be necessary. Carrying on old feuds merely reflects immaturity. Come to terms! Then you are happier.

Taurus (Apr. 20 — May 20): You will fall to impress if "flashy." Accent sincerity, simplicity. Wonderful evening to be with "special person." Excellent for dining out. Personal magnetism shines!

Gemini (May 21 — June 20): What you think is important today may change in value tomorrow. Means take temporary delay in stride. Don't run here, there, everywhere. Settle down . . . display maturity.

Cancer (June 21 — July 22): Some factors may be beyond your control at present. Act accordingly. Time not yet ripe for direct action. Finish, polish, perfect. Leave the rushing to others.

Leo (July 23 — Aug. 22): You for purchase of special gift. If you make others happy . . . you benefit. Stay out of arguments. Count "ten" before replying to unfair statement. Stand tall. Maintain Leo dignity.

Virgo (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Cycle high. You may feel "put upon," but this is only temporary. One is authority trusts you. But "waiting game" best for now. Good day to indulge hobbies, favorite pastime.

Libra (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Being bull-headed now gets you nowhere. Key is flexibility. Utilize sense of justice. Attention to individual who recently suffered setback is indicated.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 — Nov. 21): Follow through on plans, proposals, ideas. You have allies in unusual places. Surprise party possible. Be amiable. Flash your smile! Friends appreciate your efforts.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22—Dec. 21): Accept added responsibility. May not appear pleasant prospect . . . but worth it. Day features change, intellectual challenge. Newspaper could give clue.

Capricorn (Dec. 22—Jan. 19): You may hear from relatives at a distance. Do more listening than talking. Be accommodating and you are likely to get fair financial shake. Best to have quiet evening.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Discuss differences. Don't sulk! You tend to be ultra-sensitive now. Many who desire your opinion are almost afraid to ask. Correct this situation. Learn to be gracious.

Pisces (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): If you make minor sacrifice — major gain results. Take time to check, analyze. Your sense of timing of utmost importance. Express opinions. Let others know you are aware.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you possess wonderful degree of intellectual curiosity.

Brief Wildcat Walkout Ends At McKinnon's

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) Workers at McKinnon Industries Ltd. voted Thursday night to return to work after staging a brief wildcat walkout.

A company spokesman said most of the 300 night shift workers reported for work at midnight Thursday and he expected most of the workers back by this morning. Day and evening workers were affected most by the walkout.

The walkout began over an argument between a worker and a foreman. It was settled at a mass meeting of workers at St. Catharines Arena Thursday night.

More than 300 workers walked off their jobs after the argument and they were joined on picket lines by another 500 coming in on the afternoon shift.

A spokesman for local 199 of the United Auto Workers (CLC) said the dispute began in the crankshaft department of the building.

A foreman suspended a worker for two days and denied him union representation, the spokesman said. Plant officials backed up the foreman and employees in the department stopped work.

McKinnon Industries, a subsidiary of General Motors Corp. produces engines and other components for General Motors cars in Canada.

Williamson Guilty of Forgery; Collapses in Dock

VANCOUVER (CP) — Public relations' counsel Al Williamson collapsed in the dock and was taken to hospital Friday night after being convicted of forgery in the celebrated case of the "Dear Hal" letter.

Trembling and pale, the 60-year-old defendant dropped a cup of water and slumped in his seat moments after a Supreme Court jury found him guilty on two counts, each of which carries a possible 14-year prison sentence.

Mr. Justice F. Craig Munroe reversed a custody order and released Williamson on his own recognizance. He was taken immediately to hospital and later released.

He will be sentenced next Thursday.

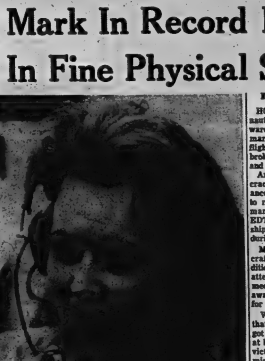
The jury, absent three hours and 17 minutes, ruled that Williamson did in fact forge a letter to Hal Doran, side to Prime Minister Pearson, in the name of Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia.

The jury also found that he uttered the forgery—that is, he caused Mr. Dornan to act on the document as if it were genuine. The jury attached a recommendation of leniency with this conviction.

Williamson admitted writing the letter without the expressed authorization of the premier. His defence rested on a claim that he had a general authority, based on a special relationship with the premier outlined in an agreement and strengthened by faithful service, to write the letter.

He also claimed the signature was genuine, having appeared on a piece of the premier's own letterhead that found its way to Williamson's office in Vancouver. This was disputed by the Crown on the basis of RCMP testimony that the signature was not written by the premier.

The defendant's lawyers had no immediate comment about the possibility of appealing the convictions.



The "Dear Hal" letter was written May 4, 1964, apparently in support of an application by American millionaire Harry Stonehill for landed immigrant status in Canada.

It came to light after a press sensation over an alleged suggestion by Raymond Davis, then executive assistant to the federal immigration minister, that Stonehill should buy his status with a $25,000 to $30,000 contribution to the Liberal party.

Williamson had testified he

Spacemen Near Halfway Mark In Record Flight, In Fine Physical Shape

By HOWARD KENEDICT

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Astronauts James McDivitt and Edward White neared the halfway mark of their record space flight today, their routine broken by unidentified satellites and little league baseball scores.

America's newest heroes, who cracked the U.S. space endurance mark Friday night, were to reach the mid-point of their marathon journey at 12:15 p.m. EDT as their Gemini IV space ship sailed high above the earth during orbit No. 32.

Mission control reported the craft and pilots in excellent condition. While slept through one attempt to give him a routine medical check and had to be awakened later in the 27th orbit for the exam.

Mission control said the pool here that his 11-year-old son, Eddie, got one hit out of three times at bat in a little league baseball victory. McDivitt was told by mission control that the little league team's 8-year-old, eight-year-old Mike, also won.

ARE IN AREA

Mission control said the pilots had reported no more sightings of the unidentified object McDivitt reported during orbit No. 18. Officials listed at least 11 earth satellites, most of them fragments or space debris, in the general area of McDivitt's sighting.

At 5:56 a.m. EDT Gemini IV entered its 28th orbit.

As they whirled through their seemingly endless voyage, Mc-

Breakdown In Talks Could Bring Walkout

TORONTO (CP) — A breakdown of talks between representatives of Canadian National Express and The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Workers (CLC) slated for Monday in Montreal could mean a nation-wide strike by 23,000 railway employees.

The union has put its locals across the country on the alert to be ready to support the 2,000 members on strike now. A union spokesman said support action could take several forms ranging from walkouts to financial assistance but declined to specify what would be requested.

The strike started Wednesday afternoon in Toronto to protest the demotion of a truck driver with five years' standing to the position of porter.

By evening it had spread to other Ontario terminals and CNR cut off express shipments in and out of Toronto.

In Belleville, the CN Express office reported it was not accepting any goods for Toronto.

The strike has tied up delivery of express out of Belleville.

However, express service in and from Montreal, and points east of Belleville, so far continues without interruption.

Union officials in Toronto predicted a rash of similar walkouts unless railway officials give assurance that they will not take reprisals against the strikers and deal immediately with the union's grievances.

WANTS RETURN

The CN has said that no negotiations could be carried out until the men return to work.

Use of the demerit system to punish men who break regulations is one of the major grievances. Misdemeanors are punished with demerit points graded to the seriousness of the error and the amount of cost involved in rectifying it.

An accumulation of 60 points results in a hearing before a board of review which has the

Budget Surplus In April Up

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government had a budgetary surplus of $134,900,000 for April of this year, Finance Minister Gordon announced Friday.

The government's monthly financial statement showed revenues of $584,900,000 and expenditures of $450,000,000, compared with revenues of $564,300,000, expenditures of $391,000,000 and a surplus of $72,000,000 for the same month last year.

Mr. Gordon said the revenue increase in the first month of the new fiscal year was due to the growth of the economy, including higher levels of personal incomes and corporation profits.

Another factor for the revenue increase was advanced payment dates for corporation income taxes, a measure introduced in 1963. Many corporations base tax payments for the first 10 months of the fiscal year on their previous year's income, leaving larger payments for the last two months of business increases.

The shift in timing of corporation tax payments moved payment dates from May, June and July to April, May and June.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis — Some cloud has spread across Northern Ontario today but very variable conditions today while mainly sunny weather will continue elsewhere in the province. Warm humid air is beginning to edge a little closer to the Lower Great Lakes and a gradual eastward spread is likely late today and Sunday. With the warm air will come an increase in cloud cover as well as scattered showers and thunderstorms.

Viet Nam Reds Get Licking

From AP-Reuters

SAIGON (CP)—South Vietnamese government forces, badly worsted by Viet Cong ambushes in recent days, struck back with the aid of armed U.S. helicopters and claimed today they killed 49 Communist guerrillas in a single action Friday.

A U.S. military spokesman reported that quick action by U.S. Army helicopter crews accounted for 20 of the Viet Cong dead.

Six Communists were captured and eight others taken as suspects in the operation near Vinh Long, 35 miles southwest of Saigon. Vietnamese units continued to comb the area today with support of armored and artillery units.

Four government soldiers reportedly were killed and four others were wounded along with a U.S. Army advisor in Friday's clash.

Government forces were not as fortunate in another engagement Friday. They were reported to have killed five Viet Cong, but suffered 16 dead, two captured and 32 missing themselves after a Communist battalion attacked three hamlets 30 miles northeast of Saigon.

MARINES IN ACTION

Reuters news agency reported a platoon of U.S. marines killed 11 Viet Cong Friday after pinning down a rebel band in a rubber plantation about 400 miles northeast of Saigon.

The report of the action followed Friday's prediction by a high - ranking U.S. spokesman that Communist forces might soon take the offensive against the Communist guerrillas.

Meanwhile, fighting that continued Friday with more than 20 U.S. fighter bombers flying several missions into North Viet Nam border to a district 90 miles south of the capital of Hanoi.

The marine platoon went into action while on a routine patrol near Dong South Viet Nam's

Bank Bandit Kills Four As They Lie on Floor

BIG SPRINGS, Neb. (AP)—A huge posse spread out across the sprawling plains of western Nebraska and eastern Colorado today, hunting an icy-calm gunman who killed three bank employees with shots in the back and wounded a fourth.

"Every available man in 100 miles is taking part," said Sheriff Floyd Stahr.

Friday Sheriff Stahr, a six-foot-four man in a wide-brim western hat, made his headquarters in the bank. Lawmen troopers, FBI agents, sheriff's officers and police from neighboring towns trooped in to report to him.

The 319 residents of this village 10 miles north of the Colorado border were stunned by the killings Friday.

"I have no idea why he shot them," said County Attorney Robert Richards. "They didn't resist when he told them to lie down on their stomachs."

The gunman fired eight times as the four lay on the floor of the Farmers State Bank. Three died instantly and the fourth was critically wounded.

Killed were Jadene Kjeldgaard, 22-year-old bachelor who was president of the bank; Gleta Kjeldgaard, 39, the cashier; and Mrs. Lois Ann Hotham, 35, bookkeeper.

Frankie Kjeldgaard, 25, nephew of Andreas, was taken to hospital with wounds in the neck and back. The hospital said today he still is in critical condition.

If was noon when the bandit drove up to the little red-brick bank on Main Street. A deputy sheriff said many of the town's residents were on the street at the time. Most of them were making their daily trip to the post office.

The killer was about 35 and wore his hair crew cut. He was neatly dressed in a dark suit.

Only the senior Kjeldgaard and three employees were in the bank. The man first asked about obtaining a loan. Then he pulled a pistol and ordered the four victims to lie on the floor, face down.

Frankie Kjeldgaard wasn't certain what happened next but the authorities said the bandit looted the cash drawers of about $1,500, and then walked into the vault. He found the safe locked.

He then returned to the main room and started shooting. Sheriff Stahr said eight .22-calibre cartridge shells were found on the floor. They apparently were fired from an automatic pistol.

As the gunman walked out of the bank he bumped into farmer Otto Mauger.

"Good morning," he said politely.

Mauger continued into the bank. The man got into a 1965 model car and drove unhurriedly away.

Lemay Ordered Deported To Stand Trial in Canada

MIAMI (AP) — Georges Lemay has been ordered deported to Canada to face charges of looting a Montreal branch bank four years ago, but Canadian police may not get him for some time.

Lemay's lawyer plans to appeal to immigration service chiefs in Washington. If that fails, he hopes to go into the federal courts, which could mean additional months, or longer.

Milton Milich, special inquiry officer for the immigration service, issued the deportation order Friday. He also denied Lemay's plea that he be deported to Haiti instead of Canada.

He ruled Lemay entered the U.S. as an immigrant without a visa and that he could not stay in the U.S. because he had been convicted of a crime in his Canada.

Leaders Trade Shots

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — Once more stalemate grips Parliament and Prime Minister Pearson and John Diefenbaker are limbering up for third successive summer duel.

The two leaders traded punches shots in the Commons Friday and every indication pointed to a long test of wills over a proposed debate - limiting rule designed to cut off opposition filibusters.

Mr. Diefenbaker and his Conservative supporters have denounced the rule as a refined form of closure that could lead to autocratic behavior by the government.

"That is the old story of the closure beginnings of 1956," the Conservative chieftain snapped in a question-period exchange with the prime minister, referring to the pipeline debate of that year.

Mr. Pearson replied that Mr. Diefenbaker, apparently feels that the Commons cannot make a decision unless all his suggestions are accepted by the government.

New OAS Team Will Try To Win Dominican Accord

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — The stalemated Dominican civil war marked its sixth week today with a fresh peace team of the Organization of American States trying to win a political settlement.

Six previous major efforts to negotiate an agreement ended in failure, including that of the United States, the OAS, the United Nations and the Vatican.

There were reports that the new, three-nation mission, authorized Wednesday by a special OAS conference, brought from Washington a plan for a swift OAS - supervised election. But OAS and U.S. government sources said the election is only one of a number of pospible compromise solutions under consideration.

An OAS truciceship, followed by an election, and a coalition provisional government are other possibilities.

The Dominican rebels already have rejected an election formula proposed by the civilian military junta. The rebels have demanded restoration of the 1963 constitution and creation of a new government before an election.

The remaining 2,000 U.S. marines, of an original Leatherneck force of 6,000, prepared, meanwhile, to leave the Dominican Republic over the weekend.

The rest of the U.S. force, 12,500 paratroopers of the 82nd Airborne Division and 780 air force personnel, have been integrated into the newly formed inter-American force under formal control of the OAS.

Escapee Captured Easily

MONTREAL (CP) — The small-time member of a pair of prisoners who made a sensational jailbreak 24 months ago was caught Friday but the big fish, Lucien Rivard, is still swimming in an underworld sea.

Montreal police expressed hope that Andre Durocher, 28, captured without a shot being fired, would provide information on the suspected narcotics racketeer whose escape touched off a sensational hunt.

"This is the best thing we have to go on as a lead to Rivard," a police spokesman said.

But late Friday night, police said Durocher would say nothing about Rivard and was mum about his own activities since the March 2 escape from the Montreal jail where he is in Montreal except to say he had

Some of Little Ships That Saved British Army at Dunkerque Return

DUNKERQUE, France (CP) Some of the little ships that saved an army 25 years ago returned Friday to Dunkerque to remind the world how they gave bedeviered democracy a chance to catch its breath.

More than 40 of the tiny little ships that helped rescue more than 300,000 British, French and Belgian troops from these French beaches in 1940 sailed again from England's Kent coast to commemorate the event that Winston Churchill called a "miracle."

Fishing boats, and pleasure yachts, a tug, a fireboat, and even an outsize rowboat made the journey—escorts to modern ship was blown up beneath her. She picked up a load of troops, ferried them to a warship offshore, then crossed the channel.

Sylvia Lightoller, 30, chartered her late husband's yacht, the Sundowner, to make the trip from Richmond on the Thames in her husband's memory. Cmdr. Charles Lightoller was a merchant navy officer who died in 1952, was senior surviv-and made a rendevous near the South Goodwin lightship off Dover.

There, under grey skies on a choppy channel, they formed a convoy. The more ancient craft soon lagged behind their fast sister ships.

A 15-foot rowboat named the Tamsine, fitted with an outboard motor for the 42-mile crossing, finally had to be taken in tow by the admiralty vessel Warwick, though the Tamsine's owner, Bob Bennett, had wanted his little boat to make the trip on its own.

Twenty - five years ago the Tamsine crossed to Kent alone. The 25-footer, on which ship ing officer of the Titanic when the White Star liner struck an iceberg and sank on her maiden voyage in 1912. He saved 130 men from the Dunkerque beaches in 1940.

The first of Friday's armada reached the lighthouse outside Dunkerque harbor at just about 2:25 p.m., 25 years to the minute after the British Expeditionary had signalled the end to Operation Dynamo, a nine-day rescue in which the little boats of southeast England helped the navy save 198,315 British troops and 139,997 French and Belgians.

Where Stukas screamed down in dive-bombing raids 25 years ago, a few lazy gulls circled Friday, attracted by the colorful signal flags and by the pennants of St. George of England flying from each mast for this occasion.

Friday night the first of 600 British veterans of the Dunkerque evacuation arrived in readiness for formal commemorative services on the beaches today.

Canada to Show Military Power In Monster Parade in Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada will show off its military power in a special parade here Saturday, June 12.

The defence department, in announcing the plans Friday, billed it as "the capital's biggest - ever peacetime parade."

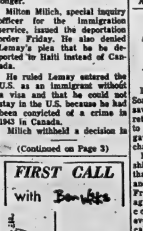
It will feature 8,000 men, 53 aircraft and a sample of almost every piece of Canadian military hardware that can be rounded up from Camp Shilo, Man., to Gagetown, N.B.

Displayed publicly for the first time will be the four pieces of Canada's nuclear arsenal: The Bomarc anti - aircraft missile, the Honest John artillery rocket, the Voodoo interceptor, and the Starfighter strike - reconnaissance aircraft.

It will take more than an hour for the parade to pass any given point on the 2½-mile downtown route that ends with Prime Minister Pearson taking the salute in front of the Parliament Buildings.

The accent will be on integration.

The march will replace the traditional days and weeks of former set aside by each of the three services for public display. Instead, it will be an all-in-one show designed to show the public and the military itself the benefits of Defence Minister Hellyer's one - force policy.



"We're hoping it will do wonders for out arm's morale," said one spokesman.

With the nuclear equipment on display, planners hoped no trouble would arise from banthe - bomb demonstrators who could seize upon the parade as an opportunity to register their protest against Canadian possession of such hardware.

The march-past itself will feature 2,500 men—the other 5,500 will be doing everything from flying planes to manning guns—and a collection of equipment ranging from navy torpedo launchers and models of new destroyer escorts to air force parachute displays and big - fighting equipment.

While the men and machinery move past below, the 53 aircraft—everything from Yukon transports to T-33 jet trainers—will swoop past overhead at one-minute intervals.

Mr. Pearson will be flanked by Mr. Hellyer, the armed forces chiefs of staff and a selection of civilian and military brass.

Looks Like Grim Year For Pea Crop in County

Drought conditions throughout the Bay of Quinte area will cut this year's pea canning crop at least in half and unless rain is received soon will also have a serious effect on the grain and corn crops.

Mr. Earl Smith, plant manager for the Barker Canning Company of Bloomfield, said this morning that it looked like a "grim" year for the pea crop in Prince Edward county.

"It's quite true," Mr. Smith replied when asked by The Ontario Intelligencer regarding drought conditions. "The early pea crop will be cut at least in half and unless rain is received soon late peas in many cases will be almost a complete loss."

In isolated cases farmers have already cultivated late pea fields down when the seed has failed to germinate because of dry conditions.

CONDITIONS WORSE

Mr. Smith said drought conditions were considerably worse in Prince Edward county this year than they were last year.

"Usually there is enough moisture in the ground this time of year to insure proper germination of seed, but such has not been the case this year," he said.

In addition to the poor pea crop expected, grain crops and pastures are almost standing still because of cool weather and lack of moisture in the ground.

Moisture fields which in the normal year would still be in inches high, have already been eaten off by cattle.

Also corn growers are beginning to worry about the lack of moisture in the ground. Should fear that unless rain is received there will not be enough moisture to germinate corn seed when it is planted.

SOME FROST DAMAGE

Tomato growers are also seeing the effects of the cold dry spring.

Slight frost damage was reported a few nights about a week ago and in addition the still spindly plants are being attacked by the cool worms.

"Cut worms are going right down the rows cutting off the plants," the Bloomfield canning plant manager said. "The worms are the worst this year that I have seen."

The spring drought is not only affecting the Prince Edward county district, but is stated quite general in the entire area east of Trenton.

Both main tracks of the Toronto-Chicago line were torn up. All trains have been re-routed on a spur line via Stratford.

All CNR telegraph lines between Sarnia and London were cut.

sent the letter to assist Shantelli in his application for a loan. Shonelhil had received nothing for a $1,000 donation to a provincial Liberal Credit party political fund. He said he wanted to help the millionaire.

Mr. Justice Gillanders and Williamson had sent the letter because he hoped to gain a rich client for himself.

In a special statement after the jury announced its verdict, Mr. Justice Masson said that in his view none of the evidence cast doubt on Premier Duplessis's integrity and accordingly he was directing the jury to find him not guilty.

Mr. Justice Masson sent it after through the corridors during his charge to the jury when he commented on "the unexplained failure" of the Crown to call Premier Bennett as a witness.

He said the premier, now on a trade-promoting tour in Hong Kong, was the person best able to contradict Williamson's evidence that he had authority to write the letter.

The judge said:

"His (Williamson's) function as public relations man is to advertise the interest of the boss and carry them out. If the letter from the premier would attain that object the accused would naturally infer that he had authority to write the letter.

"The accused is a public relations and financial image-maker in that half-deceitful complex world inhabited sometimes by politicians and he endeavors with products to sell by any means. His job was to get results."

Leafy Month of June Bursting With Weddings, Old Customs Followed

June is bustin' out all over . . . the brides are waitin' in the dell. The grooms are all out beatin' bread path over somebody's wishin' them all well.

It's here again! June! The month of weddings. Two parishioners hundreds of couples it will mean a whole new way of life and the usual exciting event of their lives.

Starry-eyed couples on the altar-bound path over many centuries of tradition on their way. Courtship customs as we know them today were practiced, in one form or another, long, long ago.

A gift of a diamond ring usually starts the couple off, if, of course the young man can afford it. This custom harks back to medieval Italians, who thought the gem had power to maintain peace and harmony between husband and wife.

According to an old superstition the pearl is the gem originated the fires of love.

But rings were exchanged only for holding purposes in the marriage vow. Their rings were made of iron. Later early Britons were made of brass, rush leather and even wood. In ancient Ireland it was the custom for a man to give his betrothed a ring made of human hair.

The ring is a symbol. It is a circle has always had significance . . . that "mutual love and liberty affection which reverently flow from one person to the other . . . continuously forever," as one 17th century writer put it.

STARTED IN FRANCE

The ring was worn on the third finger of the left hand because it was once believed that the "vena amoris," or vein of love, ran from this finger to the heart.

On the way to the altar, the bride-to-be amasses a trousseau, a tradition started in old France, when the clothes were purchased from their fathers, but given a "dowry" (little bundle) as compensation.

The trousseau hardly differed from, early, simple origin. It was an indirect way of paying back the bridegroom for the money or goods that he gave his father-in-law to buy a bride.

When marriage by purchase became pass, the dowry or trousseau remained.

In many places today, bridal finery and linens are collected for girls even as early as at five years of age. And, there once after from the time when the would attain that object the accused would naturally infer that he had authority to write the letter.

Superstition clouds the bridal trousseau, too. Here's one: if a bit of handwork is done every stitch — is placed by the bride-to-be on every gown that she's in the hope chest, happiness and good fortune will be hers throughout life.

A modern version of this fancy is made by many brides in their selection of embroidered sheets and pillowcases.

Before she marries, the engaged girl is likely to be the guest of honor at a bridal shower. This delightful custom originated in Holland when the girl opened by chance when a rich man, whose daughter married a poor suitor, refused to give a dowry. Friends of the miller, also poor, were sorry for the couple without any worldly goods. They got together and decided each would make a gift, meagre though it be, and that they would all give their gifts at one time so as not to make them appear too trifling. In this way, the couple was "showered" with gifts to start their new home — and that's the idea of showers today.

ANCIENT PRACTICE

At one time, bridesmaids were chosen to rescue a bride from the grooms. This custom arose from the ancient practice of marriage by capture — when the groom literally stole his bride.

Norman E. Edwards OPT.D. Optometrist McCarthy Theatre Building 221 FRONT STREET DIAL 963-4140

Long after this practice declined, it was considered the accepted custom only that the bride be pressed to struggle away from the groom. The bride's friends would attack the bridegroom, pull his garments, and attempt to take the bride away. As time went on, the bride and groom's fighting friends made up and became a traditional and colorful part of the wedding. Hence today, we have the numerous little tricks that are always played on the bridegroom.

The actual wedding ceremony as generally conducted in the Western world today has its origins in religion, and is performed in accordance with the religious custom of the bride and groom.

But among many primitive peoples, the mere act of eating together constituted marriage. In the Fiji Islands, for instance, the marriage ceremony was considered complete as soon as the pair had eaten from the same dish.

Other marriage customs were the "bundling" board custom which prevailed among North American Indians was that the bride and groom slept in the same small bundle of rods, piled them before the man's tent, built a fire, and made a meal cake for him. When and if he got Maple Leaf.

Accused Tells Story of Woman's Death

TORONTO (CP)—Police Friday gave the non-capital murder trial of John Wright the story of the death of Eileen Patton the accused told after his arrest.

The 36-year-old woman was found New Year's Day on a road below the kitchen window of Wright's Toronto apartment.

Wright, 27, said in his second statement to police that 11 hours after he surrendered that he had met her on New Year's Eve and had gone to his apartment.

Wright said she left and promised to return, and he told her to knock on the rear kitchen window.

"I was sleeping and heard a noise," police quoted Wright as saying. "I ran to the window, not realizing who it was, and grabbed her.

"I used to be in sort of a blind rage or something. When I grabbed her by the throat I fell on the roof."

TOOK HER IN

Wright was quoted as saying he brought the woman in and put her on the bathroom floor.

Police also quoted an earlier statement from Wright in which he said he had come home about 3 or 4 a.m. and noticed a girl lying in the downfall. When he pulled her into his apartment he found that her body was cold.

"I panicked and put her outside," he was quoted as saying. Medical evidence revealed the woman choked on her stomach contents and there was evidence of manual strangulation. She also has been told she was a known prostitute and drug addict.

Thursday Hilda Gray, a woman who lived with Wright, testified he told her he had killed a woman.

power to suspend the employee. The strike was started when a driver reached the maximum points for losing a carton of freight.

Union officials said the men have been restive on the issue of the demerit system for over a year.

William J. Smith, president of the union, will meet Donald Gordon, president of CNR, at the Montreal negotiations.

SUPPORTS STRIKERS

Mr. Smith, who originally described the strike as a breach of the agreement with CNR, put the union on record in support of the strikers Friday.

A stormy reception given the suggestion of illegality at a meeting of all Toronto members Wednesday evening seems to have engulfed the constitutional claims of the leadership.

A national strike would halt all CNR freight shipments by rail and air in Canada. Air Canada's freight and express services would be affected also because CN does the pick-up and delivery for the airline.

Air Canada's freight and express office Friday was advising customers to bring parcels to the airport themselves. No trucks were available.

It could also affect passenger service if the walkout extended to sleeping and dining car conductors, porters and waiters who are members of the union. Also in the union are employees of the railway's hotels and ferrys.

SEND TELEGRAM

A committee representing the brotherhood in Toronto sent a telegram to P.M. Lester Pearson. Pearson Friday requesting the appointment of a commission of inquiry into the labor relations policies of the CNR.

The telegram read: "Railway workers, members of Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers driven to extreme measures or mass work stoppage to protest harsh, repressive actions of CNR management in misuse of demerit system.

"We respectfully request you to appoint impartial commission of inquiry to investigate unfair reactionary CNR labor relations practices."

Telegrams were also sent to Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker, Labor Minister Maclachen and Transport Minister Pickersgill asking support for the appointment of the commission.

Edward Finn, director of public relations for the union, said in Toronto the men were determined to stay off work until the CNR guaranteed: Withdrawal of the penalties which precipitated the strike, no reaction against the strikers and top-level treatment of the men's grievances.

SPREADS IN ONTARIO

The walkout, which started in Toronto, has spread to Hamilton, Brampton, London and Oakville by evening.

Friday express and freight employees in Ottawa, Oshawa and Brantford left their jobs in sympathy. A wildcat strike by Local 185 in Windsor, Ont., was directed against working conditions there.

A union official denied a connection with the Toronto strike.

In Ottawa some 200 employees came to work Friday but tied up freight yards by going to two lengthy prayer meetings in Trafalger Hall.

Late reports indicated that the walkout in Toronto was spreading west but further information was not immediately available.

Spacemen

Divitt and White were pronounced in excellent physical condition. While suffered no apparent after-effects from the 20-minute excursion he made outside the capsule shortly after Thursday's launching from Cape Kennedy, Fla.

But no American has spent as much time orbiting the earth and the medics were on the alert for any sign of physical or mental deterioration that might result from long exposure to the hostile, weightless environment.

If there is trouble—and it may not show up until after they return to earth Monday—it could affect the whole future of American manned space flight.

HAS NERVES

McDivitt said that during the 19th orbit he sighted an orbiting object "with big arms sticking out." He took movies, but the glaring sun prevented him identifying it or estimating its distance from the Gemini iv.

There was some speculation it was the Pegasus II meteoroid detection satellite launched May 25 from Cape Kennedy.

At a midnight press briefing, mission control officials said the Pegasus II was about 3,000 miles "in the proper direction to be observed by the astronauts."

Dr. Dwayne Catterson, flight medical expert, said he did not think the object which was 1,000 miles could be identified by the human eye. "But certainly if the contrast was great enough to screen sunlight on object and background he could see an object as large as he might well see reflection giving shape from the sun."

Flight Director Eugene Kranz added that all of the space fragments were of American manufacture. Soviet satellites were put in a different track.

PERFORMS TESTS

As Gemini IV circled around the globe, the space twins continued to perform routine test pilot tasks intended to fully qualify men and machinery for longer trips.

Business even came before congratulations Friday night when McDivitt and White broke astronaut Gordon Cooper's U.S. orbital record of 34 hours 20 minutes established in May, 1963.

At 9:36 p.m. EDT, the moment the new mark was set, Stuart Davis, capsule communicator at the Manned Tracking station, contacted the Gemini IV by radio, relayed instructions for a medical test and then the them map co-ordinates. Then he added, rather matter-of-factly:

"We'd also like to congratulate you on a new American space flight record."

Astronaut Cooper replied McDivitt, "we've got quite a few more (orbits) to go. Thank you very much."

ENDS MONDAY

They then slipped on in their planned 97-hour, 50-minute voyages which is to end at 1:06 p.m. Monday with a parachute splash-down in the Atlantic Ocean 400 miles southwest of Bermuda.

The world space flight record is held by Soviet cosmonaut Valery Bykovsky who stayed aloft for 119 hours, six minutes, just shy of five days, in 1963.

The U.S. plans to challenge that standard in August by sending Cooper and rookie astronaut Walter Schirra on a planned seven-day trip.

Whether they'll make the August date depends on what the medics learn from McDivitt and White. Their bodies were wired to record the slightest change in heart beat, respiration, pulse or temperature.

After they're back on earth, extensive examination is planned, including at least three two religious sects—the Cao-Dai and Hoa-Hao—as well as southern leaders, including some Buddhists against Quat and his government.

The prime minister has the tacit support of the powerful unified Buddhist church and most of the military leaders.

position parties. "I now suggest that the time has come when perhaps we can decide this matter."

Government sources said outside the Commons they are prepared to let the debate continue for another few days, hoping that the Conservatives will run out of speakers and allow the motion to come to a vote.

The only speakers in Friday's debate, five Conservatives, ran into heavy kidding from Liberal backbenchers. Deputy Speaker Lucien Lamoureux repeatedly cautioned the them against straying from the subject of the resolution.

The 1965 session is two months old today and only two important government bills have been passed — those providing for the retirement of future senators at 75 and increasing the loan ceilings in the National Housing Act. No early summer recess is in prospect.

Conservative spokesmen have warned that they will drag out the rules debate unless the proposal is withdrawn.

Solicitor-General MacNaught said Thursday the government will not withdraw it and Mr. Pearson reaffirmed this stand Friday.

DEADLOCK HARDENS

The deadlock hardened later when Thomas M. Bell (PC — Saint John - Albert) introduced an amendment providing that the rule could not be applied unless 60 per cent of the voting approved.

Government House Leader McIlraith objected that the amendment violated a clause in the constitution that says questions must be decided in the Commons by a simple majority.

The Deputy Speaker ruled the amendment in order, however saying he has no jurisdiction to pass judgment on the constitutional validity of legislation or amendments.

Mr. Bell said his motion would not give the Conservatives a veto over the use of the rule since they hold only 35 per cent of the 265 Commons seats.

About 15 members of other opposition parties would have to join the 83 Conservatives to block its implementation.

The amendment was endorsed by, among others, Walter Dinsdale (PC—Oxford).

A government amendment to the rules resolution was passed 171 to 66, with the Conservatives alone in opposition. The amendment provides that under the debate - limiting rule an all - party committee could limit individual speeches.

Debate continues Monday on Mr. Bell's amendment.

Ottawa Visit June 11

Shastri Is Up to Expectations As Successor to India's Nehru

BOMBAY (CP)—Lal Bahadur Shastri's visit to Canada June 11 will mark the completion of the first year of his premiership of India, the world's most populous democracy.

For the unassuming, saintly and diminutive successor to the late Jawaharlal Nehru the period has been one of great trials and substantial achievements in both domestic and foreign policy.

The Ottawa trip is part of the 39-year-old Shastri's efforts to get to know foreign political leaders. Until he stepped into the dynamic Nehru's shoes, Shastri had never been outside India save for a brief visit to Nepal, the Himalayan Hindu kingdom sandwiched between India and China.

The Indian leader likes to describe himself as "an implicit follower of Nehru." On his unanimous election to the premiership by the ruling Congress party's parliamentary party a development that brought visible relief to the free world—Shastri said: "I am not 400,000,000, countrymen "to judge me by the Nehru yardstick."

The Nehru yardstick during the 17 years of the former prime minister's stewardship of India since Britain left could be summed up in the following phrases: a strong democracy at home, socialism based on Gandhian humanism and a policy of friendship towards all countries based on non-alignment.

AT HOME WITH LOWLY

All three concepts have been sorely tested since Shastri but he seems to have lived up to the estimate that he was the best man to have followed Nehru.

For the first time Indians say they have a prime minister who is easily accessible to the common man and who listens to all points of view with patience and understanding.

Shastri says he feels more at home in the company of peasants and workers than amidst New Delhi's Western-educated eggheads who often think nostalgically of Nehru's Oxford accent.

Maharaja Karni Singh, a former princely chieftain who now is a member of Parliament, recently complained "It is easier to climb Mount Everest than to see Mr. Shastri."

But the leaders of a delegation of striking hospital workers were able to meet the prime minister on two hours' notice.

Shastri's greatest problem on the domestic front has been food shortages.

By a mixture of persuasion and threats he succeeded in making rich cultivators disgorge their hoarded grain stocks to feed the hungry.

His talent for conciliation also was evident in the way he settled the language problem. Last January there were fierce riots in south India when the federal government sought to make Hindi, the language of the northerners, the sole official medium.

APPLIED FIRM HAND

Though these feelings still simmer beneath the surface, the prime minister has been able to convince the Hindi-less southerners that the government does not intend to practise "Hindi imperialism." A compromise formula now is being worked out.

Shastri has a small-sized and and meek-looking but I can be firm when the situation demands it," Shastri says.

He dealt firmly with the Communists, jailing some 900 of them following what was officially described as a conspiracy to foment violence and anarchy.

Relations with Pakistan and China have caused Shastri many anxious moments.

The country recently was on the verge of a major war with Pakistan over the Rann of Kutch border dispute. Party opinion favored a strong line but Shastri overruled extremists and accepted British Prime Minister Harold Wilson's offer of mediation. Observers said he showed remarkable courage in doing so.

Shastri contends his recent trip to Moscow has further stabilized Soviet support to India in the border dispute with China, though Socialist party leader Preem Bhasin and other critics think the prime minister is being over-optimistic.

The Congress party leader told this reporter that Shastri expects his talk with Prime Minister Kosygin in Ottawa also will help to improve New Delhi's relations with Washington.

He intends to discuss with Pearson possibilities of toning down Washington's Viet Nam policy of which he has been a strong critic.

Observers say the Indian prime minister will seek to assure Canadian and British leaders he does not wish to improve ties with Moscow at the cost of Western friendship. Shastri proceeds from Ottawa to London for the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference.

Eight marines were wounded in the fighting.

In Cambodia near Da Nang, two marines were killed and five wounded. The marines destroyed 43 Viet Cong suspects following the sweep through guerrilla-infested territory.

BATTLE JOINED

The U.S. spokesman's prediction on the Communist move to be played by American troops in the Vietnamese war came shortly after the battle started in their present defensive role turned back a sharp Viet Cong attack near the important air base at Da Nang.

Referring to the series of major guerrilla-initiated battles in past week, he said: "I believe the important battle of the summer of 1965 has just been joined."

The time will come when American troops will stand on their role," he said.

On the political scene, Prime Minister Phan Huy Quat is expected to announce shortly two key cabinet changes.

The interior and economics are expected to be replaced. Both previously had refused to resign, bringing on a cabinet crisis.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the growing Catholic opposition said Friday night a settlement of the cabinet issue will not affect the Catholics' campaign to topple Quat.

"We have gone too far to retreat," he said.

Informed sources said today Quat will send his own representatives to meet Catholic leaders in an effort to head off the opposition.

The Catholics are allied with two religious sects—the Cao-Dai and Hoa-Hao—as well as southern leaders, including some Buddhists against Quat and his government.

The prime minister has the tacit support of the powerful unified Buddhist church and most of the military leaders.

Two Sentenced To Be Hanged On Sept. 29

TORONTO (CP)—Robert Michael Black, 18, and William Alexander Mackie, 19, were sentenced to be hanged Sept. 29 for the capital murder of insurance actuary Aiden MacDonald, 35, who was found drowned Jan. 8.

The jury deliberated three hours to deliver the verdict and included a strong recommendation for mercy.

Mr. Justice William D. Parker of the Ontario Supreme Court said he would include the recommendation in his report but had no choice but to pass the death sentence.

At the pronouncement Black said loudly: "There has been a bad mistake made. We never put a hand on this man at all."

Mackie said: "That is right."

CROWN SEES MOTIVE

The Crown alleged that Black and Mackie took MacDonald to the Black Creek in suburban Downsview to rob him of $400 to $400 they believed he was carrying.

MacDonald was drunk and was either pushed or fell into the creek, where he drowned, the Crown said.

Both Black and Mackie denied robbing the man and said his fall into the creek was an accident. They said they left the area thinking the man had walked out of the water and was in no danger.

Evidence of Donald Sullivan a former police constable and now a private investigator, was disallowed. Sullivan said he had overheard the two men discussing the death while sitting in their jail cell.

He quoted Black as saying: "Wouldn't it be funny if he was wanted criminal and we got $1,000 for drowning him?"

Man Drowned Was Impaired Inquest Told

MATHESON, Ont. (CP) — Robert McCullough, 26, one of three Matheson men drowned May 12 when their motorboat capsized, was impaired by alcohol, a doctor told a coroner's jury Friday.

McCullough's blood had an alcohol content of 1.8 parts for every 1,000 parts of blood. Anyone whose alcohol content is 1.5 parts or more is regarded as being impaired, said Dr. A. F. Sabin.

McCullough was operating the boat in Abitibi Lake, 30 miles northwest of here, in which he, provincial police Constable Sidney Thompson, 29, and Robert Haley, 24, were drowned.

Dr. Sabin said the blood of Thompson and Haley contained 3 parts of alcohol for 1,000 parts of blood.

Mrs. Eugene Tremblay, a resort owner at the site near the accident, testified the boat was heavily loaded. The weight was estimated at about 1,500 pounds, 850 pounds over the 650 - pound limit permitted by the department of transport.

Allan Clark, 24, also of Matheson, who survived the mishap by swimming less than half a mile to shore, testified that the boat capsized in water from its own wake.

The jury recommended that all boats have rated capacity tags attached to them and that persons wear life jackets in boats.

It also suggested that laced boots be unlaced in boats for quick removal in emergency.

Canadian Folk Dances

One of the main purposes of this year's Dominion Drama Festival, which has just ended in Brockville, was the achievement of greater national unity through the arts.

Representatives of both the Ontario Arts Council and the Canadian Conference of the Arts were in Brockville, the latter to invite festival participation in a brief to the Royal Commission on Biculturalism and Bilingualism on the theme of unity.

Herbert Whittaker of The Globe and Mail says there were examples of such unity during the festival week, as well as incidents "less cheerful." Commenting up the festival, he wrote: "Quebec muscles tensed when Ontario voices sounded the old condescensions or the new pussiements. And Ontario faces have occasionally demonstrated the new resentment at committee meetings." Whittaker noted, however, that such tensions were becoming less conspicuous.

Perhaps, the unity-through - art - brigade should have been in Toronto to see a classic example of such unity already in being (doubtless they were, at some point during the week). We refer to Les Feux-Follets, a new folk dancing and singing group from Quebec, which has just concluded an engagement at the O'Keefe Centre prior to embarking on a cross-wide tour. The Canadian National Dance Ensemble, as the company is styled, comprises 65 dancers, singers and musicians. Their freshness and youthfulness is illustrated by the fact the average age of the performers is only 20. An overseas tour is also planned for them and they will represent Canada at the Royal Festival in England.

If you're fortunate enough to have seen Les Feux-Follets in Toronto (this week they are in Windsor) must have felt that here was a company of remarkable talent, reflecting in song and dance the varied mosaic that is Canada; completely at ease in English and French, conversant also with Indian and Eskimo dialects—and most important, in tune with their work. Such sheer magnetism that even the reserved Toronto audiences were more than ordinarily moved.

French Canadian almost to a man, the company was equally at home in the folk dances of the Indian, Eskimo, Acadian and Scots of Nova Scotia. Canada may be proud of this company and their reception overseas should be equally favorable. What Katharine Dunham has done for the folk culture of the West Indies, Les Feux-Follets is likely to achieve for Canada. In this group art is diversity—but no hint of that ugly word, separatism.

Poor Company for an Anthem

Gene Tuney does not like the way the Clay-Liston heavyweight fight ended.

In this he has lots of company.

Tunney's opinion though, would deserve more attention than most if his criticism were confined to the performance of the boxers. As a former heavyweight champion himself, he could speak with authority

Unfortunately Tunney himself says that what offended him most was the presence in the ring of the United States Marine Corps guard and the playing of the Star Spangled Banner "at an event involving two completely reprehensible characters like the fellow who calls himself Muhammid Ali and the other Liston."

Tunney is a former Marine and he has every right to concern himself with the honor of the Corps. But just as long as the Marines, or any similar organization, lend themselves to the dramatization of public spectacles over which they have no control, and just as long as the playing of a national anthem is thought to be not merely permissible but desirable at public functions, Marines and the anthem are going to find themselves in strange company.

We hold no brief for either Clay or Liston, but they are not the first professional athletes whose qualifications as estimable citizens are open to question. Nor are athletes alone in this. There are actors, some politicians and even some business and industrial leaders whose private conduct is not always above criticism.

Tunney, though, is making a sound point if he is suggesting that what happened at the Clay-Liston fight ought in no cause to revive our thinking about the desirability of letting any commercial, sectional or political gathering wrap itself in the dignity of the flag and invoke the blessing of the national anthem.

Simple Tests Can Prevent Babies Becoming Retarded

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Yesterday we described PKU (Phenylketonuria), a disease which relentlessly turns otherwise normal babies into mentally retarded ones, unless it is discovered early and a special diet is adopted.

How do you know when a baby has PKU? For one thing, the urine has a musty smell. But how do you know just what I mean by that? You don't! And I can't describe it any better than that.

However, there is a very simple test which will show when phenylalanine is present in the urine, which is a test for the disease. A drop of 10 percent iron chloride on a wad diaper taken from the child will turn blue.

It's easy, inexpensive test! But when it means the difference between having a normal child and a retarded one each mom have to spend all the rest of its life in an institution, there is no excuse for not testing a very baby.

There are some aspects which should — I MUST — be understood, however. In some areas it is now mandatory, under state law, to test every baby born baby for PKU. Generally the rule is to test the babies when 9 days old.

The trouble is, the condition does not always show up quite that soon. The premature baby, the baby who must be artificially fed, or given limited formula, or even the baby who for some reason just doesn't want to eat at first, will not get enough protein, and hence not enough phenylalanine, to show up in the test.

Thus it is important that testing also be done later. The ideal, and I rely on specialists to whom I have talked, would be to have the first test before the baby leaves the hospital, and repeat tests at two weeks, six weeks and two months. That way we probably would detect every case, and detect it in plenty of time.

Indeed, if we found every case when the baby was no more than three to six months old, and then started the special diet, we would prevent all, or nearly all, of the brain damage from PKU.

True, there is a blood test for PKU. It will detect some cases before the economical urine test will, simply because there is a little lag at the beginning. The phenylalanine will build up in the blood first, and a bit later will "spill over" into the kidneys and urine, the blood test costs several dollars.

When you remember that PKU occurs only once in every 10,000 or 12,000 children, you wonder how much we should spend to find each case. A few cases, at any baby, spent at the right time, is one thing. A few dollars per baby is something else when multiplied by 10,000.

I wish I had an easy answer for legislators in various states who are wrestling with what kind of law, if any, they should pass. But the ideal answer is not a law, but a universal understanding that one or two or three of the very inexpensive tests, properly timed, will do what needs to be done.

Two more remarks and I'm finished!

First: We now have records of cases of children who are grossly retarded from this by the time they are a year old.

Second: Blood, bone - eyed babies are more frequently the victims. Others may be, but not very often.

Gives Case Against Capital Punishment

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

In your editorial on capital punishment, you gave two arguments in support of the retention of capital punishment. You said that convicted murderers should be executed to prevent future murder. In addition you said that capital punishment would be more humane than the frustration of confinement.

Certainly, capital punishment does remove the immediate problem of exterminating a convict, all concerned removing the danger of him repeating the act. What, however, does it do to prevent other potential murderers from committing a similar crime?

It is very true that a good majority of murders are resultant from illogical motives of emotion, bordering on insanity? Does this not suggest that many murderers have no regard for consequences? Further, couldn't a long range psychological analysis of these motives add valuable information to the cause of murder, which might lead to the prevention of murder, and thus eliminate the disastrous effect? Is this possible if case histories are made available for study? The question arises which is of the greater benefit to society, removal of the danger of convicted murderers, or prevention of potential murder?

What is the most humane punishment for a capital crime? Have we not come to realize that imprisonment as well as suggesting punishment, implies also rehabilitation of the criminal. Is not the aim of rehabilitation, that is, return to society as a useful member possible, with convicted murderers? Could not a convicted murderer, by some admission of justice, be in fact innocent. Is correction of this error possible when the man has been executed?

In summation is the concept of "an eye for an eye" a sound principle of either reason or morality?

Today I parked my car at a meter in downtown Belleville and when I put the required dime in the meter for two hours conscientiously ran out every two hours to put more money in and at no time did the meter show the correct amount of time.

Parliamentarians Never Too Busy to Encourage Youth

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pearson was just back from weekend speaking engagements in Sudbury and Kingston, and racing in from a VIP luncheon with Premier Eric Williams of Trinidad and Tobago to hurry into the Commons.

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker had only then returned from Oshawa and Peterborough appearances, and was pencilling in last-minute changes in the motion he would be moving in the Commons in the next 10 minutes to adjourn the normal, scheduled business of the House for an emergency debate on what he saw as the threat of a new world war.

New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas, only in from Uplands Airport a few minutes after spending the night on the plane on the dog's leg flight through Toronto from Vancouver to Ottawa, was busy, occupied and badly fatigued.

Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp had flown in on the weekend from his uranium sales negotiations in Paris, and was scribbling the closing sentences of two statements he would be making in the Commons, one on the inconclusive talks with the French Canadian, the other on the sale of another 18 million bushels of wheat to Red China.

External Affairs Minister Paul Martin was just busy, scanning last minute flashes from overseas ahead of the fighting in Viet Nam, the Dominican Republic, Bolivia, Malaysia and the infighting at the UN and NATO Nations, so that he could update the Commons in the Daily Question Period, about to start.

MAKE TIME

Busy, busy men, all of them.

Time and responsibility pressuring them.

Aides and advisors waiting urgently to see them.

Phones ringing.

Appointments endlessly waiting.

The House opening.

How busy then?

Busier, much, than any doctor would immediately advise them they had any right to be.

But not so busy they couldn't see — by squeezing a minute or so from a day they probably thought already wrung dry of time — four girl students from Ottawa University, all majoring in social service, one from Saskatoon, one from Kitchener, one from Hamilton and the fourth from Iowa.

"Come on in. Make yourself comfortable," said Martin to the onlooker, climbing out of his Captain's Chair to make them welcome in the office and seat them for a short chat and a couple of old Prairie jawbreakers, at the wide leather chesterfield.

"Saskatoon, eh?" he asked the immediate area were in use, (except some which were in an area where parking is allowed on certain days), so I continued to use the one I had. Finally, in the Belleville Bakery, the parking meter attendant very efficiently tagged my car with a parking traffic violation mailing envelope.

Being civic minded as well as fond of a bun, I chased half a block after him and informed him that the meter was not functioning properly. As a fair minded individual, he gave me the benefit of the doubt and inserted two red-spotted nickles in the slot of the offending machine. He then took down his coins, too, bought only one hour and 50 minutes parking time for his 10 cents, put his book of honors, indicating meter-such-and-such was in need of adjustment or repair. Not only did he not thank me for helping him to make sure the meters in his area were operating properly, he left me holding the evidence of my overpayment. Not for contribution to the city coffers, but alas, I did not do so happily.

I'm sure that with sufficient meter attendeants must run into many grouchy types, who, like me, resent being charged for ten minutes parking time and only given 6 cents in change, down nickle - devouring parking meter. But when a meter is checked and found to be inaccurate, should the overtime fine be imposed, regardless? Why are some cars parked on the market on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday mornings, with no fines being imposed, when the sign clearly states there is no parking allowed at that time. Does the no parking sign mean just what it says - to everyone, or does the city need the parking meter coins so desperately that they can overlook the people who ignore the sign, so long as they feed the meter?

Try to Tax Plane Crew

Winnipeg Tribune

Ottawa and the provincial governments have some pretty ingenious taxes on their books but they take a back seat in this department to some of the U.S. states.

A number of U.S. states are now determined to collect state income taxes from aircraft crews on that portion of their earning time they spend in or over the state involved. Thus at 600 miles an hour a pilot might own the state only for some 44 minutes and five seconds of income tax on his flight pay. Or he might spend that time in case of circling astronauts.

Knowledge, sound habits and appreciation of values are the three essentials with which graduating students must be equipped to make successful their way in life, students of Albert College were told Sunday morning as they attended Bridge Street United Church for their annual baccalaureate service.

As guest speaker for the service, Rev. J. D. Parks, B.A., B. D., of High Park United Church in Toronto, told graduating students that the world into which they were going was one of danger and adventure and one which required the best of life's equipment. The danger was civilian and not military, but the speaker stated life would be more like a battle than a Sunday School picnic.

Mr. Parks referred to his service with the R.C.A.F. and how thousands of young men had been trained in the destruction of human life and property. He was glad on Sunday to be able to speak to a graduating class taught along constructive lines. He thought of a teacher as an equipment officer fitting his pupils with the equipment of life.

Last evening Mr. Rawson entertained a number of the city council and chamber of commerce members to a ride about the city and to Shannonville. The Conveyance, erected at present is along Front Street to the north station, a T N E Strecker Co. car on Dundas Street, then to Charles Street, down Charles Street to Dundas Street and back to Front Street. 2 Monetary Experts Show Concern Over New Setback

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Two international monetary experts have shown rather disquieting concern about the possibility of widespread depression, a spectre that still haunts a relatively buoyant but troubled world. Little public attention seems to have been paid to the tools invented since the 1930s for preventing the recurrance of a crash.

Jacques Rueff, monetary adviser to French President de Gaulle, touched on similarities between the pre - Depression boom of the 1920s and current trends during a recent London panel discussion in which he pushed for a doubling of the official price of gold.

William McChesney Martin, chairman of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board, also raised concern when he told a New York audience the disaster of 1929-32 was "a consequence of maladjustments born of the boom of the 1920s."

Martin's remarks had the greater impact, causing fluctuations in the New York Stock Exchange. Investors trembled at the thought of another depression, although some economists maintain there are so many built-in defences that such a widespread crash cannot recur.

SUPPORT SECURITY

Both Rueff and Martin raised the spectre not so much as an immediate threat but as an argument in support of other issues. Rueff wants the official price of gold pushed to $70 an ounce; Martin wants to see the U.S. government restrain expansionary policies which could lead to unwanted inflation and other dangers.

In contrast to the spectre is the reality; when the British pound was battered by heavy foreign attack, the world's major central banking system brought to bear a massive monetary defence. For the moment all national policies and goals were set aside.

Gradually during the post-war years machinery had been built up through the International Monetary Fund, regional arrangements and bilateral currency swaps to head off the threat of a currency collapse.

Runaway inflation and competitive currency devaluations still are possibilities in a none-too-perfect world. Those who raise the spectre of depression are well aware that the amount of world credit available to oil the wheels of world finance may be insufficient in relation to an expanding world trade. And national political policies can sometimes defeat the machinery for maintaining the strength of national currencies.

EXAGGERATED?

But as a New York newspaper suggested, Martin may have exaggerated the parallels between the current situation and that of the 1930s in trying to temper "boom talk" by the U.S government.

London's Economist goes a step farther. It suggests that if Martin's aim was to encourage belt-tightening by the U.S., particularly in reducing the U.S. international payments deficit, the result may be the very depression Martin is so anxious to avoid.

The surplus of U.S. dollars floating around the world helps finance world trade. Without developing some new credit machinery elsewhere, a reduction in that surplus of dollars can hurt trade expansion on which prosperity is based.

Presbyterians Urge Change In Immigration Policy

TORONTO (CP)—A less selective immigration policy and general acceptance of inter-racial marriage were urged by a board of the Presbyterian Church in Canada Friday.

The board of evangelism and social action, in a report to the general assembly of the church, said the federal government's immigration policy is too selective and does not allow unskilled persons into Canada.

It asked the church to urge the admission of unskilled persons of all races and ethnic groups.

Rev. Wilbert Young, chairman of the board, said that although the policy does not discriminate against colored persons, it does keep colored persons out of the country because they usually do not have the skills required.

Mr. Young said the intention of its recommendation on inter-racial marriage is not that the church endorse it, but that it work to make it socially acceptable.

THERE'S NO BAR

"It is the consensus of the board of evangelism and social action that there is no theological objection to inter - racial marriage, and there need be no practical problems provided the parties to the marriage are sufficiently mature to cope with our un-Christian color distinctions . . ."

Rev. A. J. Gowland, chairman of the committee on inter-racial marriage, said: "There's absolutely no reason why persons of two races should not marry."

There is no evidence that the children of such marriages are inherently inferior."

J. R. Glen, principal of Knox College of the University of Toronto, reported on the success of his committee to converse with the Anglicans started in 1960.

Rev. L. H. Fowler of Aurora said of the talks: "We are not talking about union—this is a case of two friendly neighbor chatting across a very low fence.

BREAKING OUT FLEET for another year of training, these youngsters ready safety-designed craft used in Bay of Quinte Yacht Club junior sailing program.

Junior Sailing Training Program Put in High Gear

Sail power is blithely back into its own for another summer—something of special interest to youngsters in the Belleville area.

For, synonymous with the arrival of the sailing season, comes the annual junior training program of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club.

Finishing touches now are being put to schedules as the club readies to launch the 1968 program on July 5.

Through the years it often has been taken for granted that this junior sailing program is exclusive to offspring of club members. The truth is exactly the opposite.

Anyone can join. The only qualification asked are that applicants be aged 10 to 18 years and can swim.

The program is designed to give its young participants practical knowledge of the art of sail power and general nautical practices.

The more advanced part of the programme allows for some lessons in the intricacies of navigation.

Key to the project's success, since it is a sure-fire winner of the youngster's enthusiasm, is the club's fleet of 14-foot Nordberg sailing craft. Built of fibre-glass with flotation tanks added for safety, the fleet now is being prepared for the use of the young trainees.

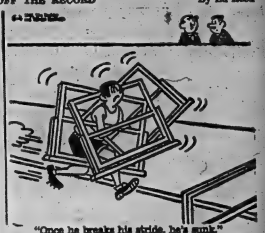
been out of town for much of the time.

Montreal morality squad members, acting on a tip, staked out an apartment in north-end Montreal for an hour then broke down the door, catching Durocher unawares.

"He was well armed," a member of the squad said. "We found three revolvers in the apartment, one hidden in the sofa, one in the kitchen and another under the bed."



Police also found several sticks of dynamite and three Molotov cocktails tied in a bundle."

Police detained a woman in the apartment who claimed to be Durocher's wife.

Following the jail escape, police speculated that Rivard got out of the country but thought him "much too clever to keep a small-time hood like that with him."

Durocher was in Bordeaux trial ward awaiting hearing on a truck hijacking charge. He was already serving a five-year term for armed robbery. Rivard was in the trial ward fighting extradition to Texas where he is wanted on charges of conspiring to smuggle narcotics into the United States.

Wives of Spacemen Enjoy Talk With Their Hubbies

HOUSTON (AP) — Mrs. James McDivitt and Mrs. Edward White told their husbands to "be good" and to "have a good flight" Friday in the first space conversation between U.S. astronauts and their wives.

The women sounded bright, happy and a little self-conscious as their voices travelled more than 100 miles into space to the Gemini IV.

The wives were at mission control here and their husbands were crossing California and approaching their 18th orbit.

Here is a transcript of their conversation:

Mrs. McDivitt: "Jim! Jim!"

McDivitt: "Huh!"

Mrs. McDivitt: "Do you hear me?"

McDivitt: "Roger. I can hear you loud and clear."

Mrs. McDivitt: "Well, you're doing great."

McDivitt: "Yeah, we seem to be covering a lot of territory up here. How are you?"

Mrs. McDivitt: "For me?"

Mrs. McDivitt: "I'm fine. Are you?"

McDivitt: "Pretty good. I'm over California right now."

Mrs. McDivitt: "Get yourself over Texas."

McDivitt: "We'll be in Texas in about three minutes."

Mrs McDivitt: "Hurry it up."

McDivitt: "How are the kids making out?"

Mrs. McDivitt: "Fine. They think you're at the Cape."

McDivitt: "Still think we're at Cocoa Beach, huh?"

Mrs. McDivitt: "That's where they think."

McDivitt: "Is everything going okay?"

Mrs. McDivitt: "Yes, beautifully. Beautifully."

McDivitt: "Behaving yourself?"

Mrs. McDivitt: "I'm always good. Are you going good?"

McDivitt: "I don't have much space. About all I can do is look out the window."

Mrs. McDivitt: "No room to move around?"

McDivitt: "Not too much. Ed's cluttering up the place."

Mrs. McDivitt: "Turn the computer on."

McDivitt: "Turn the computer on, ma'am."

McDivitt: "Computer's on."

Mission Control: "Roger."

Mrs. McDivitt: "Roger."

Mission control: "Is Ed awake?"

McDivitt: "Yeah, he's here."

Mrs. White: "Good morning."

White: "Howya doing?"

Mrs. White: "Fine."

Mrs. White: "You're really looking good."

White: "It looks pretty good from up here. We're passing over . . . we're coming up on the west Texas area. We'll be over Houston in a minute or so."

Mrs. White: "Good."

Whites: Garbled.

Mrs. White: "Didn't hear you."

Mrs. White: "It looked like you were having a wonderful time yesterday."

Whites: "Quite a time we had. Quite a time."

Mrs. White: "I can't wait to talk to you about it."

White: "How are Eddie and Bonnie (the children), honey?"

Mrs. White: "Fine."

White: "Okay, honey, I'll see you later."

Mrs. White: "Okay, have a good flight."

White: "Thank you, honey. Bye, bye."

Mrs. White: "Bye."

YWCA Delegates Approve Drugs for Birth Control

SASKATOON (CP) — Birth control should be a personal decision for Canadians and federal legislation should be enacted to allow the dissemination of information and sale of materials for birth control, the Young Women's Christian Association of Canada said Friday.

Delegates to the national YWCA convention unanimously supported a resolution approving changes in the Criminal Code which now makes it an offence to sell, advertise or publish any instructions, medicines or drugs or other articles intended to prevent conception.

The resolution suggested this should be illegal only when the information or materials for preventing conception are represented as a method of causing abortion or miscarriage, now also included in the code.

Birth control information and material must be made legally available, the resolution said, in the interests of the nation's health, its respect of its own laws and its reputation in foreign countries.

Delegates approved a resolution requesting "responsible governments" to intensify their efforts to change divorce legislation.

The association is to prepare a broad program of education in family life.

The program, to cover moral, social, psychological and physical aspects of family life, will be offered to YWCA members.

Delegates passed a resolution asking the organization to prepare the "flexible" program and devise means of training its staff in the content and method of family life education.

An earlier motion called for a sex education program, but delegates approved an amendment presented by Y-Teen delegates that the program be broadened.

One Y-Teen delegate said too much emphasis is placed on sex today and teen-agers want to see more of the moral, social and psychological aspects of family life discussed.

Mrs. J. E. Houck of Brampton reported the national development fund has reached $100,000. The six-year-old voluntary, contributory fund has an objective of $150,000.

Mrs. A. W. Ruby of Toronto was elected president.

Mrs. R. M. Brophy of Claremont, Ont., was named treasurer.

Readers' Saturday Column

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION:

Have you a leaflet of rhubarb recipes. We have so much rhubarb and I find rhubarb pie, rhubarb cobbler and rhubarb upside down cake have been made so often. I think the family would appreciate a change. Thank you very much for your wonderful column. Mrs. V. C.

ANSWER:

Thank you. Please see my recipes for three variations of rhubarb pies given here on Wednesday of the present week. I know you have a freezer so I have included the simple method of freezing rhubarb because it is so popular.

RHUBARB CRUNCH (see variations - serves 6 or 7)

½ cup melted butter,
1 cup sifted flour,
¾ cup quick-cooking rolled oats,
¾ cup light brown sugar,
1 teaspoon cinnamon,
½ teaspoon salt,
4 cups chopped rhubarb,
½ to ¾ cup granulated sugar (see note),
2 tablespoons cornstarch,
1 cup boiling water,
1 teaspoon vanilla.

In a medium saucepan melt the butter and cool it a little and work in the flour, oats, brown sugar, salt and cinnamon until crumbly. Press half of mixture into a 8 or 9" baking dish. Cover it with the prepared raw rhubarb. In a small saucepan mix together dry the granulated sugar (if you do not have a very sweet tooth use only ½ cup) and cornstarch, then stir in the boiling water and cook, stirring, until thick. Remove from heat and add vanilla. Pour this syrup evenly over the rhubarb. Now put remaining crumble mixture over top and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 50 to 60 minutes or until bubbly and golden and rhubarb is tender. Variations: 1) In above recipe use 3 cups rhubarb and 1 cup chopped oranges. 2) Use 2 cups rhubarb and 2 cups strawberries.

HEAVENLY RHUBARB JAM (very popular)

3 cups rhubarb (cut finely),
5 cups sugar,
one 30-oz. can crushed pineapple,
2 packages strawberry jello.

Mix first three ingredients and boil for 20 minutes. Then stir in the strawberry jello until dissolved. Pour into jars and seal with a double coating of new melted paraffin.

TO FREEZE RHUBARB

The red varieties of rhubarb are generally preferred for freezing. Harvest the tender early growths for best quality. The stalks are generally cut into 1" lengths and frozen "as is." (no sugar is required). Or it may be partially or fully cooked before freezing. Frozen rhubarb of good quality is popular.

Quick Change for Freeport From Nowhere to Boom Town

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

FREEPORT-LUCAYA, Grand Bahama Island — Ten years ago there was no such town as Freeport-Lucaya. was the original name of all the Bahamas, but as a place, it was nowhere.

In fact, there was practically nothing on this island, an hour's DC3 flight south of Nassau, except some 4,000 native fishermen, huddled together in a handful of shack villages. There was a land rush the westernmost tip of the island which had been built about 15 years ahead of its time and had become something of a curiosity in the pitch world of island resorts — an expensive and dismal failure.

It had been built by a dynamic Englishman with the unlikely name of Sir Billy Butlin. Butlin scored a roaring success in Europe with a series of budget resorts catering to his austerity-plagued countrymen and known as Holiday Camps. He thought the Western Hemisphere was ready for him. But instead of austerity here, there was boom, and Sir Billy went bust.

Ultimately the hotel changed hands a few times, finally was taken over by the Jack Tar chain, expanded and largely refurbished. As the Grand Bahama Hotel, it is today one of the largest and most successful convention-resorts in the Caribbean area. Its pool is so long, the swans glide low when they fill it.

During the 1950's, a millionaire American wheeler-and-dealer named Wallace Groves, who owned one of the many, but little known, rich men's private island retreats in the Bahamas, came here to check the timber possibilities. In addition to everything else the scraggly, featureless island didn't have, it didn't have good wood. But it now had Wallace Groves, who had an idea.

MADE A DEAL

Groves made a deal with the Bahamian Government whereby his Grand Bahama Port Authority Ltd. bought the 120,000 acres — the whole middle-half of the island — and took an option on much of the rest. The purpose was a complete and coordinated industrial-residential-resort development. In return, the Government gave Groves a free hand and tax exemptions to make any investor drool.

The agreement was revised in '59, and so began one of the 20th century's most spectacular booms. $300,000,000 worth so far. The harbor already had been dredged out to make it accessible to ocean-going vessels. A deep sea bunkering (fueling) operation was set up that became the most elaborate in the Western Hemisphere, with three miles of underwater pipeline. And to handle the long story short, you ought to see Grand Bahama today. It looks like a shack sub-tropical Klondike at the height of the goldrush.

Along the wide-paved mails of the new town of Freeport (the industrial area distinct from the resort-residential Lucaya), pastel concrete banks and supermarkets have sprung up. So have schools and drive-in movies and laundromats, plush apartment houses and motels, Polynesian restaurants and garages and clinics and a $30,000,000 cement plant.

As in any boom town, wide whipped dust swirls through the streets along with bulldozers and caterpillar tractors driven by men in hard hats. An international banner bedecking the gracious selection of world-wide duty-free merchandise in the islands will open this year.

ALONG THE BEACHES

Away from the hasty hurly, along the powdery beaches of the Lucaya section, already complete with roads and small boat channels, form familiar geometric patterns. The 12-storey Riviera TOWERS Apartments — tallest building in the Bahamas — is almost complete, and soon will have three similar neighbors.

Classy signs on manicured corner lawns hached out of the brush, mark paved roads leading to Sach-and-Sach estates. Elegant inhabited homes already stand in some of the cleared areas, surrounded by woods or prairies of crushed coral yet to be beautified. A few of the homes are known to have cost almost $1,000,000, including those of Groves and multi-multi-millionaire D. K. Ludwig. The Lucayan Country Club, presided over by pro Craig Wood, has what may be the most beautifully kept golf course west of Scotland.

But the big story is the hotel development. Amid piles of coral rubble, posh hotels are going up so fast that by the end of next year Grand Bahama will have more hotel rooms than Nassau, better than 3,000 of them.

In various stages of completion are the Oceans Inn, which claims it will have the finest underwater exploration facilities of any hotel in the world; and a mammoth 300-room Holiday Inn. Nearer Freeport, the newly opened economically priced but hardly less luxurious King's Inn will have the island's third golf course ready by fall. Already catering to the waterborne set is the Bell Channel Marina Villas.

CROWN JEWEL

Lucaya's crown jewel is the Lucayan Beach Hotel and Casino, which is hedonistshabible from anything in Las Vegas except for the rules, which are indistinguishable from anything in Miami Beach or Jamaica. Here, in the Bahamas' first major gambling operation, the price of the croupier and the wheel is better, not hard nightly, of a minimum of five dollars a cry at the dice tables.

Everything is growing so fast that not even the Grand Bahama Development Co., busy selling property in strategic locations from downtown Freeport to hotel arcades, can keep track of it. There is a fast-moving effervescence that has infected even the natives, daily inventing new names for themselves to replace the obsolete. The island's population has more than tripled in five years and Freeport alone says it has as many as 8,000 people.

Nothing is so short that Holiday Inn brought in trailers to house its workers. Since trailers are not permitted on the island, they took the wheels off them, built corridors and walls around them, and they now look like a Holiday Inn. In a pinch, they even rent them as hotel rooms.

On a concrete waterfront quay on the western end of the island near one of its two airports (there will soon be 3rd service to both), two less staccato lions stand. This is where Al Capone's auxiliness used to tie up in the Bahamas' salad days of rum-running.

If only De Boos could see the place now.

A Lift for Living

Zest for Permanence Needed In Rapidly Changing World

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

The realm of nature is a strange mixture of change and permanence. Look at the month of June, for instance. June will vary from year to year, some being hot and dry, and others being cool and damp. But there is a permanent quality to June, the sun always being a "June sun" in the time of its rising and setting, and never a "January sun."

June flowers come and go, roses, violets, lilies and lady slippers succeeding each other, and there will always be the wild flowers in June, too. We can depend upon that, as long as there is a bit of open land to nourish them.

Look at the heavens and note the Pole Star. Pole Stars change from age to age; it is now Polaris, and in another 14,000 years will be Vega. But the stars remain.

Nature is full of change, but draw back the veil of transformation, and behind it are the trustworthy, enduring permanencies.

The great men and seers of all time have been conscious of change, but they have been aware, too, of the strong stabilities upon which man can rely. Events of the moment could prove upsetting, but they saw them in relation to the long range certainties upon which they could depend. They were well aware that this world is a mysterious mixture of change and changelessness, but they searched for the dependable, permanent elements on which they could fix their trust.

Furthermore, they attempted to build into their character and reputations the kind of durability they found in nature. They had a zeal for permanence.

BUILT TO LAST

Still standing in the eastern part of the United States, are 17th and 18th century homes with foundations far deeper and thicker than necessary. Barns are there that were built in George Washington's day. Bordering the fields are rail fences built when Lincoln was a lad. Those barns and fences are mementos of an enthusiasm for durability that has become rare in our hurried world, where the highest compliment that can be paid a product of man's labor is that "It will last for a lifetime!"

Merely one lifetime? Not nearly enough!

Have we lost our early zeal for durability? It appears that way. We build too many houses that will merely "last as long as we live." We have too many "hit tunes" and too few lasting melodies. We have too many sensational, instant successes in fashions, styles, theatres, in books and art and automobile designs, in business, politics, in romance and marriage, and we have too many bankruptcies in these areas shortly following the "instant" successes.

Perhaps the prevailing uncertainty of our times has made for our short-time attitude toward living. Our annihilating hysteria may be partly to blame. If we are afraid that the world may blow us apart at any minute or by man's ingenius, diabolical instruments of destruction why think of the distant future?

There is an answer to this question, and it is this: our salvation rests in a zest for permanence. We need not be afraid of the decisions of statesmen who are patiently planning for a better world in the next century and for centuries thereafter.

Those who imperil the welfare of mankind are the impulsive, side-shift diplomats, and those who seek the immediate advantage rather than the long range good of all men. The dangerous leaders are those who think only of the next crisis or of the next election rather than of stable, durable, long-lasting solutions to world problems.

CHANGE NEEDED

From international diplomacy to individual handling of our private, every day affairs, a change is needed in our mental and spiritual climate, where we worship haste rather than admire dependable workmanship, where change in fashions so completely rules our lives that there is little time to test anything as to whether it is lovely or ugly, comfortable or unpleasant, strong or frail, good or bad.

Before anything is proven, it is discarded in favor of "the newest" and "the latest" thing.

A restoration of a zeal for permanence is overdue. But where can we begin to restore permanence in everyday life? Take a few simple things:

Build a stone planter or a garden wall that will outlast you.

Plant long-lived trees that will bind your generation to the next, and the next and the next. Have leafrich beeches will shelter birds and shade wayfarers you will never see.

Live with, help, and influence for good, little children who will greet many a dawn following your last sunset.

Support worthwhile causes that will ease loads burdening lives not yet conceived.

Above all else, through daily prayer and meditation cultivate fellowship with the Eternal God, so that His nature can leave its imprint of everlastingness upon you.

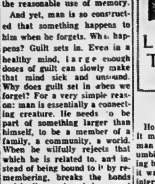
Man Needs High Moments to Affirm His Ideals

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

What does it mean to remember? Exactly what the word suggests: to re-member, to become a part, once again, of something which was part of us, as bone of bone, flesh of flesh, as a member of a body, a family, a community.

What does it mean to forget? To forget is to reject, to dis-member — to break the tie that unites us to a body, a family or community, the bond that makes us one with the other.

Nietzsche suggested a profoundly simple idea that sheds light on the question of remembering and forgetting. Said he: my memory tells me that I was present and part of a certain moment or that I engaged in a certain act. My pride, however, tells me that I was not there, or that I did not do it. Whenever my memory and my pride enter into conflict, it is my pride that wins.



The Scriptural story of the chief cup-bearer of the Egyptian Pharaoh is a good case in point. He did not want to remember that he was once in a dungeon with Joseph, the Hebrew servant; so he forgot. His pride and his vanity got in the way of his reason, and he literally forced himself not to remember.

Pride and vanity are only two of many possible emotional interferers with memory. Jealousy, hate, and competitiveness often lead us from wishing to be connected to, and related to, certain people, events, or ideas. Our emotions get in the way of the reasonable use of memory.

And yet, man is so constructed that something happens to him when he forgets. What happens? Guilt sets in. Even in a healthy mind, large enough doses of forgetting will make that mind sick and unsound. Why does guilt set in when we forget? For a very simple reason: man is essentially a connecting creature. He needs to be part of something larger than himself, to be a member of a family, a community, a world. When he wilfully rejects that which he is related to, or interested in being bound to by remembering, breaks the bond, and is dis-membered, he cannot help abide that false relationship. The cup-bearer knew that he owed his life to Joseph in spite of the fact that his pride and vanity forced him to forget. But he knew it, and his forgetting only served to make him more and more aware of what he was rejecting. Longer than we think, we remember what we wilfully forget!

And yet, human nature is so ordered that it cannot long live with guilt. What, then, do we do? How do we rid ourselves of the guilt caused by our forgetting what we should remember? Very simply: by indifference. Most people live in just such a way: in a permanent state of not remembering, nor forgetting; not accepting, nor rejecting. They remain in a continuous state of neutral non-involvement. Indeed, very few people strongly affirm their ideals, just as very few strongly reject ideals. Most people just drift. They do not tear the bonds that unite them, nor do they tie the cords that bind them. They simply look the other way. It is healthier this way, they say; it preserves their sanity

And yet, human integrity requires that we neither avoid nor evade that which is real in our lives. We need to cast aside the emotional devils of pride, vanity and jealousy which cause us to dis-member the memories we should keep. We need repeated opportunities to link ourselves to those beyond ourselves to whom we have connection. We need high moments to affirm our ideals, even though most of the time we are willing to drift. We need to be reminded to remember!

LIGHTING THE WAY

By Walter S. Crowe

THE GREATNESS OF LITTLE THINGS

How much is a comma worth? It might be worth $99,000 to a man in Vancouver, British Columbia. His employer died, leaving him some money. In the will it was written $100,00. First interpretation tagged the second comma as being meant for a period. But, because no other amounts given in the will included a "cents" column, legal opinion is that this man was actually willed $100 and change in making his claim accordingly.

Little things, like commas, can be very important. We can't have a dollar without the cents. It takes little threads to make the beautiful tapestry. It takes the little drops to make the earth-refreshing shower, and little minutes to make time, but as Benjamin Franklin said, "time is the stuff of which life is made."

It may only be a smile on passing, but it could warm another's heart. It might only be a postcard, or a letter, but it can mean a lot to somebody, somewhere. It might be a phone call, or a little courtesy shown to someone, or just a little thoughtfulness. But it gives to the right spirit, it will be blessed, and might prove to be great. God can glorify the little. Let us give what we have, and do what we can.

THEATRE TALK
(Conclusion)

"It is art that makes life . . . The anomalous fact is that the theatre can flourish in barbarism, but that any drama worth speaking of can develop but in the air of civilization." — Henry James (1843-1916.)

* * *

Mrs. Charles (Marion) Wilson, 256 Bridge Street, member of the Dominion Drama Festival Executive answers some questions for us today about the DDF which held its final 1965 festival in Brockville last week (from May 24th - May 29th.)

(CONCLUSION)

We ask: "What is the DDF and its purpose?"

"The purpose of the DDF," says Mrs. Wilson, "is to help the amateur theatre in Canada as well as the professional. It was founded in 1925 by Lord Bessborough, then Governor General of Canada."

"Would you say it has been successful?"

"Yes, very. It has been directly responsible for hundreds of theatre groups' appearances, and considered an important national movement and a valuable uniting force in our cultural life."

"Just how does it operate?"

"Canada is divided into 14 regions, for festival purposes. These in turn are grouped into eight zones.

"Each region is administered by a regional committee, of which the chairman and the regional representative are members of the national executive. This year I happen to be the regional representative of Eastern Ontario region of which Belleville is a part."

"Where are the festivals held?"

"A festival is held in each region annually. In rotation each year the regional festival moves from one city to another. The Eastern Ontario Regional Festival was held in Peterborough this year, March 24th-27th, with the Regional One Act Festival at Cornwall April 24th-28th.

"The best production in each zone is invited to participate in the final festival. This is held in a different city across Canada each year upon the invitation by the regional committee concerned. This year as you know the city is Brockville."

"Has the DDF a national office?"

"Yes, Ottawa is the National Office. The DDF's annual operating cost is about $74,000. Although each region maintains its own finances, the final festival finances the final competitions."

"How is the DDF financed?"

"The DDF receives support from corporate and private donations, regional contributions and entry fees. The Canada Council, and the provinces recognize its importance by large grants. The Canadian Association of Broadcasters contributes $21,00 annually."

In conclusion, Mrs. Wilson pointed out:

". . . the role of the DDF in Canada's future is just as vital as its past accomplishments. It's functions are three-fold:

"To stimulate theatre alive in those provinces and cities which do not have their professional companies. And to continue to foster theatre in those places that do not have professional companies.

"By encouraging, by rallying support around these companies to improve their standards, the DDF is striving to establish across Canada.

"Secondly, in those large centres with ample profession al companies, DDF brings young semi-professionals forward and helps them in recognition for their talent and ideas — by presenting their work at regional and final festivals. To encourage such young people, the Festival offers scholarships and prizes — the handsomest of any to be found in field of theatre of this country.

"Thirdly, Canadian plays have always received encouragement at DDF festivals through the granting of awards; but, with the coming of Canada's centenary in 1967, DDF has more than ever embraced the cause of the Canadian playwright.

"Our country will not have a truly national theatre till it has playwrights to furnish us with works of national interest, and playwrights capable of representing us, speaking for us in a manner which will make us proud.

"To this end, DDF, will hold an all Canadian play festival in 1967. The DDF has already researched, compiled and published a tremendous list of Canada's plays; and this will be of great value to Canadian theatre companies.

"Canadian playwrights, Canadian actors and actresses, directors and stage-workers . . . all these have been and will continue to be helped, encouraged and trained by the Dominion Drama Festival.

"In promoting the talent of these Canadians, in audiences all across the country, the DDF is working ceaselessly for the future of Canadian theatre."

Thus in conclusion, may the Dominion Drama Festival long prosper and meet continued success in its splendid endeavor to raise the standards of Canadian theatre and drama to still higher levels.

Deaf Wife Fears Masonry Betrays Marriage Vows

DEAR DORIS — My husband wants to join the Masonic Lodge. I am dead set against it. I feel by joining this lodge he is betraying his marriage vows, "to forsake all others and cleave only unto his wife."

I am told they must take an oath on the Bible not to tell their wives anything they do. Is this true? I do not believe in secrets being kept between married couples.

Also, I feel my husband will be gone evenings to parties and dances. I don't feel I can go with him as I am deaf and feel most comfortable with people I know well. — I AM FRIGHTENED.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR FRIGHTENED — Bless you, he's not marrying the Masons. And their goings-on aren't so secret that you can't learn much about their ideals and objectives from books — whose names I'll send you.

For one thing, Masonry puts womanhood on a pedestal and stresses fidelity to one's wife. It protects women and girls from harm. And follows other wonderful Christian principles.

The great majority of meetings are for men only; and when the wives have a chance to meet one another at the occasional get-together, that's your cue to be among those present!

Soon those Masonic wives will be "the people you know well" and enjoy. Fred Masonry can enrich your life as well as your husband's. If you approach the idea with some willingness to understand it.

DEAR DORIS — I don't know whether you are the one to ask, but I'd like to know if it is true that you can't make a loaf of bread entirely with whole wheat flour. — NEW BRIDE.

DEAR NEW BRIDE — You can indeed, even though some cooks don't consider the dough light enough, without some white flour.

My two dietitian sisters worked out a delicious recipe for 100 per cent Whole Wheat Bread. I've made it up repeatedly and had my loaves, fresh from the oven, gobbled up by admirers. We think the firm texture adds to its appetite appeal. I'll send the recipe to you — and to anyone else who sends in ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

PAINTINGS FOR RENT — Mrs. Ian Crookston, a member of the women's committee of the Toronto Art Gallery, studies a painting which is available to the public through the committee's rental service. Committee members, who started their service in January, say that people who never before showed much interest in painting, are becoming art patrons. Rental cost starts at about $2 a month.

Painting Rentals Said Stimulating Art Appreciation

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — Do you want to learn to live with art? Try renting a painting.

People in the Toronto area who have never had the gallery-going habit and have never considered buying a painting are becoming art patrons. And the women who run the two rental services operating in the area say the tastes of some of their clients are changing.

The women's committee of the Art Gallery of Toronto opened its rental service in January. The University Women's Club of Port Credit, Ont., a Toronto suburb, has spoon-sored one for three years. The cost starts at about $2 a month.

Both groups consider the rentals a service to the community, not a fund-raising project. The Port Credit group has had tangible recognition of its value in the form of a $133 grant from the town council for its contribution to the cultural life of the community.

Art appreciation has been stimulated. Since it started its rental service, the art gallery committee has brought about 70 new $10-a-year members to be gallery. Only members may rent from the service. About 12 paintings have been sold to renters.

ARTISTS INCLUDED

The Port Credit Art Loan Society has a collection of about 200, including local school boards and people from surrounding communities.

In both cases, art is chosen with an eye to making the collections representative of con-temporary Canadian work. Both collections contain a large percentage of abstract work, and in Toronto's case, a smattering of pop art, such as a large, glass-encased arrangement of white - painted kewpie dolls mounted in tiered rows.

Mrs. Meredith Fleming, chairman of the gallery service, says people are renting every type of work and are often surprising themselves by discovering their tastes are more avant-garde than they thought.

"People can try out different things on a rental and learn to live with them."

Mrs. W. E. Beckel, chairman of the Port Credit group, says representational paintings and paintings by well-known artists are the most rented every year. "But over the years some members become quite willing to consider an abstract they wouldn't have been caught dead with before.

"It isn't true of everyone. We have lost some members because we don't cater to members' tastes. We try to offer a cross - section by recognized, practising professional artists."

The Port Credit group has sold about 15 paintings, most of them ranging in price from $100 to $125.

RENT FOR PARTIES

For many members the rental is primarily an inexpensive way to have art in the house.

But not everyone rents art for art's sake. "People rent them for parties as conversation pieces," Mrs. Fleming says. "One woman rented a picture to cheer up a sick friend." Mrs. Beckel says rentals often go up around Christmas time, when people will rent several paintings for several parties.

The women's committee works from a room in the gallery where the rental collection is on full-time display. The display is manned most of the time by volunteers from the committee who are expected to keep themselves informed about the artists and their work.

The Port Credit group, now independent of the parent association, rents a room in the public library to display its paintings once a month. Its membership fee is $3.50 a year.

The Port Credit group charges a flat one per cent a month of the purchase price set by the artist. The gallery rentals are on a sliding scale which works out at one or two per cent—the higher the price the lower the percentage.

The paintings and sculptures come from both commercial galleries and individual artists. The artists get what profit there is on the rental and presumably profit from their exposure to the public, even if no work is sold. If a renter decides to buy, his rental can be applied against the purchase price.

Vanier Urges Bilingualism As Road to National Unity

EDMONTON (CP) — Governor-General Vanier Friday suggested English-speaking Canadians learn French to promote a unified Canada.

"Tomorrow may be too late to take the road to unity," he added.

The bilingual governor-general, who Thursday urged all Canadians to learn a second language, said at a state banquet: "I wonder if I might suggest that a happy choice of a second language might be French.

"For many years I have been telling my French - speaking compatriots of the boundless advantages for them in learning English.

"I have told them that the only hope for the unity of this country is to be found in the ability of our two minds to come together.

"We have achieved all that we have in Canada only because we have been able to work together as a nation. . . .

"It may part of Canada were to contemplate going its separate way, could the rest of us long remain united?"

The banquet capped the second day of a three-day stay here by Governor-General and Mme. Vanier, who are touring western Canada. They leave today for the mountain resort of Jasper, Alta.

Governor-General Vanier said in an unplanned speech at a ceremony that Canada has an "identity" which is recognized throughout the world.

Among parading members of the 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, was an officer of Quebec's Royal 22nd Regiment, serving with the PPCLI under an exchange initiated by the governor-general.

Governor - General Vanier, who was wounded in the First World War while commanding the Royal 22nd Regiment, said after the parade: "We are a great country yet there are people who say we have no identity. I say we have an identity now and it is recognized throughout the world.

"The proof . . . is that through two great wars we were able to mobilize over 1,000,000 men and this country was able to produce 110,000 men who were willing to lay down their lives in the cause of freedom. That's an identity."

Trade Surplus Will Be Smaller Says Minister

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (CP)—Canada probably will show a smaller trade surplus and a large balance - of - payments deficit this year compared with 1964, Trade Minister Sharp said Friday night.

He said that while there is no sign of a letup in Canada's domestic economic expansion, "the chances of sustaining this improvement in our external balance position grown progressively less."

The giant wheat sales, a key factor in last year's 19-per-cent increase in exports, will be down from 1964 levels. Measures taken by the British government to meet its own financial problems have dampened opportunities in that market.

Imports to Canada, on the other hand, should continue to grow with the steady rise in domestic personal incomes and capital expenditures.

In 1964, Canada had a $700,000,000 surplus in commodity trade. Its payment deficit was reduced to less than $500,000,000.

Mr. Sharp, speaking to the Canada-United States area conference of the Financial Executives Institute, said the emerging picture for 1965 will place special pressure on Canada's economic relations with the United States. Despite the overall improvement recorded in 1964, Canada's payments deficit with the U.S. reached a new high of $1,850,000,000.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

FRIDAY, June 4, 1965

The Commons remained deadlocked on one aspect of the government's proposed rule changes.

Conservatives offered another amendment to proposals that would limit debate.

Thomas M. Bell (PC—Saint John-Albert) proposed 60 per cent of MPs would have to agree before a minister could set debate limits.

Privy Council President Maurice Rhaith argued that all Commons votes are by simple majority under the constitution.

Deputy Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled the amendment was in order.

Industry Minister Drury announced the government is setting up a fund to underwrite research projects aimed at industrial improvements.

MONDAY, June 7

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. to continue the rules debate. The Senate stands adjourned until June 22.

DIES FROM INJURIES

PETERBOROUGH (CP)— Raymond Denison, 18, of Peterborough, died Friday in hospital of injuries suffered in a car-motorcycle crash Wednesday.

Vocational Skills of Students Shown at O. S. D. Open House

Ontario School for the Deaf pupils are well trained for earning a living in a hearing world. A visitor's day exhibition held Friday afternoon and evening at the school proved to parents and friends that deafness is no handicap to children equipped with an academic education and vocational skills.

The absence of frustration on the part of the youngsters is the most vivid impression a visitor gets at the school. The children are relaxed, carefree and happy. "Few of them realize they have a handicap," said one teacher. "After all, they have known nothing else but deafness all their lives."

A special feature this year was an audio-visual presentation. Its purpose was to show parents how hearing loss affects the sounds their children hear and distorts the clarity of speech.

TEACHING METHODS

Teachers in the junior, intermediate-senior and vocational departments demonstrated the methods they use to teach speech, reading, writing and trades to pupils from the ages of six to 20.

Normal children enter school with a vocabulary of about 2,000 words. Deaf children with no vocabulary are five years behind others, of the same age. The catching-up process at O.S.D. continues for 14 years, until at the age of 20, graduates are prepared to face employment on equal terms with their contemporaries.

Most O.S.D. graduates find jobs through the placement agencies of the National Hearing Society. Trades taught at the school include sewing, home economics, typing and beauty culture for girls; printing, carpentry, welding, auto mechanics and upholstering for boys.

NEW FIELD

A new field of work for girls opened up this year with the installation of an IBM keypunch machine in the commercial department. Keypunch operators are now employed by insurance offices and industry to code invoices and inventory cards.

Instructors of the driver education program at O.S.D. are completing their third year of teaching physically able students to pass the Provincial driving tests. About 13 boys and girls from the graduating class took the course this year, using cars donated by two local automobile agencies.

Gifted pupils are prepared at O.S.D. to enter Gauladet College in Washington, D.C., a college which offers higher education to the hard-of-hearing.

ONE DEAF-BLIND

One 20-year-old deaf-blind boy is enrolled at the school. A teacher sent from the School for the Blind instructs him in Braille one afternoon a week and O.S.D. gives him training in its bake shop. A showcase full of his bakery products was the pride of the exhibition.

Montreal Man Sent to Trial At Kingston

KINGSTON (CP) — Harry Moore, 53, of Montreal Friday was committed to trial for capital murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Paul Lawrence of Kingston.

Magistrate James B. Garvin, who conducted the preliminary hearing, committed Moore to trial after hearing testimony from 15 Crown witnesses.

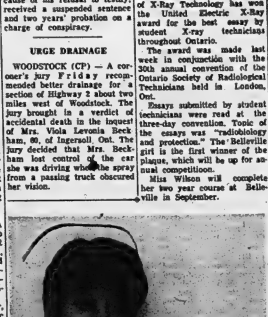
Mr. Lawrence, a manager of a local Brewers' Retail store, was shot during a holdup attempt at the store last Christmas Eve.

Kenneth Harbour, 21, of Fabreville, Que., who had also been charged in the shooting, was released in April when the Crown offered no evidence during a preliminary hearing.

Earlier in the day, Ronald C. Woods of Toronto, who held up the hearing for two days because of his refusal to testify, received a suspended sentence and two years' probation on a charge of conspiracy.

URGE DRAINAGE

WOODSTOCK (CP) — A coroner's jury Friday recommended better drainage for a section of Highway 2 about two miles west of Woodstock. The jury brought in a verdict of accidental death in the incident of Mrs. Viola Levonia Beckham, 66, of Ingersoll. Ont. The jury decided that Mrs. Beckham lost control of the car she was driving when the spray from a passing truck obscured her vision.



X-ray Award Won by Sharon Wilson

Miss Sharon Wilson of Timmins, a senior year student at the Belleville General Hospital of X-Ray Technology has won the United Electric X-Ray award for the best essay by student X-ray technicians throughout Ontario.

The award was made last week in conjunction with the 36th annual convention of the Ontario Society of Radiological Technicians held in London, Ont.

Essays submitted by student technicians were read at the three-day convention. Topics of the essays was "radiobiology and protection." The Belleville girl is the first winner of the plaque, which will be up for annual competition.

Miss Wilson will complete her two year course at Belleville in September.

Due to Mishap Conspiracy Trial Delayed

MILTON (CP)—The conspiracy trial of six men and a woman Friday was adjourned to Aug. 6 when the court was told one of the accused is in hospital following a car accident.

A defence lawyer, John B. Bowlby, said Stanley Major, 41, of Hamilton, fractured his shoulder about the end of April and underwent an operation May 15.

Mr. Bowlby said the man would be in hospital for 10 more days and then would be in a cast for some time. He requested the adjournment, apologizing to Judge Wilfred Lane for the inconvenience.

Major is the third accused to be involved in a car accident since the opening of the court proceedings in March, 1964.

Gordon Young, 42, of Hamilton, was in court Friday with a cast on left arm, the result of another accident. His right arm had been amputated following an earlier mishap.

BROKE LEG

Another accused, John (Jack) Major, 32, of Hamilton, broke his leg the day before the county court trial began and will be tried separately later.

Crown Attorney Peter McWilliams said he found it "incredible" that another accused should be injured in a car accident.

"I wonder if they should not have their bail cancelled and kept in jail for their own safety," he suggested.

The seven persons are accused of conspiring to defraud and conspiring to take unfair advantage of elderly persons in connection with home repairs and the sale of storm windows across between 1957 and 1964.

Besides Stanley Major and Young, Murray William Major, 28, Raymond James Smith, 31, John Carl Karen, 39, and Stanley Laing, also known as Stanley Lang, 32, all of Hamilton, and the Major brothers' sister, Geraldine Rogers, 38, of Burlington are also charged. All pleaded not guilty.

LACK UNDERSTANDING

CALGARY (CP) — The moderator of the United Church of Canada says Christians who believe literally in all of the "metaphors and imageria" of the Bible exhibit "lack of understanding." Rt. Rev. Ernest Howse of Toronto, in an interview Thursday, said that one of the most significant religious trends today is the movement away from "medieval imagery and hypocrisy."

Student Auto Mechanics At OSD Get Cheap Cars

A sharp late model sport car for approximately $200?

Impossible, you might say, if you think in terms of prices asked on used car lots.

But not impossible if you happen to be a student auto mechanic at the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville which yesterday held its annual "open house" to allow visitors to see students at work in the various academic and vocational departments of the school.

For instance parents of auto shop students are allowed to purchase damaged cars for rebuilding by their sons as a class project. It's good training for the boys and when the job is completed the student has a car of his own to drive. So far this semester three such cars have been rebuilt or are being rebuilt at the school.

In one case, the parents of Paul Durand, a Belleville boy, purchased a sports car considered damaged beyond repair. The engine was still OK and it was purchased for $175.

HOURS OF WORK

Then with hours of work and effort, plus a few parts which had to be purchased, Paul and his classmates completely restored the vehicle and now has a sharp sports car all his own.

Police have checked out the vehicle and pronounced it fit in every respect and now Paul is ready for the open road.

Another such student-owned wrecked car has also been completed while students are still working on a third.

Other wrecks are also brought in as "practice cars" for the boys.

But when the cars are student owned, the boys or parents pay for the paint and materials used on the vehicles.

Anglicans Want Special Schools

TORONTO (CP) — Special schools should be set up for sex instruction and religious education should be taken out of public schools, the final session of the three-day Toronto Anglican synod was told Thursday.

The synod passed a resolution calling for an interdenominational training institute for sex education. The institute would be open to doctors, nurses, teachers, clergy and social workers.

The synod passed a general resolution welcoming establishment of a government commission to review the religious education question.

Another resolution urged the church's general synod to "exercise due economy" in a planned $1,000,000 exhibit at Expo '67.

The money would be better spent on acts of mercy and social services, the meeting was told.

Stranded Cowboys, Horses At Blackpool Will Not Be Bailed Out by Government

LONDON (CP) — The sponsors of a Canadian cowboy-and-Indian rodeo project at Blackpool, which collapsed through a lack of funds, appealed to the Canadian government for financial aid but a Canada House official said no aid will be provided unless destitution is proved.

J. R. Brown, a director of Trans-Atlantic Exhibition Services Ltd., said in an interview Friday that he called Canada House after getting in a telephone call to the office of External Affairs Minister Paul Martin at Ottawa.

Brown, whose company had backed the $300,000 project, said he sought government help to finance the return to Canada of seven Canadian cowboys and 20 horses, stranded at Blackpool, the big northwest resort community.

The Canada House official said the Canadian government has nothing to do with the Blackpool venture and is not inclined to shell out a bad business deal. But if the rodeo entertainers cannot get money for a return tip to Canada, the government might provide a loan.

The seven cowboys, headed by George Hewitt of Windsor, Ont., had been hired to put on a big summer show at Blackpool. Arenas and other structures were to be erected. The riders arrived and found the buildings had not been completed and that the sponsors had run out of funds.

More Canadian cowboys and a group from the Six Nations Indian reserve at Brantford were to sail from Canada next week but Brown said he had warned them not to make the trip.

Hewitt said there is just a possibility that the performers could get backing from a Manchester sponsor if the present sponsors yield their contract. But legal skirmishes indicated a reluctance by the backers to give up a contract which already has cost them large sums.

Brown said he paid the cowboys last week but that they refused wage payments this week. Hewitt said the money was refused because the rodeo didn't want to be obligated to the present sponsors.

Six of the cowboys were sleeping in stables at the Royal Lancashire Show, where the rodeo was to have been staged. Hewitt, his wife and baby are in a rented house.

Hewitt said he is virtually broke and that rent on the house will be due next week. Some of the cowboys, he added, had a return ocean ticket and probably would leave Blackpool shortly. Others, including Hewitt, would dig in their heels and remain at Blackpool to try to save their 32 horses. These are under constant threat by the shipping company which claims $11,000 in shipping charges.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A group of unproven cowboys, who suddenly found themselves out of work this week in Blackpool, England, after their scheduled rodeo was cancelled, can return home anytime, the controller of the rodeo said Friday.

John Martland of Windsor, Ont., said in a transatlantic telephone statement from Blackpool, that there is no truth in the statement that the cowboys are stranded in England.

"They have in their possession return tickets to Canada and are at liberty to leave at any time they wish," he told Alex Dalling in Windsor, one of the sponsors of the event.

The rodeo was scheduled to open June 11 as part of a planned $200,000 project to stage a Canadian cowboy-and-Indian show in England.

"The reason for the breakdown in rodeo plans is merely a difference of personal opinion between Mr. Hewitt and myself," said Mr. Martland. George Hewitt is rodeo director from Windsor, Ont. Mr. Martland did not explain what the difference of opinion was.

ARE FROM ONTARIO

The cowboys, all from Ontario, are Chuck Alyette, Niagara Falls, Audrey Jeffrey, a trick rider from Brantford, Ed McAuthurn, Jeff Chase and Don Mathews, Windsor, Hugh Vivian, Oakland, and Ron Forsyth, Maple.

You could tell the guy was a golfer. He had a front line on egg quiz down the middle and his beam was broad from "ground to ground."

That's no way to define the average links fan. What convinced me was he wore a baseball type golf cap with a frontal insignia of the Oshkosh Country Club; and carried a bag of clubs in the snazzy convertible.

Four-legged people have a feeling in common and that's probably why the guy hailed me and inquired where he could find the shortest route to the Country Club.

Apparently he thought I was the compact economy size local Jack Nicklaus for he piled me with a gaggle of questions. I told him all I knew about the ancient and honorable game. It took exactly two minutes.

"I am one of that breed that is the prime target for nice old ladies, old men with a chronic gripe, the authority for matrons" and minors' quotes about the game, a demon dokely picker-upper and in charge of the lawn parade."

I hazarded a guess. "You, sir," I murmured, "are a golf professional."

His jowls wrinkled in a ripple of grins. "You, sir," he chuckled, "are a keen observer."

He wasn't so bad himself. He took a minute off to look at a giggle of tee-age gals parsing by. He puffed out a sigh. "I have three daughters at home and every time I see two more youngsters together I get a twinge of homesickness."

It was a new one. I was always under the impression that the sight of a bevy of beautiful bare-legged youthful beauties had the reverse effect.

Then he switched the conversation. "Like Gilbert and Sullivan's policeman, the lot of a golf pro is not a happy one at times," he said.

"It's funny what playing on a golf course does to some people. Not a few are litter-bugs who think a rough or sandtrap is target for the day for bottles, paper cups and whatnot."

"A crushed paper cup lying on a green or fairway is maddening. Not a few of my people patted themselves on the back for an excellent shot only to discover the 'ball' had been a coke or gigglewater container," he said.

"I ruined a tire on a mower once when it ran over an empty can."

"The strange part of it is," the man said, "that the most of these people who litter the course would raise a mighty howl if you dropped cigarette ashes on their living room broadloom."

"The same litterbugs who use the course in general as a game-course-garbage can raise hell if they find a speck of dirt or mud on their clubs. So what do they do? They rush to the nearest ball-washer and scrub their clubs."

Then there are the Divot Daveys who dig for oil and forget or refuse to lay the sod back.

"And don't forget the Course-Crank Charlies," the man said. "This bombre finds fault if he sees a blade of grass out of place. Every hole is laid out wrongly, except, of course, the nineteenth."

"You'll find the weather-blamers too," he went on. "These people find the sun is too warm, the wind too strong or raining from the wrong direction. They never stop to think their high scores can be attributed to their play."

"Down in my club in Rent Nail, Okla., we have some weird characters. Trying to teach them collectively will drive a pro literally into the arms of the guys in the white jackets."

"Take a long-legged gangly girl; a short compact hunk of club-swinging blubber and other assorted characters, and try to teach them generally. Brother it ain't funny. Me? I take them on one by one. I find it the easiest way."

He "kicked" the motor into action. Just before he pulled away he leaned out and said, "Did you know Cassius Clay is the only fighter who ever won with a no-hitter?"

Chisox, Twins Keep Pace Up Front

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Danny Cater ended his string of zeros at 18, Eddie Fisher is working on his 13th And Chicago White Sox couldn't be happier.

Cater, hitless in 18 previous appearances, came up with a homer in the 15th inning Friday night as the White Sox emerged with a 3-2 victory over New York Yankees.

It kept a large share of the credit belonged to Fisher, the 23-year-old knuckleballer, who turned in six innings of relief pitching, his longest stint of the year, to compile a record of 2 3-2 innings in which he has not yielded an earned run.

The victory gave him a 5-0 record and an eye - popping earned-run average of 1.50. And the White Sox have won 17 of the 25 games in which Fisher's name appears in the box score.

The Yankees' loss dropped the defending American League champions 11½ games behind the first-place Minnesota Twins —the farthest they've been behind all season. The Twins remained 1½ games up on the White Sox by belting Washington Senators 9-3.

Elsewhere, Cleveland Indians edged Detroit Tigers 7-6 and Los Angeles Angels defeated Baltimore Orioles 4-3.

Jim Hall stroked three hits for the Twins and turned in some daring base running while Gerry Fosnow ended the Senators' come - from - behind hopes with 2 2-3 innings of hitless relief.

Hall circled the bases for an inside-the-park homer in the fourth inning, then stroked a hit into a double in the seventh and scored from second base when Rich Rollins was safe on an error.

Bob Allison also homered for Minnesota while Woodie Held hit a three-run shot for Washington.

Joe Azcue drove in the tying and winning runs for the Indians with a pinch single in the eighth inning off Larry Sherry. Al Kaline hit his ninth homer for the Tigers and Pedro Gonzalez connected for Cleveland.

Baltimore catcher Johnny Orsino, whose throwing error helped the Angels to their second run in the third inning, opened the door for the Bruins in the fifth when he let the third strike in winning pitcher Marcelino Lopez get by him for a passed ball.

Jose Cardenal, Albie Pearson and Jim Fregosi then singled to bring in the decisive run.

Shutout Adds To Leaf Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Right - hander Pete Charton gave Toronto Maple Leafs a little breathing room atop the International League Friday night.

Charton unfurled a four - hit shutout as the Leafs downed the second-place Atlanta Crackers 8-0 to move 1½ games in front. The victory was Charton's sixth against three defeats and the shutout was his second of the season.

In other games, Columbus Jets scored three runs in the ninth to defeat Syracuse Chiefs 6-5, Toledo Mud Hens counted twice in the seventh and two more in the eighth for a 5-2 victory over Rochester Red Wings and Jacksonville Suns scored two runs in the first and made them stand up for a 3-2 win over Buffalo Bisons.

The Leafs used two big innings for their victory. They scored four in the third and converted two errors by Atlanta left-fielder Jim Beauchamp for three more in the fifth.

Syracuse used three pitchers in the ninth in a vain effort to stop the Columbus rally after going into the inning with a 5-3 lead.

A single by rookie catcher Joe Cherry was the big blow for Toledo. It drove in the tie-breaking run in the seventh.

Jacksonville scored its first-inning runs on three singles and two wild pitches by loser Dennis Musgraves.

Monster Devours Canadians

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Add Julius Boros to the list of people not afraid of the long Warwick Hills golf course. He shot a two-under-par 70 Friday to grab the second-round lead in the $100,000 Buick Open.

His 139 gave him a two-stroke lead over seven others including defending champion Tony Lema, Gary Player, Doug Sanders, Jack Nicklaus, and first-round leader Steve Spray.

The six - foot - five veteran had three Canadians in the field as George Knudson of Toronto and Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., both missed the 150 cutoff by one stroke and Al Johnson of Montreal blew to a 76-hole total of 164.

In the days of the silent movies, Hoot Gibson had to contend with situations where he was out of bullets and the Indians surrounded his burning wagon Somehow, he always got out alive.

Bob Gibson, who pitches for St. Louis Cardinals in the National League, still has plenty of bullets left. But he's having trouble putting out the fire.

The Cardinals' fireballer fired one at Ron Brand Friday night and the Houston catcher sent it ricocheting into the stands for a three-run homer and a 5-2 victory.

It ignited the third straight loss on the Cards' 1964 World Series hero after eight victories. Gibson's mark in 11 losses in 11 games and sent the world champions dipping to the .500 mark.

They remained in fifth place still 6½ games back, when the New York Mets won their fourth straight, holding off Pittsburgh Pirates 3-1 at Pittsburgh, and Cincinnati Reds edged San Francisco Giants 4-3, and Philadelphia Phillies blanked Chicago Cubs 4-0.

Gibson was breezing along with a one-hitter and a 1-0 lead when he walked Joe Morgan in the sixth. Walt Bond promptly homered for a 2-0 Houston lead.

The Cards tied it later and it went to the ninth. A walk and Rusty Staub's single preceded Brand's two-out homer, his first of the season and only the fifth hit off Gibson.

A three-run homer in the ninth broke up another 2-2 game at Milwaukee. Jim Mathews' 12th of the season did the job in that one, pulling the second - place Braves within four games of the Dodgers.

Catcher Johnny Edwards' three-run homer, his third homer in four games, was the decisive factor in the Reds' victory over San Francisco. Willie McCovey's two-run homer, counted for all the Giant runs in the loss. It was a victory came in typical Met fashion. The winning run crossed in the seventh when the Pirates' Bill Mazeroski fumbled the ball on an attempted double play which would have ended the inning.

Jim Bunning's five-hitter and a two-run homer by Wes Covington were enough to win against Chicago, but the Cubs chipped in with a couple of errors that made it even easier for the Phils.

George Meets Andrews

Clay Considers Chuvalo

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Cassius Clay, U.S. Canadian heavyweight boxing champion will fight Sonny Andrews, not Sonny Wright, in a 10-round non-title bout here Monday night.

Fight promoter Ron Brothers said Friday that Wright, who gets out of Philadelphia Pa., wrenched an arm while Barring with Sonny Liston. prior to Liston's scheduled fight with Cassius Clay last month.

Brothers said Andrews has been more active than Wright and has never been knocked out. He has gone the distance with Floyd Patterson before losing a decision.

Andrews, 26, who fights out of Boston, was a sparring partner for Cassius Clay.

Chuvalo of Toronto is scheduled to fight Dave Bailey, a former sparring partner of Clay's, in Glace Bay, N.S. June 19. Chuvalo is listed third in the list of rankings of the World Boxing Association.

TORONTO (CP) — Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay is considering an offer guaranteeing him $700,000 to fight Toronto's George Chuvalo for the title here Sunday, Sept. 6, in an afternoon bout at the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium.

The offer was made Friday by the Canadian Boxing Association, a group of Toronto promoters, in a telegram to Bill Faversham of Louisville, Ky.

Faversham managed Clay until suffering a heart attack several months ago, but still is a member of the syndicate backing the champion.

The Clay group replied Friday that it is interested in the offer and will meet Tuesday. An answer is expected by the end of next week.

ALLEN OPTIONED

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota Twins put second baseman Bernie Allen back on the active list Friday and immediately optioned him to Denver of the American Association to play himself into shape. Allen underwent knee surgery last October, but the knee did not heal as expected this spring. He had been on the inactive list since the season opened.

Tom Rolfe Belmont Favorite

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Sellers, out of the limelight since he rode to fame aboard Stretch - running Carry Back four years ago, tries today to regain some of his lost prestige aboard the same type of runner in the 97th Belmont Stakes at Aqueduct.

Sellers rides Mrs. Ben Cohen's Hail to All in the 1¼-mile final leg of the triple crown for three-year-olds. Hail to All is the third choice at 3 to 1 behind Preakness winner Tom Rolfe, 4 to 5, and the entry of Dapper Dan and Bold Bidder, 7 to 5.

Ron Turcotte of Grand Falls, N.B., was bidding for a repeat victory aboard Tom Rolfe.

The race today will gross $147,800 with eight starters. Of this $104,130 will go to the winner. The customary jockey fee is 10 per cent.

Post time is 6:15 p.m. EDT with television by the CBC scheduled for 5-5:30 p.m.

Originally the Belmont field was slated to total seven. But Clyd Troutt, trainer of one section of horses owned by Mrs. Ada L. Rice of Chicago entered Happy Gobbler, winner of only one of his 14 starts.

NHL Teams Dealing 'Beat The Draft'

Hawks Draw Four

NEW YORK (CP) — New York Rangers, seeking quality for quantity, completed a four-for-two deal with Chicago Black Hawks Friday. Only one of the players involved was a National Hockey League regular last season.

The Rangers obtained right-winger John McKenzie, a one-time linemate of Bobby Hull and Bill Hay on Chicago's No. 1 line, and centre Ray Cullen, who was named the American Hockey League's Rookie of the Year while playing for Buffalo Bisons.

In return, they gave up defenceman Tracy Pratt and forwards Dave Richardson, Dick Meissner and Mel Pearson — none of whom played more than seven games with the Rangers last season.

Cullen, 24, younger brother of Brian and Barry Cullen, who played in the NHL during the 1950s, scored 28 goals and 36 assists for Buffalo. In his professional debut two years ago with St. Louis Braves, he was the third-highest scorer in the Central League with 88 points.

HIS SECOND DEPARTURE

McKenzie, 27, was leaving Chicago for the second time in six years. The Hawks traded him to Detroit Red Wings in 1959 but re-acquired him two years later. He joined Hay and Hull midway through the 1963-64 season but lost the job in a reversal reshuffle of Chicago forwards last winter and was relevated to spot duty.

Richardson, 24, and Pearson, 27, both products of the Ranger farm system, have made infrequent appearances with the parent club. Meissner, 25, was picked up by the Rangers from Boston Bruins two years ago but spent most of last season with Baltimore Clippers of the American League.

Pratt, a 23-year-old son of former NHL star Babe Pratt has spent two seasons with St. Paul Rangers of the Central League.

TORONTO (CP)—Ron Stewart, a 13-year National Hockey League veteran, may have spent his last season in the uniform of Toronto Maple Leafs.

Toronto coach Punch Imlach said Friday that he is trying to trade the 32 - year - old right winger before the annual NHL player draft in Montreal next week.

"New York (Rangers) and Boston (Bruins) are both interested in Ron," Imlach said "But as yet they haven't offered me anything worthwhile and I might be better to wait and take the $30,000 draft price.

"There's a third team nibbling at the moment and I'm not going to give him away."

Stewart, a native of Calgary, has scored 186 goals during his entire playing career with the Leafs. Last season, as a member of the fourth-place Leafs he scored 16 goals and assisted on 11 others.

Stewrt has been one of Toronto's four penalty killers during the last few seasons along with Dave Keon, Bob Pulford and George Armstrong.

Crothers, Snell Win

Ron Clarke Snaps Two Records

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Distance runner Ron Clarke of Australia rewrote track record books last winter and now he's done it again — in the 5,000 metres and the three miles.

Clarke shattered his own world mark at 5,000 metres with a brilliant 13:25.8 Friday night in the transplanted Compton Invitational, and en route broke his own mark at three miles in 12:50.4.

To the delight of 12,150 fans in Memorial Coliseum—who had spent a boring, chilly evening until the 5,000—the 29-year-old, 163-pound six - footer made a shambles of his old marks. These were 13:33.6 at Auckland, N.Z., last Feb. 1, for 5,000 metres, and 13:07.6 for three miles set Dec. 3, 1964, at Melbourne.

Neville Scott of New Zealand was second in 13:30.0.

Dave Ellis came in third in 14:03.6.

Ellis hung in close behind Clarke and Scott for the first mile, but then dropped back to fifth. As Clarke ran off with the race, Ellis rallied for his third-place finish.

THREE IN FIRST

Bill Crothers of the East York Track Club of Toronto won the 880-yard run in an exciting race in which the first three finishers were timed at 1:48.7.

In the 440 - yard dash, Don McCarten, Crothers' teammate from East York, finished sixth. He was timed unofficially at 48.5.

Ulis Williams of Southern California won the event in 46.4.

In the 880, Crothers bolted into the lead with 220 yards to go, but Ted Nelson of Southern California and then Bob Hose of San Diego, Calif., charged up to challenge.

They virtually hit the finish line together.

Crothers was declared the winner, with Hose awarded second place and Nelson third.

The track show was built around New Zealand's Peter Snell, the world's greatest middle distance runner, but Clarke emerged as athlete of the night.

FURIOUS CHALLENGE

Snell won the mile in 3:56.4, shy of his world standard of 3:54.1, and ran into a furious challenge from veteran Jim Grelle and Jim Ryan, the 18-year-old schoolboy from Wichita, Kan.

Snell won by inches as both he and Grelle were clocked at 3:56.4. Ryan's challenging 3:56.8 was the best of his life.

Clarke and Snell will run in Toronto Thursday, Ron in the 3-mile race and Snell in the 880.

Harold Connolly hurled the hammer 225 feet, four inches, failing to better the world record he set a week ago at Modesto, Calif. His mark is 233 feet, two inches.

In the women's 100, Wyomia Tyus of Tennessee State equalled her own U.S. record of 10.3, which she shares with Ernestine Pollards of Chicago.

Domed Stadium Promised

Toronto In Contention For NFL Team

TORONTO (CP)—A 46-year-old Toronto businessman says he will build a $21,000,000 domed stadium to gain a National Football League franchise for Toronto.

Lawrence Shankman, a graduate pharmacist who has been in the construction business here for the last 15 years, applied for an NFL franchise last Nov. 13.

Toronto was one of 10 major cities NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle mentioned Thursday as possible expansion territory. Rozelle recommended the addition of two teams to make a 16-club league by 1967.

"That is the year we are seeking admission to the NFL," Shankman said Friday.

Shankman, due to become president of a construction firm here next week, said the group owns land for a domed stadium on the western outskirts of Toronto near the Macdonald - Cartier Freeway.

To meet the NFL's minimum requirements, the stadium would have to seat at least 50,000. Other requirements for entry include a guarantee of 25,000 ticket subscribers and a $1,000,000 working capital.

Shankman, who has been after an NFL franchise for five years, recently visited cost figures of the domed stadium in Houston, Tex.

"The original contract for the Houston stadium was $19,400,000. It was the title that put the cost up," Shankman said. "We can forget about the frills and get a practical stadium for $21,000,000."

Shankman will investigate the chances of obtaining federal aid for the stadium as a centennial project.

He has an NFL team and the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League could operate in Toronto.

"I'm not trying to run the Argos out of town," he said, "but I do think the NFL is the best league in North America and Toronto should be represented in the best company."

NEW YORK (CP)—Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the National Football League says Toronto and Montreal are among cities being considered for NFL franchises.

Rozelle's statement came as the NFL and the American Football League prepared to do battle in a fight over expansion.

Among the other cities Rozelle mentioned were Boston, Miami, Atlanta, New Orleans, Cincinnati, Houston, Memphis, Phoenix, Seattle and Portland.

Philadelphia, Houston and Atlanta were the chief pawns as the 46-year-old NFL and the upstart AFL squared off for their fight.

The AFL, bolstered by a five-year, $36,000,000 television contract, prepared to add two clubs — possibly Philadelphia and Atlanta—to its eight - team set-up at its business meeting next week.

The additions would become effective in 1968.

This move would get a year's jump on the NFL which has set machinery in motion for an additional two members, bringing the number to 16, in 1967. A special committee is surveying a dozen possible centres.

Houston, with its celebrated dome and Atlanta, with a new $18,000,000 stadium, are said to be the NFL's prime objectives, but Boston looms big in the league's plans.

Plans for expansion of the two leagues broke Thursday night after what was supposed to be a routine meeting of the NFL directors.

Currently, the NFL setup is this — Eastern Conference: Cleveland, Dallas, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Washington; Western Conference: Baltimore, Chicago, Detroit, Green Bay, Los Angeles, Minnesota and San Francisco.

The AFL now is made up of teams in New York, Boston, Buffalo, Kansas City, Denver, Houston, Oakland and San Diego.

Big Race Today

Four Snap Qualifying Records

By JOHN TRACY

BOWMANVILLE, Ont. (CP)—A hard-driving Texan and three heavy - footed British subjects came to the front of the starting grid for today's International 300-mile sports car race after a day of record - shattering qualifying performances.

All four — Jim Hall of Midland, Tex., New Zealander Bruce McLaren, world champion John Surtees of Britain and Scotsman Jim Clark, victor at Indianapolis this week—set qualifying times in Friday's trials of better than 100 miles an hour.

The tall Texan flashed around the circuit in one minute, 57.2 seconds, or about 101 miles an hour. His Chev - powered Chaparral broke the record of 1:30.5 set in the Canadian Grand Prix last September by McLaren.

Hall has the only car in the field of 33 with automatic transmission. He uses his disc brakes to control the machine on fine-tight turns instead of the traditional method of braking and changing down.

CLIPS RECORD

McLaren, who won the International race last year a year ago, also clipped two seconds off his lap record driving an Olds-powered car of his own design.

Surtees is driving a Chev-powered Lola.

Clark, the Scottish sheep farmer who became the first non-American in 49 years to win the 500-mile Memorial Day race last Monday, turned in 1:38.7 in his Lotus 30.

The field is aiming at $19,700 in prize money.

Top Canadian is Ludwig Heimrath, who took up motor racing after motorcycle racing in his native Germany. Heimrath, who was Canadian champion driver in 1961 and 1964, is racing a Ford-powered car designed by McLaren.

The light British cars powered with British engines have given way this year to American engines in British-designed chassis and for the first time the race is dominated by big power.

Minor Baseball Results

Lions Club scored a 10-7 victory over the Jaycees in a tyke minor baseball game at Pine Street School last night.

A new rotting has been put into effect in the B.M.B.A.'s tyke division, calling for no pitcher to pitch more than five innings. The ruling is to get more pitchers into action.

Ron McTaggart and Blake Reeves hurled five-hit ball for the winners with starter McTaggart getting 11 of the 14 strikouts. They passed four. Don McTaggart did the catching.

Danny Coulson and Wayne Andrews split the Jaycee hurling, giving up six hits. Coulson got 10 of the 16 strikeouts as they walked five. D. Dales was their receiver.

Bill Jones clouted a home run and G. Madden hit a pair of singles to spearhead the Lions Club attack. R. McTaggart, B. Reeves and Thompson also hit safely.

Wayne Andrews rapped a homer and double to mark the Jaycees. Greg Duffy got a triple, Atkinson and Webster a single each.

NEED CASH FOR ROADS

The United Nations is seeking $2,000,000,000 to build a 34,000-mile international highway system in Asia.

Peterborough Gets Second Lacrosse Win

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Peterborough won its second senior Ontario Lacrosse Association game here Friday night with a 16-9 victory over Brampton.

Larry Ferguson led Peterborough with five goals. Cy Coombs and Dave Drummond had three each while Jod Todd had two. Jack Armour, Terry Dewser and Richard Anthony added one apiece.

Bruce Walker scored three times for Brampton. Jack Madgett and Don Arthurs got two each while Bob Haw and Ken Richardson added one apiece.

Brampton served 19 of 26 penalties, including a game misconduct to Bill Castaior for refusing to serve a high stick-ing minor in the third period.

Bowmen Hold Tournament Tomorrow

Members of the Belleville Bowmen Archery Club, with a keen eye on the weatherman are looking for close to 100 top archers for their big open tournament tomorrow.

Club president Floyd Armstrong, himself one of this area's top competitors, said yesterday, "We expect somewhere between 70 and 100 archers in all, if it turns out to be a nice day, and we welcome the general public to drop out anytime Sunday afternoon."

The tournament is being held at the Bowmen's range, with archers expected from Watertown, Kingston, Toronto, Ottawa, Belleville, Hamilton, Cornwall, Picton and Trenton.

This will be the Bowmen's first big shoot on home grounds this season but plans are underway for another event in the not-too-distant future.

The Archery Club and the Belleville Handgun League met in competition last year, gun scores against bow and arrow scores, and the meet went over in a big way.

This competition will be held again shortly and Armstrong says he expects it will become an annual event.

Right now, however, the interest is in tomorrow's tournament and some local shooters are hoping to repeat their fine showing in a recent Kingston meet.

Stirling Has Two Games Postponed

High school exams continue to raise havoc with district ball schedules, adding two more games to the list of postponements yesterday.

Slating of the Belleville and District Softball League, has asked for and been granted postponement of their game in Belleville this Tuesday against Ellis Juniors, and on the following Tuesday, June 15, at home against Madoc.

Earlier, Madoc had games against Trenton this past Wednesday and against Trudeau Motors next Thursday postponed.

Examinations are also affecting young teams in the Commercial Softball loop, where Point Anne has postponed games against BCAF on Tuesday and City Hotel on Wednesday, of this coming week.

Tonight, BCAF and Black Diamond Cheese are playing a postponed game at King George School, at 6:30. It was rained out last Tuesday.

The Belleville teams in the Inter and Town loop may seek schedule changes or exhibitions to fill their home nights at the grounds on Tuesday and Thursday, June 6 and 10.

Julie Harris to Appear In Another Western on TV

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Devotees of the theatre hiked their eyebrows a few notches earlier this year when Julie Harris turned up playing in a television western.

They're in for another shock: Julie is at it again.

Last time it was Rawhide. Now the distinguished stage star is in Laredo, a new NBC series starring Neville Brand, Peter Brown, Phil Carey and William Smith as onetime outlaws who turn Texas Rangers in the 1870s.

"This is an interesting role for me, far different from the one I did on Rawhide," explained Miss Harris. "So I don't think I'm going to get typed."

She has starred on television with such memorable performances as Queen Victoria and Florence Nightingale and in Ethan Frome and Little Moon of Alban. All were live or on tape, and she has released filmed television. Until now.

The secret seems to be that she is only for weekends.

"Oh, I used to love to see western movies," she recalled. "Henry Fonda was great. I was in My Darling Clementine. And Or Bow Incident. Gary Cooper Pinky. Hugo Coach. "And Errol Flynn!"

The thought of Errol Flynn set her into paroxysms.

No chance of Julie hanging around to play in other television horse operas. She is returning to the stage to prepare for her next play, a musicalized Dream Girl to be produced by the surefire team of Fenwick and Martin (Guys and Dolls, How to Succeed in Business etc.).

"I've been studying singing for the last five years," Miss Harris explained. "I've done songs in plays before, but this is the first time I've tackled a musical. I hope I'm up to it."

Maybe she can return and play a dance-hall girl some day.

Gaels, Mimico Maintain Pace In Jr. Lacrosse

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Long Branch dropped a junior Ontario Lacrosse Association decision to St. Catharines Friday night, but it wasn't Bob Sicinski's fault.

Sicinski scored five goals, four of them in one minute and 45 seconds of the third period, as his team lost 13-12. Four St. Catharines goals in the final eight minutes offset Sicinski's heroics.

Oshawa Green Gaels ran their unbeaten streak to six games but fallen to widen their lead over second - place Mimico Mounties. The Gaels, defending Minto Cup champions, downed Brampton 7-5 while the Mounties gained sole possession of second spot with an 11-7 victory over Toronto Township.

In this colorful musical Elvis plays a roustabout (handyman) at a carnival owned by Barbara Stanwyck, "Roustabout" is Technicolor and Technicopse, was directed by John Rich. 2nd feature attraction also in Technicolor, "Conquest of Space" an astounding electrifying movie experience with an all-star cast.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP)—A crowd of 7,333 watched Nearcostar and Meteric combine in the first and second races at Greenwood Raceway here Friday to pay a daily double pot of $52.80.

In the quinella, Bobby Brier and Roy Jo ran first and second respectively, for a payoff of $54.10.

A seventh-race battle between Chocolatte and Senator Jr. resulted in the track's first dead heat. Chocolatte lost a five-length lead to Senator in the far turn. With 1-16 of a mile of the one-mile event to go, Beaubrain passed both.

Bob jockey Benny Sorenson kept Chocolatte running and the horse finally caught her at the wire. It was the first race since early spring for the thoroughbred, owned by Montreal's J. L. Levesque. She has not raced since coming from Florida after suffering a badly cut leg during an air flight to Toronto.

ARGOS SIGN FOUR

Also signed were import tackle John Hlaftosky, and hometown linesman Walt Radzick and John Vilmas.

The Tracks

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—The track record was shattered for the second night in a row Friday at Garden City Raceway.

Betsy Herbert, owned by the Bill Herbert Stable of London, Ont., won the one-mile Tie Silk Invitation Trot in 2:04 2-5 to lower by one second the track mark set Thursday night by Leland Hanover.

The victory, Betsy Herbert's third in a row, was worth $2,000 and ran her lifetime earnings to $48,798. She was driven by Jack Herbert.

The daily double returned $38.10 when M. R. Marshall's Cash Hanover of Kemptville, Ont., won the first race and Meadowview C h a m p, owned and driven by Jack Reid of Orono, Ont., won the second.

Minor Mac, owned by Neil McIntyre of Oshawa, won the sixth race and combined with second-place Henrietta Sue for a $7.80 quinella.

Ann Landers

It Is Divorcee's Privilege To Use Ex-husband's Name

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I married a divorced man two years ago and we are getting along just fine. . . . Yesterday I heard that his ex-wife is pregnant. The man she was going with has left town and she doesn't know where he is. There is no chance that the child she is carrying belongs to my husband. He hasn't even seen her in over seven months.

We have been told that when this woman goes to the hospital she is going to use my husband's name. I don't think this would be fair to me or to my husband. Your advice is needed — DON'T WANT TO BE IDENTIFIED WITH HER.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR DON'T WANT — If your husband's name is John Doe and his former wife has not remarried her name is still Mrs. John Doe. Most divorcees drop the John and use their own first name, however. In any event, it sounds to me as if this woman has enough trouble. Don't give her more.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — You may print this letter because the woman involved does not read your column — anything else. She is too busy sticking her nose in other people's business.

The woman is my husband's sister. She never married and she never accepted my husband to marry either. When he did she was very disappointed.

Almost every week a package arrives. It is either a half dozen pairs of sox, a box of handkerchiefs, a couple of packages of shoelaces or a belt. Usually there is a note enclosed saying "Conrad needs these."

These are not gifts, Ann. She charges the items to our account. What should be done. — ANNOYED.

* * *

DEAR ANNOYED — Phone your husband's sister the next time a package arrives. Tell her you appreciate her thoughtfulness but let her know you would like to need the articles. Ask her not to send any more merchandise to your home.

If she continues, go to the stores and request that no one be permitted to charge to your account except you. Then tell your sister-in-law you have done it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — You seem to deal with everything and everybody. Will you say something in your column about gum smoks, mint smoaks, and cigarette smoaks?

I know a few people who are sleight-of-hand artists when it comes to getting a cigarette or a stick of gum or a piece of candy into their mouths without anyone seeing them reach into a pocket. You are talking to them one second and the next thing you know they are smoking or chewing or eating something.

Isn't it rude not to offer the persons you are with whatever it is you want to enjoy yourself? It so happens I don't smoke, but I still resent it when a smoker lights up a cigarette and doesn't give me the chance to say, "No thank you." I do enjoy gum and a mint now and then and I'm a girl who was brought up to share such treats with others.

Is there a subtle way to let people know how I feel about this? — ALSO HUMAN?

* * *

DEAR ALSO — This is a problem? Well, kiddo, why don't you just keep your purse stocked and forget about man's inhumanity to man.

* * *

Unsure of yourself on dates? What's right? What's wrong? Should you? Shouldn't you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet "Dating Do's and Dont's," enclosing with your request 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

AT YOUR GENERAL INSURANCE

Does your Agent represent several insurance companies so a proper insurance market is prepared for you?

Does your Insurance Agent or Company sell and advertise insurances on a price basis only? What difference does a few dollars in premium make should your home burn down or should you experience a major automobile accident? Consider quality insurance, not cheaply priced insurance.

Does your Insurance Agent or Company charge a joining fee? What precisely do you receive after paying this additional fee? Usually nothing.

Would your insurance Agent consider your wishes should you ask for a specific Insurance Adjuster? Or do you get a Company Staff Adjuster who is not independent? It makes a difference.

Is your Agent Independent? Does he work for you or is he employed by one Insurance Company? A Company staff Agent is not independent as he must follow the wishes of his employer. He is not free to act in your interests.

Learn to Manoeuvre Money So You Feel Rich After 65

By THOMAS COLLINS ....

As you live, so shall you retire.

Especially where your money is concerned.

An engineer with the soul of a bookkeeper, Gilbert H. Hicks, has come up with a dramatic example of this, and with a budget showing he has more spending money on a $6,800 retirement income than he formerly had on $15,300.

It is Mr. Hicks' thesis that a person's manner of living does not necessarily change in retirement because of decreased income." If a person who lives an improvident life," he says, "has put his excess funds into maintaining a front rather than into savings, and has lived on expense accounts, then he may have to hang his head and sneak away to the boondocks.

"But for the great number of middle-class provident persons the difference in spendable money before and after retirement is less than is generally thought."

Mr. Hicks explains he has kept accurate accounts of family expenditures since 1939. "During the period 1939-1961 we educated three children, paid for our house, and laid up savings equal to 20 percent of our income.

NOT CRASH SCHEDULE

"This was not a crash schedule. We lived comfortably, had a drink before dinner, and still wore clothes . . ."

Here is the Hicks budget for 1960, as compared with the retirement budget of 1964:

1960		1964
$3550	Shelter	$3950
$3850	Food	$1050
$650	Operating	$450
$700	Clothing	$400
$300	Personal	$350
	Allowance
$3100	Advancement	$2000
$350	Automobile	$550
$6050	Savings	None
$3300	Taxes	$350
$350	Miscellaneous	$200

(The 1964 budget adds up to $6950 instead of $6800 because the items are given in round figures.)

The two keys to the Hicks budget, of course, are the taxes, which benefit all people retiring, and the savings, which the Hicks went in for much stronger than most people do, and stopped entirely on retirement.

The person who defers part of his salary for several years before retirement gets the same effect Mr. Hicks did — he trains himself to be satisfied on less. So does the person who goes in for heavy installment purchases before retirement, and adjusts to a lower standard of living while paying out.

MORE REAL VALUE

In general, people now retiring from good companies walk out with incomes that have face value of about 30 or 40 percent of the face value of the salary. But there is more real value in the retirement income than in the salary. Except for some small taxes, the retirement income is all there. But the salary goes through a slicing machine, with income taxes, hospital and life insurance, and often union dues or association dues each taking a piece.

Few people who grow blue over the cut in income at retirement take the trouble to analyze another significant equalizer of the retirement cheque . . . which is the elimination of expenses of holding a job. Transportation, clothes, lunches, donations and stops at the pub or the drug store on the way home take an important cut out of the face value of a salary. Anybody about to retire can take out a pencil and figure what this cut is, and feel better for three weeks.

Will Integrate Armed Forces Deadly Into Six Units

By DAVE McINTOSH.

OTTAWA (CP) — Integration of the armed forces into six commands was announced today by Defence Minister Hellyer.

The army's four field commands in Canada — Eastern, Quebec, Central and Western — will be integrated into a single "mobile" command which will also include RCAF tactical and light transport planes and heavy helicopters.

The navy's two commands on the east and west coasts and the RCAF's Maritime command will be integrated into a single Maritime command with headquarters at Halifax and a deputy commander at Esquimalt, B.C.

A new tri - service training command will be established with headquarters at Winnipeg.

The RCAF's air material command at nearby Rockcliffe will become a single materiel command for all three services, sniping out the navy's and army's supply branches.

The RCAF air transport command and RCAF air defence command will remain unchanged, though the latter, heavily overstaffed with 1,700 personnel, may be integrated later with the North American Air Defence Command at North Bay, Ont.

SAVINGS FORESEEN

Sources said the integration will result in big savings in money, manpower and time, especially in the training and materiel commands. There now are 11 major commands in the armed forces.

At least 66 per cent of service trades are common to one or more of the three armed forces. At least 20 per cent of materiel is common to all three services.

Savings are expected to run from eight to 20 per cent in money and manpower, depending on the command affected.

The armed forces' command structure at headquarters here was integrated last summer. The integration of the commands in the field now is the logical outcome.

It is estimated that it will take about a year to put the new command and control system into effect and another two before the new organization is running smoothly.

Chiefs of the new command are expected to be named shortly. The biggest job, mobile command, which will include the 1st and 2nd Brigades, the 2,500 - man special force and RCAF ground support squadron,

Inflation Looming - Says CMA

TORONTO (CP)—The threat of inflation is looming on the business horizon, says a report of the state of Canada's economy by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

Presented at the annual CMA meeting, the report says the danger has arisen as skilled labor has started to come into short supply in some employment categories.

"Wherever expansion of markets has been a prime concern in past years keeping cost consistent with retaining our expanded markets now is resuming increased importance."

The report, prepared by J. C. Whitelaw, executive vice - president and general manager of the CMA, says that despite economic successes achieved last year it is time to reassess the business climate.

"In the very short run, our concern must be to ensure that the slackening in growth gets no chance to turn into a recession."

MUST ABSORB WORKERS

"In the longer run, we have to address ourselves to the task of meeting the growth goals set by the Economic Council of Canada and of successfully absorbing the constant large increases in our labor force."

It notes the economic coun-

Marine Gunfire Deadly

SAIGON (CP)—U.S. marines have scored their biggest success of the Viet Nam war, killing 80 Viet Cong and wounding 60 others with artillery fire, but eight U.S. marines were lost Sunday in a helicopter collision over the South China Sea.

A U.S. military spokesman reported that marine gunners on Saturday poured 63 rounds into a Viet Cong battalion spotted nine miles southwest of the new Chu Lai airstrip.

The marines were called in to clear the area at the request of a South Vietnamese district chief. The Viet Cong wounded were taken prisoner by a government force.

Two marine helicopters collided shortly after taking off from the amphibious assault ship Iwo Jima on a routine mission to Chu Lai. Each carried a crew of four.

The deaths brought to 575 the number of American servicemen killed in action in Viet Nam since December, 1961.

U.S. guards shot and killed one South Vietnamese and wounded another early today near an American mess hall in Saigon.

An American military spokesman said four South Vietnamese men were seen in an alley approaching the billet where 50 senior non-commissioned officers are quartered. One of the two guards shouted in Vietnamese for the four to halt. The men ran and the guards fired shots into the air.

The sentries pursued the four and again shouted to them to halt.

Five more shots into the air were ignored, the spokesman said, and guards opened fire on the four.

One reliable source said movie ticket stubs were found in the pockets of the dead.

An explosion in a Saigon park Sunday night killed three South Vietnamese and wounded two others. Vietnamese authorities first blamed Communist terrorists, but a reliable informant said two militiamen tried to steal a motorbike and one of them dropped a grenade in the resulting scuffle.

In the central highlands Viet Cong forces overran and occupied two villages near Pleiku.

ONTARIO LIBERAL-LEADER Andrew Thompson waits turn to make keynote address as Pauline Jewett, MP Northumberland, speaks to Liberal Women's convention near Brighton. Convention lunch was testimonial event for Miss Jewett.

Ontario Liberal Leader Deals With Health Problems At Northumberland Meet

BRIGHTON (Staff)—Ontario residents should be shocked by the inadequacies of health facilities in their province, Ontario Liberal leader Andrew Thompson said Saturday.

At the same time he hinted at more lucrative words in the Legislature over the government's health insurance scheme.

So far, he told the annual meeting of South Central Ontario Liberal Women's Association, the government has not answered any Opposition criticism of the health bill.

However, he added: "This bill goes to third reading — and we hope it gets better answers then."

For further convention coverage see page 11

The Liberal leader's keynote speech was made at a noon luncheon which launched the meeting at the Glenhaven Motel and drew close to 200 delegates from Kingston to Oshawa.

The occasion also was used as a testimonial to Pauline Jewett, federal MP for Northumberland.

For Mr. Thompson it was his first official visit as Ontario Opposition Leader to the Quinte district and he seized the occasion for mounting another attack on the Robarts' government medicare scheme, and its cost to subscribers.

"You and I know — let's forget about the statistics — unless you're completely indifferent to the people around you, you know there is a worry about the cost of health care."

"There is an inadequacy in this province in facilities for health and we should be shocked about it in this wealthy community of Ontario."

The government's plan, administered through private insurance companies, will cost a single individual an estimated $178 annually, for doctors' services alone. In contrast, "one of the western provinces" charges $26 - $56 for family subscribers — for a scheme providing doctor and other medical services.

The Hall Commission—which returned a report calling for a universal medicare plan—had made it clear the predominate should be taken out of a public health scheme, said Mr. Thompson.

He said Opposition parties wondered how Mr. Robarts could justify the individual cost.

"We had the debate last week and got no answer," he said.

He charged Health Minister Dymond with also failing to properly answer Opposition criticism.

"He said 'I'm against compulsion, I hate compulsion and defeat it' and this is why we are going to let the profit making organizations and insurance companies keep on."

"Mr. Justice Hall (in his commissioned report) had in no way suggested that there be compulsion of any kind.

"And are Liberals any particularly sensitive that doctors and parents should be able to choose between each other, that doctors can work outside a (health) plan or in a plan but what we want is a universal approach documented and pointed out by Hall that will provide a new order in health.".

"We say health is as important as education."

'Money-making Machine' Is Used To Swindle $25,000 From Virginians

NEW YORK (AP)—Two men have complained to police that they lost $25,000 in a swindle involving a "money - making machine."

An alarm has been broadcast for four men—a slick talker called Joe, a resourceful Collins and two "federal agents."

And from a basement apartment in Brooklyn's Bedford-Stuyvesant section, detectives recovered the machine—which turned out to be a diathermy device for medical treatment of sprains. It burns impressively when operating.

The men were identified by police as Raymond Mazzei, 50, and Vernard Blick, 59, of Hopewell, Va. Mazzei runs a sheet metal business there and Blick works for him.

Police told this tale:

About three months ago, Mazzei and Blick were told of a machine which could duplicate U.S. bills of any denomination. Blick went to Washington for a demonstration. There, in a hotel room, Joe and Collins slipped some blank paper into the machine, along with a $10 bill. Out came the bill and an exact copy.

Blick reported to Mazzei and another demonstration was arranged in a Brooklyn hotel for two Virginians.

This time Joe and Collins fed a $100 bill into the device.

The two Virginians, on the machine, it seems, was that a legitimate bill couldn't be used since they had the chemicals with the copying process.

The agents declared they had been approached all over the country for Joe and Collins, biggest counterfeiters in the business. The agents slapped handcuffs on, the pair and told the Virginians not to get mixed up with them.

As the agents marched the captives to a waiting taxi, Mazzei realized that his $25,000 was missing. Blick ran out to stop the cab, to get its license number, but he was too late.

Mazzei and Collins remarked that they must have blown a fuse.

The Virginians, assuming that it really didn't matter, he said they could use the kitchen since since they had the chemicals.

The chemicals and paper were placed in the oven and the group sat back for another round or two. As wisps of smoke began to curl from the oven there was a knock on the door and the two "federal agents" flashing badges, walked in.

The agents declared they had been looking all over the country for Joe and Collins, biggest counterfeiters in the business. The agents slapped handcuffs on, the pair and told the Virginians not to get mixed up with them.

As the agents marched the captives to a waiting taxi, Mazzei realized that his $25,000 was missing. Blick ran out to stop the cab, to get its license number, but he was too late.

Despite Lost Computer, Splashdown Only Forty Miles Off Target Area

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. astronauts James McDivitt and Edward White and their Gemini IV spacecraft splashed safely into the Atlantic Ocean after their record four-day space flight today and were swiftly picked up by a helicopter.

The landing was about 40 miles short of the planned landing point — and about 48 miles from the main recovery ship, the aircraft carrier Wasp.

A helicopter dispatched from the Wasp picked up McDivitt and White about 1:47 p.m. and carried them toward the Wasp.

Before the astronauts left the capsule, frogmen secured it with a flotation collar. The swimmers had dropped from the helicopters with a raft.

The astronauts plunged safely back from their space flight at 1:12 p.m. EDT today, right on time and just a shade off target despite loss of a computer used for precision landing.

Both astronauts quickly reported they were feeling great.

The marathon journey, which space medical officials already termed "100-percent successful" covered 62 circuits of the globe, a total of 1,660,684 miles, and lasted 97 hours and 57 minutes.

A computer, which will navigate during the 40th orbit, would have been used to execute automatically a pre-entry maneuver. Its loss meant that ground controllers rather than the pilot would have to perform the complicated somersault necessary to slow McDivitt could have done.

The craft plunged into the sea only five miles from a helicopter that had been dispatched from the deck of the main recovery ship, the Wasp.

The Wasp was about 66 miles from Gemini IV, steaming toward it for a pickup.

The astronauts reported everything was fine inside the capsule and asked for a helicopter pickup rather than wait for the big carrier to steam alongside.

McDivitt and White were plainly alert and characteristically jovial as the long ordeal they embarked last Thursday," said Dr. Duayne Otterson, flight medical officer.

The prime recovery ship, the Proposal Rejected By Govt.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons vote at 11th hour rules changes goes into the 11th day today with the government ready to set out another two weeks if necessary to get a new set of rules approved.

The latest in a series of battlegrounds is a Progressive Conservative motion which would curtail the power of the Commons before debate time limits could be set on the various stages of legislation.

The Liberals already have bowed to demands from the opposition parties and written in guarantees of at least 12 days debate before talk could be cut off through the modified guillotine rule.

The Tory proposal of a 60-per-cent vote was rejected by government House leader Mc-Ilraith, who pointed to the constitutional requirement that Commons votes are by simple majority.

Section 49 of the British North America Act states:

"Questions arising in the House of Commons shall be decided by a majority of voices."

Acceptance of the Conservatives' 60-per-cent motion would involve a constitutional amendment as well as rules changes.

The effect of the long rules battle has been to throw the legislative timetable out of kilter. Each day slightens the prospect of much legislative

Rebels Say 'Christian Rally' By Junta May Spark Violence

SANTO DOMINGO (Reuters) — Followers of rebel leader Francisco Caamano Deno predicted an outbreak of violence today if the rival junta government of "national reconstruction" goes ahead with plans for a meeting in the northern coffee-growing town of Moca.

Rebel sources said the supporters of Gen. Antonio Imbert Barrera intended to hold a "Christian rally" in the town against the wishes of the local priest.

The Associated Press said that Imbert, a leading rally in support of his junta at Moca Sunday. A bomb exploded harmlessly near the crowd of 500. Police detained two suspects. It was Imbert's first trip beyond the outskirts of Santo Domingo since he was installed as junta president May 8.)

Both Dominican factions have recently stepped up their campaign to win popular support.

Rebel sources claimed Sunday that Manuely German Bel-Villar, a local official of the Dominican Revolutionary party, was shot and killed by gunfire across the border of the international safety zone in Santo Domingo.

The sources said that at the same time 25 soldiers of Imbert's forces defected across the border to join the rebels.

The rebel sources denied unconfirmed reports of guerrilla activity in the interior. They said the provisional government was anxious to maintain the cease-fire and avoid forces of the rival regimes.

Antonio Jose Mayobre, the Venezuelan ambassador representative who helped arrange the ceasefire, arrived back in Santo Domingo Sunday after reporting on his mission to UN Secretary-General U Thant.

There was no word whether the three-man negotiating team from the Organization of American States had made any progress toward a solution to the political stalemate. Discussions centre on setting up a provisional coalition government, including members who are not linked with the junta or the rebels.

Imbert has said the junta would accept the result of an OAS-supervised election. Caamano has insisted that any solution must include restoration of the 1963 constitution, which was discarded when the military overthrew President Juan D. Bosch.

The capital was quiet today, though sources in the OAS, which arranged the ceasefire, reported small violations during the weekend.

The last of the U.S marines sent here at the height of the revolt sailed toward their base in the U.S.

The United States still has 12,500 airborne troops and 700 air force men in the Dominican Republic. They are part of the inter-American peace force which also consists of 1,500 troops from Brazil, Costa Rica, Honduras and Nicaragua.

A floating battalion of about 1,800 marines is remaining in the Caribbean on regular duty.

Reds Mend Key Bridges In 3 Weeks

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Viet Nam has been able to get certain key bridges back into use only three weeks after they were blasted by U.S. bombers, the defence department disclosed today.

Working both day and night, the Communists have thrown temporary wooden sections across gaps torn in steel and concrete bridges by tons of high explosives.

These repairs, sources said, enable the Communists to resume limited movements of men and supplies across some critical bridges which the Pentagon previously declared impassable.

"The bridges were re-attacked to remove any possibility of use," the defence department told The Associated Press in explaining why air force and navy jets have returned again and again to such targets.

The Pentagon defended U.S. pilots against suggestions that their bombing accuracy might be below standard.

"Generally, the bombing accuracy of the pilots has been exceptional," the department said.

The AP raised questions with the defence department after navy and air force jets last week hit at two major railway and highway bridges about 70 miles south of Hanoi.

These bridges, Thanh Hoa and

Bench Warrant Is Issued, Accused Fails to Appear

Some 28 jurors had to be dismissed today after a Belleville man failed to appear before Hastings County coroner sessions.

Judge G. F. Smith, of Napanee, issued a bench warrant for the arrest of Robert Mondeville, 30, who was to have stood trial for alleged possession of burglary tools.

Jury costs alone amount to about $300. Each juror receives a $10 daily fee plus mileage one way.

The number of jurors called was reduced from a total of 60 when it was discovered all civil jury cases on the docket had been settled out of court or deferred.

"It is unfortunate you had to be called here today," Judge Smith told the jurors. "It is no one's fault but Mondeville's. He wanted a trial by judge and jury. He is entitled to that."

The judge delayed opening court almost 30 minutes to give the accused time to appear.

"Apparently he has no such intention," added Judge Smith. "And to the request of Crown counsel a bench warrant will be issued."

Crown Attorney John Pringle sought the warrant after telling the court a true bill against Mondeville and two others had been returned by a grand jury last November. The other accused were subsequently convicted, but hearing of Mondeville's charge was delayed when he was hospitalized with a broken leg.

Before dismissing the jurors, he noted there were three women present.

"So many women take advantage of the opportunity to refuse to serve (on a jury)," commend you," he told them.

Left Rivard In Spain Says Andre Durocher

MONTREAL (CP) — Andre Durocher, whose name hit the headlines after he made a sensational jailbreak with Lucien Rivard Marsh 2, ctold police questioning him Sunday that he left Rivard in Spain and returned to Montreal because he missed his wife.

Durocher, a small - time underworld figure with dyed red hair, told Montreal police officers questioning him following his capture Friday night that he last saw narcotics suspect Rivard in Barcelona, Spain, about three weeks ago.

Police said the apartment in which they found Durocher had been leased to his wife 17 days ago under another name.

At the beginning of his interrogation, Durocher, 28, refused to say anything about Rivard and was mum about his own activities since the escape from the provincial Bordeaux jail here, except to say he he had been out of town for much of the time.

"I don't know whether to believe him, but there was a report that Mrs. Rivard received a letter from her husband from Spain," Sgt. - Det. Robert Leblanc, who is heading the Montreal police investigation, said.

TELLS MANY STORIES

He's told us so many stories," he said, "it's hard to figure out what is true."

Durocher is scheduled to be arraigned today on charges of forcible detention and ear theft. Warrants for those charges were taken out for Durocher and Rivard after their escape. Warrants for their charges were taken out for Durocher and Rivard after their escape. Police said the ex - cons were forced motorist Jacques Bourgeois to ride along with them for about 30 minutes before ejecting him from his car.

Durocher would also be charged with possession of unregistered firearms and dynamite, police said.

The additional charge of escaping legal custody would have to be laid by the Quebec police.

Most of the calls resulted from any of the blazes, all of which were quickly extinguished.

A cigaret was blamed for a $200 damage to a car owned by Gordon H. Smith, 44 Wallbridge Crescent.

Saturday firemen were called for a grass fire to East Dundas St. but what turned out to be a false alarm, while also Saturday the reels were called to a home on Bleecker Ave. for a grass and tree fire.

Also Sunday the reels were called to a former lumber yard on east Station Street for a blazing sawdust pile. Firemen were also sent to the home of Lawrence Hubble, 1st concession of Sidney township for a grass and tree fire. The slight damage resulting was covered by insurance.

The principle of public security against illness already was recognized by such government agencies as the Workmen's Compensation Board and the Ontario Hospital Services Commission.

He accused the Roberts government of arrogance and indifference — particularly in its dealings with minorities. Said Mr. Thompson: "We believe it is up to us to fight through this arrogance on the part of the government and bring home to them that, although they won for 22 years, they still have a deep responsibility to everyone in this Ontario community."

Already One Ripe Tomato On Plant

Talk about rushing the season!

Summer is just underway and a tomato plant outside the home of Mrs. F. J. Treverton of 245 Coleman Street thinks it is August.

Mrs. Treverton reports that the plant already has one ripe tomato on it plus several small tomatoes.

Last fall, when Mrs. Treverton brought in a geranium from the outside and planted it in a pot inside, the tomato plant came with it. In a short time, she noticed the tomato plant growing and she planted it in a pot by itself.

The plant grew inside during the winter until two weeks ago when Mrs. Treverton planted it outside.

STORY NOT TOLD

The real story of the effort has not been told, for several reasons.

No Western reporters are in North Viet Nam nor are any taken along on the raids, as was done in the Second World War. The returnmen pilots are normally not available for reporters' questioning and what they could tell of observable results is not released.

U.S. officials depict the bombings as heavily oriented in the direction of the psychological warfare as a means of convincing the powers that rule from Hanoi and their Chinese backers that theirs is a losing game, that they are likely to suffer greater damage unless they do their part to call off their help to the Viet Cong forces fighting on the ground in South Viet Nam.

But the evidence available to them have not been convinced. There would be a lot of surprised officials in Salon if Ho Chi Minh waved a white flag tomorrow.

TOKYO (AP) — North Viet Nam shocked Sunday that U.S. warplanes were methodically bombing populated areas, factories and offices in that country.

It said the U.S. air strikes "expose U.S. President Johnson's lies about U.S. planes only bombing 'concrete blocks' and purely military targets causing limited destruction."

The charges are contained in a statement issued by the North Vietnamese foreign ministry. The text was broadcast by the New China news agency from Peking.

Widow of Slain Sheriff Faces Tough Future

BOGALUSA, La. (AP)—The widow of a slain Negro deputy sheriff-civil rights worker of four children — faces an uncertain future.

Washington parish (county) Sheriff Dorman Crose said the widow of his deputy, O'Neal Moore, is covered by an office insurance policy which should pay the widow $5,000 plus $5,000 for each of four small children.

But it was unclear Sunday whether she would receive an additional $25,000 in death benefits from the state because Moore apparently was killed in racial violence.

Governor John J. McKeithen, who flew to Bogalusa from Baton Rouge, to Bogalusa, for a weekend press conference, said he didn't think the State Legislature intended to place any such restriction on the compensation and that the benefits should be made available to Mrs. Moore. He said his lawyers were looking into legal aspects of the matter.

OFFERS REWARD

At the same time, McKeithen said the state was offering a $25,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of the killers. Moore, a 35-year-old ex-car painter, Deputy Creed Rogers, also a Negro, were waylaid and shot on a state highway last Wednesday night. Rogers is listed in fair condition in hospital.

Moore and Rogers were the first Negro deputies appointed to the all-white sheriff's department.

A white man, Jerry Lee - old Ernest R. McElveen, has been charged with murder in connection with the slaying. McElveen has denied any connection with the case.

Sunday, FBI agents questioned state police who were on duty the night of the slaying. Other investigators continued to probe the finish of six small-calibre shots into the home of Doyle Holliday, the chief deputy of the sheriff's department.

Real Story Of Air Strikes Not Been Told

By BEN BASSETT
AP Foreign News Editor

SAIGON (AP) — Those who predicted that U.S. air strikes in North Viet Nam would bring a decision in the Vietnamese war have had four months to prove their point.

They have not.

And the most they can claim is that the air strikes have helped advance the day when conditions can be sighted and it is not even easy to back that contention.

Bombing began Feb. 7. Hundreds of sorties have blasted the northern area ruled by Ho Chi Minh. The announcements tell of scores of bridges and other targets damaged or wiped out.

At the same time, said the communiques, all the Dong Thong Thgong bridge was "collapsed and in the river and the spans on both approaches are badly damaged."

Last week, navy jets from the carrier Ton Hoomme Richard hit the Dong Thong Thung bridge and afterward pilots reported the center span had dropped and the bridge was destroyed under the impact of bombs, including rockets, Zuni rockets and cannon fire.

Also last week, air force jets pounded Thanh Hoa, but pilots reported they left the bridge still standing despite 10 tons of bombs unloaded around it.

In its explanation to the AP, the defense department said "very few bridges have been repaired" and that the Communists have to bypass the crossing by either ferries or fording.

Historical Society Holds Meets, Tours to End Year

The Hastings County Historical Society has concluded a successful year with a series of three meetings in the last few weeks.

The first of these was held in Tweed in the Church Hall of St. James Anglican Church. Approximately 60 persons were on hand for the program arranged by Mr. Clyde Bell of the Tweed News. A former director of the Perth Museum and a present director of the Hastings County Historical Society, Mr. Bell showed a film entitled "The Hoist". Prepared in 1955 at the Perth Museum in Eastern Ontario by the National Film Board of Canada, this film was greatly enjoyed. Among the persons featured in the picture was Mr. Clyde Bell himself.

In the absence of the president, Gerald Boyce, the meeting was chaired by vice president Thomas Ransom.

Mr. R. Hannah welcomed the members of the historical society on behalf of the Tweed Chamber of Commerce, and at the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served courtesy of the Chamber of Commerce.

Plans to turn the old jail at Tweed into a Chamber of Commerce publicity project were revealed and the co-operation of the society was promised.

Mr. Rodger Greig expressed the society's thanks to Mr. Bell for arranging the meeting and also expressed appreciation to Rev. David Sinclair and the authorities of St. James Church for providing accommodation, to the women of the church for preparing and serving the lunch, to the Tweed Chamber of Commerce for providing the refreshments, and to the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests for the use of a projector.

At the conclusion of the meeting, those present were agreed that the meeting of the historical society should be held in the towns, villages and hamlets of the county.

A second meeting of the Society attracted almost 100 persons to tour the old City of Belleville Police Station on the Market Square. This building, built about 1850, has served as a market building, town offices, arbitories and most recently as a police station.

CLERK CONDUCTS TOUR

Now that the police have moved to renovated quarters in the old City Council has decided to demolish the old police station.

The tour was conducted by City Clerk Adam Stalker and the visitors were welcomed by Gerald Boyce on behalf of the historical society. The past uses of the building were mentioned briefly by Rodger Greig suggested what the building must have looked like in its original state.

Also present was city alderman Donald Joss.

After the tour of the old police station, the tourists moved to the city hall, erected in the early 1870's, where Mr. Greig spoke on the history of the building and about 40 energetic souls ventured to climb the bell and clock tower.

Those taking part in the climb enjoyed a wonderful view of the city, being able to see all the churches, schools, and other points of interest from the balcony just below the clock faces. All agreed that this was the highpoint of the evening and several suggested that this climb could be turned into a tourist attraction for Belleville. Certainly the wooden steps leave something to be desired and the ascent is steep, however, this view is spectacular.

Leaving the city hall after expressing appreciation to Mr. Stalker and city officials for permission to tour the old police station and city hall, the tour members adjourned to the Corby Library auditorium, where Mr. Greig showed several slides of Belleville landmarks, past and present.

There was discussion on the methods of preservation of some of our fine old buildings and it was stressed that a use must be found for them or else they will perish.

The third meeting of the Historical Society was held in the Corby Library Auditorium with Judge Gerald F. Smith of Napanee as the guest speaker. The president of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society and the secretary of the 1964 Centennial celebrations in Napanee and the County, Judge Smith gave an interesting and informative talk on what he called "A Hodgepodge History of Lennox and Addington County.

The history of our neighboring county was seen to be similar in many ways to that of Hastings County. The meeting appreciated his references to some of the great men of Lennox and Addington County including John A. Macdonald who spent several years as a boy at Adolphustown and also practised law at Napanee.

Mr. Clyde Bell of Tweed expressed the appreciation of the meeting to Judge Smith, who had been introduced by his nephew, Gerald Boyce of the Hastings County Historical Society.

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

The report of the nominating committee was introduced by Thomas Ransom and it recommended that the present executive continue in office for the year 1965-66. Appointed as a new member to head up the social committee was Mrs. J. A. Slater.

Inasmuch as a later chance in the executive has taken place since the annual meeting, the list of executive members will appear in the press at a later date.

As the society concludes another successful year, only two events remain. A workshop is scheduled for the museum on Monday evening, June 7, and a tour is tentatively planned for Saturday, June 19.

It's Dairy Princess time again and arrangements have been completed for the crowning of the 1965 Princess in both Hastings and Prince Edward counties.

500 Klansmen March Quietly In Atlanta

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — More than 500 Ku Klux Klansmen and their followers, including a number of women with young children, marched quietly through downtown Atlanta Sunday as several hundred silent spectators lined the sidewalks.

The marchers, about 300 of them wearing robes and hoods, stopped outside the main federal building in Atlanta as klansmen placed a black wreath by the entrance.

Next to the wreath was a sign that read, "Bury the Communist influence in our government."

Presbyterians Defeat Motion On Election

TORONTO (CP)—A move to have the moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada elected in advance of the general assembly over which he is to preside was defeated Saturday at the assembly.

The proposal was put forward by the presbytery of Paris, Ont., which said the present method was unfair in that it left the presbytery of advance assurance of his appointment and no time to prepare for office.

However, the general assembly decided that while presbyteries may continue to name nominees, the official nomination must still be made from the floor at the opening session.

Rev. John A. Ross of Vancouver said the church is neglected work among university students. It was folly to send missionaries overseas and in the same time neglect the hundreds of thousands of potential leaders in this country.

In a discussion on church architecture, Rev. Bruce Miles of Wingham suggested that in view of increased costs of church construction it may be time to think of multi-purpose building that could be used to pay its way throughout the week.

Rev. R. G. MacMillan of Oakville commented that in the United States there is a plan for building one inter - faith church in communities to serve all denominations.

After Saturday's assembly an open air ceremony was held in suburban Mount Hills at which the first sod was turned for the national office building of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. The moderator, Rev. James Allan Munro of Toronto, officiated.

Reinstate Quebec Teacher Who Used Nazi Symbols

MONTREAL (CP) — Brother Rene Lahaie, a teacher at Montreal's la Mennais school who was suspended several months ago for having used Nazi symbolism as a classroom aid, has been reinstated.

He and his principal, Brother Hector Asselin, also suspended were to return to their jobs today. The decision of the school inspector for the area in which la Mennais is located, Antonio Girard, remains in effect.

The removal of the two suspensions follows a report by a special four-man committee appointed by the Montreal Roman Catholic School committee. The report is to be made public but officials Sunday night refused to disclose the report's conclusions which resulted in the reinstatements.

Brother Lahaie's novel teaching method, which he said he used as an incentive, included a system of grading students according to ranks in the Nazi army and a "Heil Christ" salute which replaced the traditional morning prayer and sign of the cross.

His Grade 7 classroom walls featured pictures of Christ and Hitler side by side, as well as crucifixes and swastikas.

Sister Larry, president of the school commission, said Sunday night the two brothers were being reinstated "under certain conditions" but he would not comment on the report until its release.

TRENTON — Whether the costly land slide at the Los Angeles suburb of Pacific Palisades has affected the property o fa regular Carrying Place visitor is not known.

Mrs. William Bridgeman, formerly Jacqueline Hazard, who visits her grandmother, Mrs. Maude Zimmerman at Carrying Place, annually makes her permanent residence at the exclusive oceanside community in southern California. Miss Hazard made her mark as a writer with a book named "The Lonely Sky" about a test pilot who later became her husband. Her father, Jack Hazard, has been engaged for some time now building and developing along the south shore of the Bay of Quinte.

Last week a section of the escarpment that faces the Pacific ocean gave away and started tumbling down the 300 feet high cliff. A number of homes and business places have been damaged so far and the slide is continuing despite all out efforts to halt the erosion.

Heavy Fog Prompts Drivers To Be Cautious

TRENTON — Fog that covered outlying districts this morning apparently prompted car drivers to be cautious because no accidents were reported at the police station since Sunday. However, a minor mishap over the weekend two car drivers and a seven-year-old boy cyclist escaped without injury.

Late Saturday young Grant Hie son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Hie of 27 Nicol Street was unable to stop the bicycle he was riding as it entered the junction at the Wooler Road and entrance to the North Trenton school property. Car driver William G. Whaley of 220 Queen Street was unable to avoid a collision as the front bumper of his vehicle struck the front wheel of the boy's bike.

Police set the damage at $25 when a car driven by Larry Brian Miller of 110 Scott Street brushed a sign post at the corner of Dunn Drive and Bowen Avenue. Miller said his car skidded in the loose gravel as he was making the turn.

A rear end collision resulted when a car driven by John Arnold Young of 77 Louis Avenue backed away from a parking space at the southeast corner of the police station. Albert Edward Ethier of 161 Shuter Street was driving the car through the market square at the time contact was made with the Young vehicle. Total damage was estimated at $35.

V. P. Carswell Honored On Eve of His Retirement

TRENTON — The best kept secret of the year came out Saturday night when V. P. Carswell, supervising principal of Trenton's public schools, was surprised by 200 of his former students, teachers, members of the Trenton Board of Education and friends at a staging of "This Is Your Life, Mr. Carswell" in the Masonic Temple.

Mr. Carswell, active in the educational field for 46 years—44 of them in Trenton—retires at the end of this month.

With his long-time associate, Arnold Robson, principal of Marmora High School, as chief script writer and commentator, Mr. Carswell sat on the stage of the Masonic auditorium and heard and saw his past unfold before him.

Many of his former students and teachers who had worked under him through the years, were first introduced by "voice" and then were led out onto the stage to be greeted by the guest of honor.

Born in Grafton, Mr. Carswell first taught in this area after graduating from Peterborough Normal School. His salary was $600 a year.

CAME IN 1923

In January, 1921, he moved to Trenton and started his teaching career here at the old College Street school, under Principal M. T. Graham. He became principal in 1924, and continued on as principal of a new College Street school when it was opened in 1939.

In 1949, Mr. Carswell was appointed supervising principal of public schools, and in 1951, accepted the added responsibility of secretary-treasurer of the Trenton School Board. Two years ago he relinquished the position of secretary-treasurer and in March of this year announced his retirement as supervising principal.

During his many years in Trenton, Mr. Carswell and his wife, the former Pauline Allen, have been active as members of Grace United Church, and Mr. Carswell has entered into community life through membership in the Trenton Lions' Club and the Masonic Lodge, holding distinct executive positions in both of these organizations.

Mr. Carswell has also been active in sports, particularly baseball and hockey, and took an active interest in the school cadet movement when it was first instigated.

The Carswell family at last night's tribute to V. P. Carswell, supervising principal of Trenton's public schools. Mr. Carswell retires this month after 44 years in the local educational field. Mr. Carswell is greeted by his old-time friend, Cpt. Walter Bowen.

The Carswells have three sons, Ernest, Douglas and Harold, all married.

At last night's gathering, the Carswells were presented with many gifts, from the school board, the teachers, and the schools' custodial staff.

Boat Traffic Centres Open

TRENTON — The two centres that serve marine traffic entering and leaving the Trent waterways system are being operated under the guidance of boating enthusiast F. L. Worrall again this year.

Don Hastie has already opened the repair and refueling depot on the east side of the river, north of the town bridge, while the fuel pumps and canteen south of No. 2 Highway, span will commence operating on a regular schedule later this month. Ed Herby, the efficient attendant at the centre of the government dock last year, will be missed. He joined the Canadian Coast Guard last fall and signed on with the government service this season.

Credit Costs Money

There is no longer any stigma attached to the use of credit, George Hume told the Belleville Rotary Club last week. Mr. Hume is an expert on credit, the manager of the Credit Bureau of Belleville.

But if no stigma is attached to credit, there is a price.

Credit costs money.

This cost may be worth the convenience, not merely to the person who borrows, but to society as a whole. As Mr. Hume pointed out, credit oils the machinery of our economic system, making it run smoothly where otherwise it might falter.

Nevertheless, one cannot escape from the fact that the operation of a credit system requires work and that somebody has to pay for this. Generally speaking, the people who pay are the people who borrow. It ought to be cheaper to buy for cash; when it is not, it is only because cash purchasers, quite unjustly, are being loaded with part of the cost of operating a credit system for others. The store which offers merchandise to credit customers at the same price as it sells to cash customers is a good one to deal with as far as credit customers are concerned, but a bad one for cash customers.

Providing a proper differential is maintained between cash and credit prices, the consumer will always get the best value when he buys for cash. But there are some things which he will need before he is able to pay for them. Then credit is invaluable. Its uses early in life are obvious. But it is a poor system which does not provide the thrifty customer with a chance to change his status from a credit customer to a cash customer, entitled to enjoy the savings which should accrue to the latter class.

There was a time when another valid criticism of the credit system would have been that it drained off a large number of capable workers from the productive segment of society. The people required for the efficient operation of our modern credit system add nothing to the amount of goods which are available for consumption.

This criticism, though, has lost much of its validity in a day when we are able to produce more than we can sell of many commodities.

This opens up to us the prospect of some future day when we may see a credit system which costs the consumer nothing. There are some prophets who foresee the time when automation will make it expedient to pay people for not working, in order that they may assist in consuming the glut of goods which machines will pour out. When that day comes there will be no real need to demand payment for credit. If people are being paid without working, surely other people can be permitted to borrow without being charged interest.

Until that day dawns, however, two things ought to be kept in mind. Credit costs and somebody has to pay for it. Secondly, it is desirable that those who pay should be those who borrow.

A Weak Argument

Mayor Gordon Stronach of London, Ont., does not like magistrates sitting on police commissions.

He seized upon Attorney-General Arthur Wishart's concern about police chiefs acting as justices of the peace and used it as a hook on which to hang an objection to what he evidently considers a similar situation.

Mayor Stronach's argument is that no man should be part of the police force management and at the same time deal with policemen in court. The same argument, we suppose, would apply against judges being member of police commissions.

The mayor has a point. But he should face the facts of life. In this case they are simple. Firstly, somebody with legal training should direct the management of police work. Secondly, lawyers are divided into three categories, those on the bench, those who prosecute and those who defend. A magistrate or a judge is likely to come closer to impartiality than a crown attorney or a defence lawyer in the management of the affairs of a police force.

I recommend you to take care of the minutes, for the hours will take care of themselves. —Chesterfield.

It was war that destroyed the city states of Greece and war that might destroy our own modern society.—Prime Minister Pearson.

Young Niece's Avoirdupois Causes Emotional Illness

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have a 14-year-old niece who is five feet three inches and weighs 185 pounds. She is beset by all kinds of emotional disturbances and I fully believe these are the result of her avoirdupois.

She wets the bed at night, complains of sick headaches and especially of a queasy stomach. She cries at the least word said to her. She stays home from school any time she chooses by saying she feels sick and is afraid she will vomit.

All she does is sit and watch TV, eat and read. Her parents exert no authority over her. I might add that the doctors find nothing wrong. Would you call this a mental case? — Mrs. M. V.

Mental ease? Yes, but I think emotional illness is a better term.

When you say "the doctors find nothing wrong," I scarcely can agree. Seventy pounds overweight and nothing wrong?

But whether her fatness causes her emotional reactions, or whether her lack of discipline and her outlook on life are causing her fatness — well, that's the question.

If a psychiatric counseling service were available in your community, I would suggest using it, at least to get an evaluation of the girl's problems and an idea of what to do about them.

Since you are in a rural area, however, that may not be so easy. Try to find a doctor who is prepared to follow this girl's case for several years.

Her parents, must, if any progress is to be made, be willing to discuss the situation with her doctor, to put the girl on a diet which will start removing the huge burden of fat, to see that she starts obeying and not skipping school at any time she chooses.

The girl should exercise, have some household chores to do, and limit the amount of time she just sits in front of the boob tube.

Whether psychiatric treatment is indicated, I can't guess. Sometimes plain common sense consistently applied, is all that is needed to make great progress in a case like this.

There is every reason to think that so fat a girl might not have much fun, and might tend to stay home, but the bed-wetting implies that additional emotional quirks are present.

If she'll try to do something about her troubles, and her parents will help by insisting on diet, exercise and keeping busy, she has a chance to straighten out her life.

But she won't get a nywhere by sitting, eating, making excuses. And her parents won't help by letting her do so.

Dear Dr. Molner: In summer a lot of people wear blue-tinted sun glasses. As blue glass permits ultra-violet rays to pass through, wouldn't this make the glasses virtually useless? — R. M.

Not at all. The purpose of the sun glasses is to reduce glare, and the color makes no difference — any color that pleases you is satisfactory.

I think you have been misinformed. Blue glass doesn't permit ultra-violet to pass through. Ordinary glass, of any color, filters out a lot of it. Ultraviolet lamps, because of this, use a special glass (quartz or fluorite) which lets most of it go through.

Why is it that you can get a sunburn outdoors, but don't get a burn if you are indoors with the sun coming through a window? Why, because the glass absorbs so much ultra-violet.

Today in History

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

June 7, 1965 . . .

Robert Bruce, the national hero of Scotland, died 636 years ago today—in 1329—of leprosy, which he had contracted during his campaigns against the English. Only the year before, the Treaty of Northampton secured Scottish independence as the culmination of Bruce's 25 years of warfare. At the battle of Bannockburn (1314) his tactics led to the defeat of an English force far larger than the Scottish.

1776 — The Continental Congress first considered a resolution of independence from Britain.

1820—George VI became the first British monarch to set foot in the United States.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1915—Lieut.-R. A. J. Warneford became the first man to destroy a Zeppelin in aerial combat; German forces crossed the Dniester River at Zuravno; after an attack on the Aisne, French troops estimated 2,000 German dead.

Second World War

Twenty - five years ago today — 1940 — Allied troops retreated from most of the Somme-Aisne battlefront; the war's first Victoria Cross was awarded posthumously to Captain B. A. W. Warburton-Lee, commander of the destroyer flotilla at the first battle of Narvik, April 10.

Please Leave My Aching Back Alone!

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I was standing, at an angle of 45 degrees, in the lobby of a theatre the other night, when a friend walked up and asked, "What's the matter?" I shrugged, "Just my semi-annual lower back pain. It'll go away in a few days."

Let me tell you about a wonderful . . ." he began. "No advice, please." I broke in sharply. "If there's one thing I don't want, it's advice." He walked away with a hurt look, and this is my apology to him.

But the worst thing about having a bad back is the advice it brings. Everybody knows an absolutely wonderful man who cured it in one treatment. Everybody is eager to relate the case-study of a friend or relative who walked into the wonderful man's office like a cripple and walked out like Jack Armstrong.

Don't go to anyone but an orthopedic surgeon. Don't go to anyone but an osteopath. Don't go to any doctor. Don't go to anyone but Swedish masseurs. Don't go to anyone, just stay in bed.

Do these line simple exercises. Don't do any exercises. There's a new drug on the market that relieves the spasm immediately. Plain old aspirin will turn the trick. There's nothing better than tranquilizers. A couple of shots of whiskey three times a day is better than all the medicine.

If you have a slipped disc, there's no remedy but surgery. Surgery is the worst thing you can have done for it. Try one of those new corsets. Don't wear any corsets at all. Why not increase the pressure? A couple of injections of cortisone should make a new man of you.

And don't forget the rocking chair.

So it goes . . . incessantly. The most eminent medical men in the world are baffled by the intricacies of the lower back, but someone who doesn't know the blue from the fluid is the fount of all wisdom in a matter of this sort. In no other field does the inverse ratio between ignorance and faith obtain so precisely and predictably.

The exquisite pain of the lumbar region is as nothing compared with the agony of listening to bore-recitals of similar cases treated by some miracle worker. . . who, alas, is long dead, or long retired, or has moved to Hawaii, or whose name eludes the reciter. They have everything to offer except a phone number.

It will pass, as all things do. And when it does, come bright and lovely morning, I will no doubt approach a friend leaning palely at a 45 degree angle and ask, "What's the matter?" When he tells me it's his back, I'll smile warmly and say, "Now let me tell you how I got rid of my . . ." And should he limp away with a baleful look, I'll be hurt and call him an ungrateful boor under my breath.

'We Russians Are Afraid---'

By Juergen Neven-du Mont in Die Zeit, West German Weekly

A Russian family would be delighted to have a discussion with a West German journalist, I was told. A few friends would be invited too.

On my arrival, the friends to my surprise introduced themselves as two generals, a colonel, a major and a sub-lieutenant of the Soviet Army.

After a few strong vodkas we started our discussion.

The general asked: "What do you in West Germany still militarists and revanchists?"

"Do you think that all Soviet citizens are faultless, that they only have reasonable thoughts?" I replied.

No, the general did not believe that, and the other officers agreed.

"In our country we have people, too, who are unreasonable."

The second general exclaimed: "All right, but your unreasonable people are holding important positions, not ours."

I reminded him of Khrushchev, who had to step down because he was called unreasonable.

* * *

The first general said: "Reason or no reason. You have a strong military force again. It demonstrates that your militarists are unreasonable."

"Four hundred thousand soldiers without atomic weapons are no strong or dangerous military force. And we have them only because we are afraid of you."

"Afraid of us?" exclaimed the first general. "We really are? peaceful people. No, we're really the other way around. We are afraid."

"Afraid of the Americans?" I asked.

"No, mostly afraid of you, the people's democracies, the international army, supported by modern rockets and nuclear weapons. You can be afraid of the small German Federal Republic (West Germany)?"

This time the colonel gave the explanation: "You have to see it from this point. In the two largest wars of history we were nearly beat us to the ground. Especially in the Great Patriotic War (the Second World War) fascist troops penetrated deep into the Soviet Union. Considerable parts of our country were ruined.

"And yet we then had a rather strong army, and we were much more divisions than Hitler, who, like his imperialistic predecessors, had to fight on two fronts and therefore could not send all his troops against the Soviet Union.

"Russians don't usually like to talk about it. But the supply of weapons and materials which we received from the Americans was vitally important."

"But," I interjected, "can you compare today's power structure with that of the Second World War?"

"Definitely. Fortunately the Soviet Union has an extremely strong army. But also West Germany is more powerful now in the last war. Then Germany had no hinterland, a very limited basis for its operations and no important allies. Germany had to fight on many fronts.

"Yet today West Germany is a member of NATO and has powerful allies. With its hinterland it has a strong military basis. There is the possibility that the U.S. will supply it with weapons and materials. But you have to admit that its position has considerably improved."

"Yet the Soviet Union has nuclear weapons, the Federal Republic does not. So why are you afraid? Only because of the fact that the Federal Republic only or of the Federal Republic as a member of NATO?"

This time the second general replied: "We are afraid of both. Of the Federal Republic, because it is a member of NATO and also of it itself, because its politicians have revanchistic intentions.

"They want atomic weapons for the West German Army, and one day they will get them. They don't want to accept that the political situation which resulted from the last war. They want to revise it. They could lead NATO into a war against us. That's what we are afraid of."

"Yes," added the other general. "This really is the crux of the matter. You see, we have a proverb that the Germans are so clever that they even invented the monkey.

"You Germans developed the principles for the atomic bomb. You built the first rockets. Who knows what you have thought out since or what you will invent tomorrow? We take precautions against you, because we expect you to do anything."

Is this propaganda? Hardly. The fear of the Germans is deeply seated. I talked to many Soviet officers. Always I heard the same. They are afraid of us and they suffer because of it. And they compensate for this inferiority complex with threats of how they could turn Germany into a desert with one nuclear attack.

I also had a very frank talk with a politician.

"What, for instance, would happen" he said, "if we would suddenly, one or two months prior to the West German federal elections, offer the re-unification of Germany?

"This would include the retreat of all Soviet troops from East Germany, the offer of free elections for all Germany after readmission of the Communist Party (in West Germany.)

"Naturally, West Germany would have to step out of NATO and East Germany out of the Warsaw Pact.

"Our condition would be that a re-united Germany would be neutral, free from any military treaties and limited to an army of, say, 300,000 without atomic weapons.

"Do you think that Erhard could reject this, just prior to the election? And the Social Democrats, wouldn't they be in quite a fix?"

He smiled, obviously thinking about the panic following such a proposal.

* * *

Yet I asked: "Can't you imagine the consequences which a Soviet proposal of that kind could have with the other socialist states? Can the Soviet Union, for instance, afford to have no military contingents west of Poland?"

"Certainly there are reasons against such a proposal," was the reply. "And there are reasons for it.

"In East Germany for instance. There are a number of communist action cells. Don't you think that in a neutralized and independent Germany they could one day grab power? Do you think that the powers of your capitalistic democracy are so strong that this never could happen?

"Believe me, our chances in a neutralized unified Germany would be excellent, but it would also be dangerous. The country could not afford a unified Communist Germany."

I was puzzled. "You could not afford a Communist Germany? Wasn't this always the great dream of the Soviet Union? Didn't Stalin say: "The only who owns Germany owns the world"? Is it true that since Stalin's death or only since Khrushchev had to go?"

"No," he answered. "This was no longer valid even under Khrushchev.

"Then, when propagating world communism, it would have been very advantageous to have Germany on the socialist camp. Today this has changed.

* * *

"Under Stalin the existence and the unity of the socialistic bloc was secured by the unity of Communist doctrine. This laid down the rules.

"Now two nations compete for the domination of the socialistic camp. In China they even talk about Marxism-Leninism-Maoism.

"Maybe the Germans are more skilled than we are. A Communist-led united Germany for instance could produce a second Titoism. It would integrate the idea of decentralization even further.

"With German efficiency, the great political and economic power which a united Communist Germany would have over the predominant position of the Soviet Union would be weakened further. What Germany has done to Asia, Germany could do to Europe and the West.

"Imagine the influence on France and Italy and the other West European nations, even on the Arabian countries, Africa and South America.

"No, we cannot afford a united Communist Germany. Times have changed. We have to preserve our own national interests."

"National interests, though are against Marx's doctrine," I remarked.

"That's true. But Marx is long since gone."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

The Channel Islands to which Mr. Churchill referred in his VE-Day broadcast as "our dear Channel Islands" have been liberated and there has been rejoicing on these isles, and in Britain that they have been freed after the five-year occupation of the enemy. They were the only part of the British Empire which the Germans had succeeded in occupying.

The islands occupy about 75 square miles in area and form a rocky cluster lying off the northwest coast of France. The waters about the islands are dangerous and have been the scene of many wrecks. The climate is mild and equable, the soil rich and fertile and the islands supply a great deal of early vegetables and fruit to the British markets in ordinary times. Its fisheries of cod, lobster and oysters are important. To many people of the western world the islands are best known for their breeds of cattle, the Jersey and guernsey.

Two large plate glass windows in the front of Bill Coutt's tobacco and newspaper store were smashed about 10:20 o'clock last night by a transient who was drugged with bad liquor and who admitted that he had been drinking in the "jungles" on the outskirts of the city which is frequented by transients. Prior to reaching the Coutt store he had tried to break a window in Doyle's drug store with his fist. But was unsuccessful. He was taken into custody by Constables Arnott and Thompson, who arrived on the scene at the same time. In police court today the man could not clearly remember details of his actions and was remanded for a short time.

His Worship Mayor Geo. O. Tree, is today observing the anniversary of his birth and he is receiving congratulations and good wishes from many friends.

to get under way, during which two million acres of New Brunswick woodland will be covered with insecticides.

It has become a permanent industry, this policy of pouring poison from the skies. Surely there is something fundamentally wrong with this system of controlling insects when it has to be employed year after year, when coniferous animals and birds and fish have to die along with the insects that are attacking lumber stands. Surely in this age of science and technology, a method other than indiscriminate spraying can be found. When animals and birds and fish are killed along with spruce budworms, it is past time for reassessment.

Recklessness and abandon seem to be the orders of the day. It is time to change the orders. It is madness to allow all and sundry to pollute the countryside as they please.

Shastri and Pearson Will Exchange Views on 'Many Issues of Common Concern'

NEW DELHI (AP)—India expects "very much greater collaboration" with Canada as a result of Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri's state visit to that fellow-Commonwealth nation beginning Thursday, an Indian government spokesman said today.

He said Canada and India have no problems either bilaterally or internationally, and "this will make their future cooperation even more heartfelt than ever before."

Shastri and Canadian Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson will exchange views on "many matters of common concern" like disarmament and the United Nations and also "common experience in peacekeeping operations" as in Viet Nam and The Congo, he said.

Shastri might touch on his recent visit to the Soviet Union and underline the need for strengthening forces that tend to bring Washington and Moscow closer, the spokesman said.

He said the government had no official knowledge of press reports of the possibility President Johnson might talk with Shastri over long-distance telephone in Canada.

Press reports from New York published here said Johnson was likely to take this step in an attempt to restore Indian-American relations, which deteriorated in the wake of Johnson's abrupt postponement of Shastri's visit to the United States, scheduled for this month along with his Canadian tour.

Shastri had reacted by cancelling his U.S. tour altogether and adhering to the Canadian visit.

SHASTRI NOT A NAME

Shastri will receive a doctorate of laws at McGill University, Montreal, Monday.

Shastri, by which name he is popularly known all over the world, is not actually a name. It is a title of graduation, like bachelor of arts, which his university—Kashi Vidyapeeth, at Banaras—conferred on him.

Canada during the last 13 years has given India $273,000,000 of outright gifts under the Colombo Plan.

Canada also has given four special wheat grants totalling $32,000,000; now is offering a $30,000,000 long-term interest-free loan, mostly for a hydro-electric project at Periyar in Kerala state, and has pledged $70,000,000 export credit. This includes a $33,900,000 agreement signed on a loan for building an atomic power station at Kotah in the Rajasthan area.

Canada already has provided one atomic reactor at Trombay, near Bombay, costing $10,400,000, and is aiding India to complete the Kunda hydro-electric project in Madras state at a cost of $45,900,000. Canada exports to India goods worth $18,250,000 and buys articles worth $20,000,000 to $35,000,000 annually.

Spacemen

aircraft carrier U.S.S. Wasp, arrived at the recovery zone, southwest of Bermuda, about 3 a.m.

"It looks like good recovery weather," reported the ship's weather officer.

The flight plan called for McDivitt to fire his jet thrusters at 12:43 p.m. while he is just about over Hawaii. This slows the spacecraft slightly, assuring re-entry even if the retro-rockets were to fail.

Retro-fire comes at 12:56 p.m. while Gemini IV races 85 to 90 miles high in the skies roughly over Juma, Ariz.

Houston mission control announced corrected distances for the splash down area while the 60th orbit was in progress. The recovery area is 440 miles east of Cape Kennedy and 625 miles southwest of Bermuda, mission control said.

PREDICTS TAME SEA

Cmdr. George Reith, meteorologist aboard the Wasp, predicted a mild sea for splash down, with waves only three feet high, 30 - degree temperatures and visibility 10 miles or better.

At 3:29 a.m. Gemini IV entered the 57th orbit of its 62-orbit flight.

Neither the prolonged period in their cramped capsule, nor an accumulation of debris, nor even a contrary computer switch seemed to dull the good spirits of the space twins.

The spacecraft's computer switch went haywire during the 48th orbit.

It meant that ground controllers had to plot the new course they would have to perform, somewhat less precisely, a pre-re-entry manoeuvre — but Flight Director Christopher Kraft assured "it has absolutely no effect on the safety of the flight."

After McDivitt listed where he would stow all the gear collected during the four-day mission, the ground communicator said the capsule must be rather crowded.

JOKES ABOUT IT

"It's pretty deep," jested the pilot. "I can barely see out the window."

Ground controllers had to keep track of every item in the spacecraft, from used food containers to the special equipment White would use in his outside, so they could figure out the capsule's precise centre of gravity and know how it would behave during descent.

Asked how much the accumulated debris weighed, McDivitt cracked: "About 3,000 pounds."

The astronauts, who had spotted and photographed two orbiting satellites early in their flight apparently missed seeing the U.S. Pegasus II satellite Sunday though they were on the lookout for it. At least they made no mention of it in their radio communications.

They did, however, perform a number of photographic experiments, alternately got good periods of sound sleep, ate well, and continued their characteristic banter as their mission neared its end.

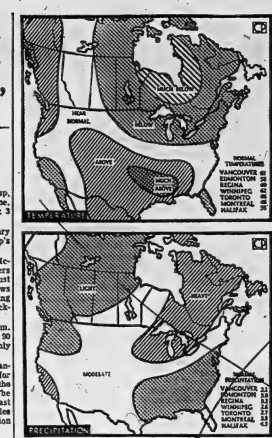
At one point the astronauts traded friendly insults while in communication with Gemini IV control.

"I'm sure tired of looking at his ugly face," McDivitt said of his space partner. "He needs a shave."

Countered White: "I'm getting tired of hearing that silly voice, too, McDivitt."

ARE ALERT

It is apparent to the experts observing McDivitt and White that men can remain alert after long periods of weightlessness.



Dr. Charles A. Berry, chief medical officer, said that throughout the flight the astronauts had shown no physical or mental wear and had remained remarkably alert.

Dr. Joseph Shea, director of the Apollo man-to-the-moon program, said White's successful step into space was especially significant.

"With this knowledge," he said, "we can now plan emergency procedures which involve men leaving the moonship to make repairs or to transfer from one segment of the ship to another if connecting tunnels are blocked."

ISN'T FAVORED

TORONTO (CP) — Compulsory arbitration is not favored as a first step in settling union disputes, Reeve Albert Campbell of suburban Scarborough, chairman of a special committee set up last year by the Ontario Municipal Association, said Sunday night. The committee will suggest that the provincial body be authorized to direct compulsory arbitration only as the last of a number of steps.

COOL JUNE — Below-normal temperatures are expected for most of Canada in June according to the 30-day outlook of the United States weather bureau. Only British Columbia will have above-normal temperatures.

Wet weather is expected in Eastern Canada, less-than-normal rainfall in British Columbia and near-normal rainfall on the Prairies.

The outlook is not a specific forecast and changes may occur.

Other temperatures for the period are: New York, 71; New Orleans, 80; San Francisco, 61. Other precipitation figures are: New York, 3.4; New Orleans, 4.5; San Francisco, 0. (CP Newsmap)

Window Donated by Welsh Dedicated in Negro Church

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—A stained-glass window depicting the suffering of Negroes and donated by the people of Wales was dedicated Sunday in a Birmingham church to the memory of four Negro girls who died within its walls in a racial bombing in 1963.

Quietly, reverently, about 300 Negroes — including parents of two of the victims—participated in a 30-minute ceremony at the 16th Street Baptist Church.

Behind them, and high above on the sanctuary, glowed the stained-glass window. The figure of a Negro man, his arms extended and hands open as if on a cross, dominates the centre of the window. Below him are the words, "You do it to me."

A plaque, not visible from the shiny pews of this newly reconstructed 92 - year - old church, carried these names: Cynthia Dianne Wesley, Carol Rosamond Robertson, Carol Denise McNair, and Addie Mae Collins.

These four were killed and 20 injured when a dynamite bomb exploded Sept. 15, 1963 while a Sunday school service was in progress. The lesson that day was "the love that forgives."

The mystery of who planted the bomb has not been solved.

MR. AND MRS. GARRY WILLIAM KELLY

Kelly – Palmateer

White 'mums and pink tulips formed the background setting in St. John's United Church, Tweed, when Marjorie Elaine Palmateer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Palmateer, Tweed, became the bride of Garry William Kelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Kelly of Marmora. Rev. James Payton officiated at the ceremony. Wedding music was played by Mr. Fred Porter who also accompanied the soloist, Mr. Raymond Smith.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length bridal gown featuring a bodice of Guipure lace accented with elbow-length sleeves. Her A-line bell shaped skirt of peau de faille was complimented with a detachable chapel train. She wore a matching lace pillbox showered with pearls which held in place a two-tier bouffant veil of silk illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of roses.

Mrs. Ron Devolin, sister of the bride as matron of honor, wore a floor length gown in sea foam color accented with Alencon lace and featuring an Empire style bodice, and bell skirt. The bridesmaids, Miss Joan Palmateer, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Gerald Pack, cousin of the bridegroom, were similarly attired. The little flower girl was Miss Wendy Devolin, niece of the bride and the ring-bearer was Master Brent Delahey, cousin of the bridegroom, from Peterborough.

Mr. Tom Brooks of Marmora was groomsman, while the ushers were Mr. Robert Palmateer, brother of the bride and Mr. James Nichol, cousin the bridegroom.

The reception was held at St. John's United Church hall, where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a pink linen ensemble with matching accessories. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who wore a mauve accored sheath of chantilly lace, with matching shade pillbox with white accessories.

For the wedding trip to Lexington, Kentucky, and other points of interest the bride chose a white suit with navy accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

Prior to leaving Toronto where the bride was a member of the Bank of Montreal staff, she was tendered a shower by the staff. Showers were also held at the home of Mrs. Herb Young of Peterborough; Mrs. Gerald Fox of Malone; also at the Anglican Church hall arranged by Mrs. Claude Nichol of Marmora. A shower was also held at the home of Mrs. Reg Reid of Tweed.

Guests were present from Kitchener, Hamilton, Guelph, Peterborough, Belleville, Marmora, Kingston, Toronto and Tweed.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelly will reside in Marmora.

FAVORITE SUMMER SOLIPS

Soups can play important roles in your summer menus. Hearty ones such as the Beef and Barley Soup below and the Hot Vichyssoise I gave here last Monday, can be a substitute hot main course, to be followed with a crisp salad. Elegant Cold Vichysoise and Cold Creme Consomme (below)are praise-worthy overtures to a summer guest meal.

A comforting feature of Eleanor's Beef and Barley Soup is that it calls for 2 cups chopped leftover roast beef — a handy idea for a Monday or Tuesday night's supper after you have had a roast beef dinner on Sunday.

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

by Mary Moore

Baby Beef Liver and Bacon; Smothered Onions; Scalloped Potatoes; Asparagus; Individual Dessert Fruit Salads on Lettuce: Outdoor Strawberries, Nut - Coated Banana Quarters, Pineapple Rings, Canned Grapefruit Sections; Fruit Cream Dressing; Cheese Straws; Tea.'

ELEANOR'S BEEF AND BARLEY SOUP (main course):

2 cups chopped (not ground) roast or cooked beef, 9 cups cold water, 1 cup tomato juice, 1 cup raw pot (peeled) parsley, ½ cup finely chopped onion, ½ cup carrots, ½ cut in very thin 1 x ¼ ¼ strips, 1/3 cup finely chopped celery, 3 beef bouillon (oxo) cubes, 1 teaspoon salt.

Combine all above ingredients in large soup pot and simmer, covered, for 3 hours or until barley is tender. Taste for salt. Some of you may want to add ¼ teaspoon. Eleanor made this soup (and gave me a bowl) to take up North for the week-end. It served 8 hungry people generously and had their hearty approval.

Serve with Caraway Rye Bread and Rogenbrot or crusty French bread, which could be toasted, and provide a crisp, colorful combination salad including lettuce, tomatoes, cucumbers, green onions, green pepper, celery, moistened with a small amount of French dressing and Roquefort and Thousand Island.

COLD CREME CONSOMME (to serve 5):

NOTE:

The career girls in our midst will love me for this because it is so simple and creates terrific interest.

1 can undiluted chilled consomme, 1 cup chilled dairy sour cream, 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ¾ cup cold water.

In a cold bowl beat together the chilled (jellied) consomme and sour cream until thoroughly blended. Pour into 5 beautiful cream soup bowls and chill in refrigerator for 2 hours. At serving time, garnish top with a sprinkling of any of the following: finely chopped chives or parsley or fresh mint or a little cooked and crumbled side bacon or you could use both chopped chives and crumbled bacon as garnish.

Woman Runs Radio Station In Brantford

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP)— Florence Buchanan had a genteel upbringing. At the exclusive private school she attended in Toronto, she was taught to sew, play bridge and speak softly.

She is as surprised as anyone that she now owns and manages a 10,000-watt radio station here that is soon to have an FM branch—with the same call letters—CKPC.

Mrs. Buchanan's father Cyrus Dolph started CKPC in nearby Preston in 1923. The original 7½ watts became 50 and then 100 In 1933 the station moved to Brantford. Six years later Mr Dolph retired and insisted his daughter take over.

"Such a greenhorn!" ex claimed Mrs. Buchanan, 60, in a recent interview.

"I knew nothing about business. I couldn't add two and two. Around the station, I hain't know a female plug from a male plug. I didn't even know what a platter was."

But the staff showed her the ropes. There were five staff members then. Now Mrs. Buchanan has 23.

SON IS DIRECTOR

She may have spoken softly in school and generally still does but when she "boils inside," as she puts it, action is direct and swift.

For instance, during the recent racial disturbances in Alabama, a Brantford minister balked on plans for a memorial service in his church because he said Jews and Christians might not like to gather under the same roof.

Mrs. Buchanan broadcast recorded protests all day and played Mr. Saul Overcone the civil rights' marching song—every hour.

The service was held.

CKPC has had studios in a shopping centre here. Now more room is needed for FM broadcasting so Mrs. Buchanan built a new home at a cost of about $200,000.

The station is still a fiscally affair. Mrs. Is most call her, made her son Richard manager director. Time slots for six grandchildren aren't settled.

Buyers Must Be Informed Of Products

EDMONTON (CP) — Today's buyer must be informed about products despite increased protection from government agencies and consumer groups, says a member of the advisory council of consumers.

Mrs. B. P. Marliss, a member of the council appointed to advise the health and welfare minister on consumer matters, says the council offers her the statement: "This has been approved by the food and drug directorate."

But the directorate never approves any food, drug or device and has never produced any definitive value is not forbidden, she says.

"If the product meets the requirements of the act, if it is not harmful or deceptively packaged, then it is permitted to be sold."

Mrs. Marliss is chairman of the consumer subcommittee which is preparing a national campaign to educate consumers on the use and abuse of drugs.

"It was recognized that good labelling alone would not always protect consumers against the risks of self-diagnosis and self-medication.

"As more products become available and are extensively advertised there is an increase in self-medication . . . and an increase in the activities at poison control centres."

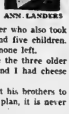
Ann Landers



Ration Chops on Plates For Freeloading Brothers

DEAR ANN LANDERS — We are people of modest means and could manage well on my husband's pay cheque if we had only our own family to take care of. Unfortunately, my husband's two brothers are frequently out of work and they are steady boarders.

Last night my husband's two brothers were here for dinner. There are five children in our family, ranging in age from 14 to 8. I prepared pork chops and mashed potatoes for supper. I thought 13 pork chops would be enough to feed us all. Well, I handed the platter to my husband and he took two chops for himself and handed the platter to his brother. His brother took four chops and passed the platter to the other brother who also took four chops. That left three chops for myself and five children. By the time the potatoes got to me there were none left.

I said I didn't care for any chops and gave the three older children one chop each. The younger kids and I had cheese sandwiches.

I can't tell my husband that I don't want his brothers to come for meals- any more but no matter how I plan, it is never enough. What can I do? — JUST BURNING.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR J.B. — In the future prepare the plates in the kitchen. It is not safe to pass platters to pigs.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband's mother lived with us for 20 years. I know what it is to have a domineering mother-in-law and I vowed I would never be one. Now I see something in my son's family that worries me sick, but, I'm afraid to say anything.

My son and his wife have three children. I'm concerned about the oldest child. He is almost five years old and large for his age. The boy has a violent temper and is terribly destructive. He has broken every toy in the house, shattered the wall mirrors in the bathroom, slashed the curtains with scissors, and he is so mean to his little sister and brother that sometimes I fear he will injure them seriously.

He throws himself on the floor when he doesn't get his way. I've also seen him slam his head against the wall until he nearly passes out. When his mother spanks him he laughs instead of cries.

This does not seem like normal behavior to me but I don't want to interfere. Should I keep quiet or should I speak up? — SILENT AND SICK.

DEAR SILENT — When parents do not recognize that something may be wrong with a child, it is an act of kindness to call it to their attention.

Suggest to your son that he have the boy checked by a specialist. He may need professional help.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I married a wonderful man in January. This was my first marriage — his second. Two years ago his wife died after a lingering illness.

I'm aware that they had a beautiful marriage and that he loved her dearly but must he speak of her so often? The other evening he called me by her name. He didn't realize it, and I said nothing, but it cut me like a knife. Should I tell him how I feel? — THE SECOND MRS.

DEAR MRS. — Almost every woman who marries a widower has the problems you described — yes, even being called by the wrong name. Say nothing. The mistakes are not intentional.

As time passes your husband will speak less of his first wife. Talk of the past will gradually diminish as your life together fills his thoughts. You'll be glad in a few years that you didn't complain.

* * *

To solve some of the frustrations, dissapointments and disillusionments of married life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "What To Expect From Marriage," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Boys Enjoy Lessons In Cooking

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP)— Ask a football player at Prince Andrew high school here what's cooking and he's likely to mention anything from rolls to desserts.

Several members of the team are tackling the school's experimental home economics course in cooking fundamentals.

The boys, who applied for enrolment, have only one complaint. They want more advanced training, and this might be provided in future classes.

Designed to provide a testing ground for young men who think they might be interested in becoming chefs, the city's school authorities now are deciding how far the experimental program should be extended.

Mrs. Raymond Stewart, teacher of the class, says it's the first class of boys she has ever instructed in home economics. The boys are so keenly interested they have asked for more difficult cooking problems to tackle.

The class first learned basic cooking fundamentals, with emphasis on cleanliness in handling and preparation of foods. They learned techniques of vegetable and meat cookery and care of meats, and dabbled with a variety of desserts.

Among other things they make rolls and cookies, which they eat themselves or serve to guests.

Mrs. Stewart says almost everything the boys cook turns out "wonderfully."

Wife Graduates Eleven Years After Husband

WINNIPEG (CP)—When Winnipeg lawyer David Bowman graduated from the University of Manitoba law school in 1954 he was second in his class.

His 33-year-old wife Myrna, as though following a well-blazed trail, graduated from the same school this spring—and she too was second place.

The Bowmans married in 1955. When their daughter Moyra, now nine, was born Mrs. Bowman decided to return to school. She had worked eight years before entering.

She went to the university for a two-year arts course, interrupted by one year's absence, and then to law school for four years.

On graduation she got the Hon. Alexander Morris Exhibition award for the best four-year aggregate. Her husband had been given the same honor.

And, she said in an interview, she had been at the top of her class the preceding three years. "My husband and I won the same awards for topping our respective classes in our first years."

Mrs. Bowman also received the Hon. Mr. Justice Hudson prize for the best standing in jurisprudence.

She said she will not be joining her husband, a partner, in the firm of Walsh Micay and Co.

She has been articling with the firm of Hinman and Crawford for the last 3½ years, and when called to the bar—"It may be a few years"—would like to be into general practice with emphasis on litigation.

Marina Oswald Porter Never Lost Faith in Adopted Country

By ROBERT E. FORD

DALLAS (AP)—The Russian girl's introduction to the United States appeared bleak and friendless. Her husband had no money, mistreated her, was a misfit in the country of his birth.

Then came tragedy for Marina Nicholaevna Oswald.

Lee Harvey Oswald, the man she loved, assassinated President John F. Kennedy, a man she admired, on a Friday.

The following Sunday, a night club operator killed her husband.

But Marina never lost faith in her adopted country.

And now she may have found happiness.

Marina was married last Tuesday to Kenneth J. Porter, an electronics technician, after a whirlwind courtship.

Porter is a drag racer and a fishing and boating enthusiast for whom his neighbors and fellow workers have high praise.

Marina Oswald Porter, now 23, has changed greatly since Nov. 22, 1963, when her husband assassinated Kennedy with a telescope - equipped rifle during a Dallas motorcade and then murdered policeman J. D. Tippit.

BORROWED CLOTHES

She borrowed clothes to attend her husband's funeral, a ceremony who knew her then tell of the blank stare in her eyes, the stringy hair, her inability to speak English.

Today her hair is expertly done. She speaks English well, although with an accent. She dresses smartly, and has been seen at night clubs and concerts. She is moderately well-to-do.

Marina and Oswald were married in the summer of 1961 in Russia, where he hoped to find Utopia and where he renounced the United States.

But he was no happier there, and he returned home in June, 1962, bringing Marina with him.

Oswald could not keep a job in the U.S. and those he got paid little.

But Marina made friends.

Mrs. Michael R. Paine of Irving, a Dallas suburb, took Marina and June Lee, a toddler, into her home. Oswald lived in Dallas and visited his wife and child once a week. Marina bore a second child, Rachel, shortly before Kennedy and Oswald died.

OSWALD BEATS HER

Oswald objected violently to attempts she made to learn English. Marina told the Warren commission investigating the assassination that her husband beat her. He objected to the baptism of their elder child and a private ceremony was held without his knowledge.

After the assassination, North Americans sympathized with Marina, penniless and with two small children to support.

The president of the Southern Baptist Convention asked for contributions.

Other church groups and individuals sent money until at one time she had more than $70,000 from contributions and sale of a photograph.

She cried when contributions of $7,700 were given her shortly after the assassination.

"I didn't believe the people in America, the people anywhere, could be this nice."

She co-operated with authorities in investigating the president's death.

She seemed composed at all public appearances, perhaps at first from the shock and later because it is her nature.

MARRIED THREE TIMES

Porter, 27, earns $600 a month at Texas Instruments Inc., where he has worked for five or six years. It is his third marriage. One was a brief teen-age romance. He has two children by his second wife. The second marriage ended in divorce early in 1964.

He lived in a room at the home of Mrs. Bill Clark, who lives two doors from Marina. Marina was drinking coffee on the Clark patio when Porter rode up on a horse for their first meeting.

Porter introduced Marina to fishing and boating and much of their courting occurred on such outings.

Porter said he proposed two weeks before their marriage.

"I didn't think there would be this much attention," he said.

DON'T DO IT!

In a recent column, I gave you some surefire advice for removing rust stains from sinks and toilets.

We agreed to always use a mask so as not to inhale any fumes, but since then it has come to my attention that the fumes resulting from the combination I suggested could be much more dangerous than I ever realized.

There is the possibility, that if we did inhale them in large quantities, they could, like the fumes of the cleaning fluid carbontetrachloride, remove us, instead.

It simply isn't worth taking that chance, now is it?

So let's try to find something else that works just as well on these miserable stubborn stains and remember to never, combine chlorine bleach with toilet cleaner crystals in the sink or toilet, no matter how small the quantities, — just in case!

I couldn't bear it if anything happened to any one of us — especially you! —SUSANNA

THE ORIGINAL'S A FAILURE

Dear Susanna: When I sat down to type out my notes for a lecture I was to give in the morning — pages of them — to my dismay the typewriter ribbon was so worn I was afraid I would never be able to read the printing.

After much rebelling at the thought of having to write every thing out by hand, I went ahead and typed them anyway, but at the same time I made a nice clear carbon copy. For my lecture I used the copy, and threw the original away. — Archie G.

Treatments Ended Pimples But Left Ugly Rash

DEAR DORIS — You're my last hope. I have a beauty problem. I used to have pimples but after using treatments, they went away. They left behind an ugly rash or something like enlarged pores.

They look as bad as the pimples and give my complexion an old and rough look. I am in my teens and these years are very important to me so I want to enjoy them, but how can I when I feel so miserable? — LACKING BEAUTY.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR LACKING — Those rough old scars can be removed. In an operation called dermabrasion a surgeon lifts off the thin top layer of skin, leaving new skin underneath.

Should be done when you have time for two or three weeks of healing at home. The resultant clear complexion is worth the expense and effort.

June Bride Tradition Dates From Roman Era

By MARGARET NESS

TORONTO (CP)—June is still regarded as the month for brides, although in recent years it has surrendered first place to September as the most popular for weddings.

The tradition persists, perhaps, because it goes back at least 1,800 years. The Romans considered June the most propitious for marriage, especially if the day chosen corresponded with a full moon.

But the idea of wearing white has no such long history. Roman brides did wear white but only because it was the usual color for feast days and other joyous occasions. They added a white fringe to their long white gown, and pagan brides of that time even wore veils of flame or orange.

In the middle ages, noble ladies were married in scarlet velvet or any brilliant shade they liked and their costumes were usually festooned with splendid jewelry.

Many European brides wore traditional costumes of their district, choosing colors considered to be symbolic of happiness. A Ukrainian bride might appear with a headdress of myrtle and periwinkle, and often a Greek bride donned a red velvet jacket.

In colonial North America, brides wore bright flowered brocades and cherry and primrose damask.

VICTORIA SET STYLE

It was Queen Victoria's love of ivory satin for all state occasions that brought white into modern prominence. But even the Victorian brides preferred pale grey satin, sometimes with moire stripes.

The famous Spanish beauty, Eugenie, was married in white to Napoleon III and her five-tiered lace skirt became immediately popular, brides proceeding to wear as many as seven petticoats to produce this new bouffant look.

At the beginning of the 20th century, brides began wearing silk voile and heavily embroidered lace, although satin was still the favorite fabric. The style included the high-collar neckline and leg - o' - mutton sleeves.

In the 1920s flapper short skirts and bobbed hair created a new look. Some brides were daring enough to add touches of the new shocking pink to their pristine white dresses or to line them in pastel shades. This was the end of the Victoria white era.

Brides began to experiment with color, and a fashion editor in 1960 even advocated bikini-dotted white Swiss for the bride and a rainbow of pastel shades for her bridesmaids.

Fabrics also took on variety. By the mid-1950s a bride could march to the altar in sculptured or puckered taffetas and sheers, shantunz types, printed crepes and tricots, tulles, nets and laces, as well as satin.

VERSATILE OUTFITS

Gowns were also designed so that trains could be removed and skirts later shortened to make a trousseau party dress. Wedding dresses were no longer put away for a future daughter to wear at her own wedding.

Veils have been the traditional head-cover through the centuries. Until the 1920s and '30s they were usually long, mostly floor-length. The flapper bride changed them to shoulder-length.

In early times the veil was anchored to the head by jewelled circlets of tiara. Later bridal caps or pillboxes became popular and floating veils were worn over the top.

This spring a new fashion was introduced at the Beauty Show in Toronto. Elaborate flower-entwined hairdos or postiches became the focus of interest, covered by the sheerest of veils for church ceremonies.

Internationally - famous hairdressers created several variations for the show, including a circlet of small white roses and silk bow interlaced through a postiche of curls at the back of the head. Other false-hair arrangements ringed a ponytail effect with flowers for a married-at-home bride when a head cover is not necessary.

Also presented were two modern wedding gowns. Fontana of Rome sent a tulip-embossed brocade short dress with a front-opening, floor-length coat cuffed with white fox at the elbows. Both dress and coat could be worn later at gala functions.

From Anthony Blotta of New York came his "Bossanova Bride," lace knee-length and scalloped tunic with long full pants. It would defy all but the most sensation - seeking bride but the tunic could be worn later as a quite unsensational long-sleeved party dress.

A REMINDER

Wedding forms for write-ups are available at The Ontario Intelligencer and should be completed and returned BEFORE the ceremony, so a report can be published immediately after the wedding.

Pictures may be submitted by your photographer up to three days after the wedding. We cannot promise publication of weddings sent in later.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTIONS: We are going to Baxter State Park, in Maine. Could you please tell us if there are camping facilities, or cot tages and what would be the best way to drive there? — Mrs. W., Belleville.

ANSWER: There are camping areas at the park to the extent of lean-tos, fire-places, drinking water. This park is quite a wilderness, and well known for its Mt. Katoktin which is the highest point in Maine. There are also further accommodations at sporting camps on Nolecy, Kidney and Toque Ponds. The best way to get there is by No. 7 Highway to Quebec City, cross the St. Lawrence and take No. 1 Highway to No. 23 and down No. 23 to No. 201 to No. 15 and on No. 15 to Rockwood, then to Greenville, then north to Lily Bay and on to Baxter Park.

QUESTION: We would like information on the Everglades National Park in Florida. Could you give us some information about it, as we would like to go in June. We are taking a trailer. — Mrs. L. McK., Trenton

Answer: Everglades National Park, Flamingo, S.W. of Royal Palm Ranger Station, at the end of state 27, has 54 camp and trailer sites, toilets, fireplaces drinking water, shower b o o t h concessions, electricity There is camping all year, but b e s t in December to April, 14-day limit subject to change. QUESTION: We are going to Cape Cod for our vacation, and are on a budget as we have three children. We would like to know if there are cheaper accommodations than the regular motels and hotels" Mrs T. H., Belleville.

ANSWER: There are lower-priced accommodations en route to Cape Cod. These are the small "wooden cabins that are still in existence along the highways. They don't have the elegance of the new modern motels but are just for a traveller to sleep, or rest his weary bones The price of t h e s e cabins is about half of the regular motels. Some old hotels in larger towns offer good accommodation for a low price also. You could also try tourist homes.

QUESTION: We plan to go on a camping trip this summer and would like to know where we can obtain a camping book or guide for Ontario, which will show us the various camping spots and what they have to offer? — Mrs. H. Belleville.

ANSWER: These booklets are obtained by writing direct to the Department of Travel and Publicity, 67 College Street, Toronto, and from Ontario Government reception centres placed at strategic points along the Canadian-American border, or may be obtained at any branch or division of the O.M.L. in every principal city in Ontario as well as the Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

Newspaper Giant Thomson Enjoys Position of Power

The following interview with Baron Thomson, Canadian-born publisher, was written by a veteran Associated Press reporter for distribution to 600 newspapers in the United States.

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP)—At age 40, Roy Thomson was running a motor car supply agency in a small Canadian town. Today, Lord Thomson, at 70, is the biggest newspaper publisher in history—and probably the richest.

His vast paper, communications and electronics empire operates 121 newspapers in eight countries (including 11 weeklies and 26 dailies in Canada), scores of magazines and highly profitable, ever-expanding television enterprises.

Asked whether he'd like to own all the newspapers on earth, he s t a r t s to laugh, catches himself, m e n t a l l y changes gears and replies:

"Own 'em all? I guess in theory I would."

The son of a poor Toronto barber, Thomson today is a baron, going strong and searching for more newspapers.

Thirty years ago—during the depression—in North Bay, Ont., a fast-talking salesman sold Thomson a load of radios in an area noted for poor radio reception.

Undaunted, Thomson bought a small second-hand Transmitter on credit, rented a dressing-room in a dog-racing track in North Bay, got on the air with records, and weather reports and news spoken by Thomson himself. The radios sold. The station prospered and so did Thomson.

"I once thought that the most beautiful music in the world was a spot commercial at 10 bucks a shack," he recalls.

The radio station got him into publishing.

BOUGHT FIRST PAPER

"There was this weekly newspaper in Timmins," he said. "It was doing pretty badly. I bought it by making a down payment of just $200, and paying up the rest—about $6,000—in monthly instalments. That newspaper cost me only $6,000 to buy, and now it makes me $150,000 every year."

Acquiring more Canadian radio stations and newspapers—and running them profitably—he looked eastward across the Atlantic and headed for Scotland, the home of his ancestors.

His first triumph was buying that respected daily, The Scotsman. He parlayed that into getting the license for Scottish television as commercial TV came to Britain in 1955.

For the 60 licenses for about $120,000 and Scottish TV in about two years was making the net profit before taxes of $292,000 a month. Roy Thomson now was a "ready to advance on London."

He bought Lord Kemsley's Sunday Times, a country-wide group of morning and evening papers. In four years after he moved to Canada, he became one of Britain's largest news-paper proprietors.

Thomson was elevated to the peerage by the Queen on Jan. 1, 1964. He selected his own motto: "Never a backward step."

A broad - shouldered, large-headed man with slicked-back grey hair and eyes that sparkle behind t h i c k glasses, Lord Thomson is friendly, articulate and easily approached. Sitting behind a modern desk on the sixth floor of the ultra-modern Sunday Times building—called Thomson House—he answered questions easily and directly.

SEEKS MORE PAPERS

Q: What are your ambitions in the United States? Would you like to acquire more newspapers there?

A: Most certainly. We're now negotiating for 10 or a dozen more. We'll have many papers in the United States one day.

Q: You publish hundreds of words daily. Do you ever write?

A: Not too often. Only when I do a high-level interview such as with Khrushchev, but generally speaking, I don't enjoy it. I find that writing, like any other profession, well, you've got to practise to be good and I just haven't the time.

Q: What are the chances today of the young man with average education in Canada or the United States becoming a millionaire?

A: If you want to make money you've got to have complete determination to make money. You've got to be willing to sacrifice leisure and pleasure. Generally speaking, most people think that's not worthwhile, and they're not willing to do it. I thought it was worthwhile and I made many sacrifices. I did things that I would have preferred not doing. I mean I'd have preferred to rest, but I couldn't because of my responsibility.

NOT QUITTING

Q: At the age of 65 you took over the Kemsley newspapers, yet many firms retire workers at the age of 65. Is a man washed up at 65?

A: I can't understand a man quitting at 65. I'm now over 70 and I think that barring some accident, I'm good for another 10 years. I made more progress and became worth more money between 65 and 70 than I made in the whole previous 65 years. Now my aim is to make more between 75 and 80 than I made out of the first 70. I doubt if I'll do it, though, because already I've got quite a bit.

Q: Do you enjoy being a millionaire?

A: I did. I do indeed.

Q: What is happiness?

A: The basis of happiness is a wonderful wife who died some years ago, and I have three children—two girls and a boy — and they've never given me a bit of trouble. I'm very proud of them. They love me and I love them.

I was amused the other day at my daughter who's a millionaire many times over. Her eldest daughter was out at a skating rink. She called her home and said: "Mother, will you come and pick me up in the car. I want to go home." Audrey, my daughter, said, "Call a taxi." "Oh," said my grandchild rather kindly, "a taxi'll cost a fortune." Now this kid's a millionaire herself, several times over, and yet — that's her attitude towards money. It's the attitude of the Dole Family. We haven't got money to squander.

Q: Do you enjoy being a peer?

A: I enjoy it tremendously.

SEES DISCIPLINE

Q: You have visited the Soviet Union at least twice, and you have had close contacts with Soviet officials. Do you think they Soviets will ever catch up with and surpass the United States in industrial and agricultural production?

A: I think the Soviet Union in time will make great progress and will do much towards catching up, but I hesitate to say they'll catch up, because I have a great respect for the ingenuity and industry of the United States. But—if we operate in the future, that is in the Western nations as we're inclined to do with our great lack of discipline, well, a lot could happen. Discipline is a most important thing. We in the West did great things during the war—and that was because we were under discipline. In my visits to Russia I've found that they're making very great progress. The thing I like about communism is the discipline. I think we lack discipline. I'm afraid that liberty with us has in many r e s p e c t s become licence, and I believe we've got to do something to correct this. I think that every man has a responsibility to his country and I think very few of us realize this. Most of us consider our own interests first and not the interests of our country. I think if we want to get more purpose into our national life, we've got to be forced into it, and if we don't it's my firm conviction that we're going to be left behind by communism.

Q: You know Mr. Khrushchev very well. Do you think his disappearance from the Kremlin will mean a setback for the U.S.S.R.?

A: I think it means a setback for the Western world. I found him a very realistic man. He said to me, "Mr. Thomson, we can't ever have a war. We'll all be destroyed." If he believes that —and I'm sure he does—we would never have a war with Mr. Khrushchev in charge over there. I understand these new men are following his path. I don't believe his displacement means anything through any ideological differences.

A GREEK APART

I think Mr. Khrushchev grew apart from his cabinet and Parliament. He assumed powers that the others objected to, without calling a collective effort. I found in all my discussions with the Russians that they're d e t e r m i n e d they'll never have another Stalin if they can help it. Now I don't intend to suggest that Khrushchev was becoming a Stalin, but he was doing too much on his own, getting too much personal power, and I believe the others felt this had to stop. That's why he was displaced.

Q: Do you think that the Russians may one day be closer to the West than they are to the East?

A: That's assuming a lot, but the Russians are afraid of China. They're afraid of disparates and differences over the program for world communism. They have more reason to have disputes with China over boundaries than with the Western nations. Yes, I do feel that in time Russia will draw closer to the West.

Q: Turning to Africa, do you think the West should compete actively with the Russians and the Chinese Communists in trying to make friends and influence African opinion?

A: I do most emphatically; and if we don't we'll lose the battle in Africa to the Communists.

WANTS TO MAKE MORE MONEY — Lord Thomson of Fleet says his present aim is to make more money in the next five years than he made in his first 70 years. Lord Thomson's publishing empire operates 118 newspapers in eight countries, including 11 weeklies and 26 dailies in Canada. He started his empire 30 years ago when he bought a newspaper in Timmins, Ont., and has since become the biggest newspaper publisher in history. (AP Photo)

THE EMPIRE SPREADS ABROAD — Lord Thomson of Fleet is shown in 1963 reading an edition of the Edinburgh Scotsman, his first newspaper acquisition abroad. He followed this bt buying the Sunday Times' and a country-wide group of morning and evening newspapers, and four years after leaving Canada, became one of Britain's largest newspaper proprietors. His vast empire now operates 118 newspapers in eight countries, scores of magazines and television interests. Lord Thomson says his organization now is negotiating for about a dozen more newspapers in the United States. (AP Photo)

rons, likely will go to Lt.-Gen. Jean V. Allard, now chief of operational readiness at headquarters here.

The infantry brigade group and RCAF air division in Europe are not affected by the new organization and will continue to report directly to Canadian Forces Headquarters in Ottawa.

AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

Integration of the field commands in four to six months ahead of schedule, Hellyer said. It had not been intended originally to announce this phase of integration until late this year.

The reserve forces—army militia, naval divisions and RCAF auxiliaries—will be commanded through regional offices so that the links with the provinces will be maintained. The reserves are often called upon by the provinces for aid in the civil power in such emergencies as fires and floods.

Mobile command headquarters probably will be at St. Hubert, Que., though this is not yet settled. This command is designed to provide "instant response" to requests for military forces, whether from NATO or the United Nations.

Maritime command will include a limited sealift capability.

Air transport command, with headquarters remaining at Trenton, Ont., will provide long-range airlift with Yukon and Hercules transport planes.

The new training command will be responsible for personnel selection and basic and advanced training. Operational training will be the responsibility of the other appropriate commands.

This means, for instance, that when the new organization settles down the navy's basic training depot near Digby, N.S., will be used for initial training for soldiers and airmen as well as sailors.

ALREADY CONSOLIDATED

Some schools, such as the separate cooking schools of the three services, will be consolidated.

Materiel command will be responsible for the procurement of weapons and equipment, warehousing, distribution and repairs. This system has already started, in fact.

Integration of air defence command with NORAD's northern region headquarters at North Bay will depend on costs involved. The defence department doesn't want to spend a lot of money for new accommodations.

Your Car

How to Trace Cause of Stalling Woes

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

When your engine is stopped or stalled — and can't be restarted, flooding is often the reason. This is particularly common during warm weather, and it happens this way:

The choke is not operating properly or is incorrectly set and the carburetor float is binding or the float level is set too high; the carburetor adjustment may be too rich or the needle valve or seat is defective. The fuel pump pressure is often too high and the air cleaner may be clogged.

Thus, on - the - road flooding occurs, and the intake manifold is then loaded with liquid fuel. When the engine stops, heat build-up evaporates this fuel and the mixture is much too rich for combustion. The engine cannot be re-started until this incombustible mixture is cranked out.

From W. W.: "On my '63 compact, I seem to hear a knock every now and then, especially as I accelerate or decelerate. Otherwise, the car runs very well and gives me excellent gas and oil mileage."

The symptoms suggest loose engine mounting(s).

A. V. asks: "Is it true that the type of engine oil used can actually cause a variance in oil pressure?"

The grade or viscosity can. Extremely light oil promotes lower pressure, while very heavy oil can result in abnormally high pressure.

S. N. writes: "My car, a '63 eight-cylinder wagon with automatic transmission is sometimes almost impossible to shift into neutral." This trouble is invariably due to a defective neutral starter switch.

From B.R.: "When I turn on my windshield wipers, they make a staccato noise and they also streak the windshield. I replaced the blades but it didn't cure the problem."

New wiper arms may be needed.

Inflation

cil's recent report called for gross fixed business investment to rise at an average annual rate of 10 per cent up to 1970.

"It cannot be over - emphasized that the level of capital investment in Canada will in all probability be the most important single factor in determining how well we do in sustaining the strength of the economy in the immediate future."

Maintaining a business climate that will permit the necessary investment growth needs top priority in the thinking of national leaders in all sectors of the economy, the report says.

It gives this rundown on economic conditions:

Total production of goods and services increased at a greater rate last year, discounting price changes, than any year since 1956. A somewhat smaller increase appeared to be in store for this year, "but with the activity at so high a level this is not a pessimistic note."

Unemployment in 1964 averaged 4.7 per cent, the lowest level in years, and dropped to even lower levels early this year with prospects for continued progress looking promising.

Manufacturers were planning to spend 23 per cent more on new construction and new machinery and equipment this year than last, but that compared with an actual 24-per-cent increase in the rate of capital spending in 1964.

Of 19 industry groupings in manufacturing, 10 expected to increase their capital spending this year, compared with last while nine were forecasting a decrease. In 1963, 8 groupings increased spending while only four cut back.

Canada achieved its fourth successive annual trade surplus in 1964, with merchandise exports exceeding imports by $700,000,000 compared with $503,000,000 in 1963. Total manufactured shipments rose about eight per cent to almost $32,000,000.

Preliminary figures on the wholesale price index of fully and chiefly manufactured goods including imports, showed it 2 per cent lower at the beginning of this year than last, while the average level of 102 selling price indexes was .3 per cent lower.

Of the 180 indexes, however, 51 were higher, 41 lower and 10 unchanged.

Average hourly earnings in manufacturing rose 4.5 per cent during 1964, compared with a 2.9 per cent rise during 1963.

A total of 327 manufacturers went bankrupt, 10 per cent fewer than in 1963, but the total liabilities were down only two per cent.

Proposal

business getting done before the July-August holiday period rolls around.

It also means that the government's spending powers are getting closer to exhaustion. The government must seek new powers to pay bills after June 30.

By pushing the government to the wire in this way, it has been possible in the past to horse - trade — exchange approval of spending for modification by the government of some policy or legislation.

CAUSES STRAIN

But the dragging pace of business also raises temperatures in the House and, sometimes, the strain touches off politically - rewarding incidents.

For example, the frustration and bitterness engendered in the flag debate set the stage for last fall's corruption charges which rocked Parliament to its foundations.

Whether intentional or not, the opposition seems to be embarked on a repeat of last year's battles which culminated in the longest parliamentary session in history.

It left the minority government with relatively little time for personal administration of departments by ministers who have to count on at least half a day taken up with the Commons when Parliament is in session.

And it left just as little time for personal attention to political fence-mending in anticipation of the day when Prime Minister Pearson dissolves Parliament and seeks a majority at the polls.

If your family is too big for the beetle...

And too shy for the bus...

You've just given yourself the best reasons for looking into the Volkswagen 1500.
Some families outgrow our beetle. Nature.
And some people will never get used to the idea of being seen in our Station Bus. Human nature.
So it was second nature for us to bring out the Volkswagen 1500.
We made the 1500 to seat five people. Or an almost infinite number of small, dirty faces.
And to get everyone where they want to go at a clip that's almost undignified for us to mention.
(Our TS engine zips from a standing start to 50 mph in 12 seconds.)
But we didn't get carried away completely.
We got a good grip on ourselves. And left the 1500's engine in the rear over the drive wheels.
And we cool it with air instead of that well known wet stuff. And you still don't have to buy anti-freeze because we still don't have any radiator.
So don't let a beetle or a bus owner say you're not driving a VW when you pull up in a 1500.
You might have a little more family.
And you might have a little less bravado.
But you've got as much Volkswagen.

Prince Edward Spring Horse Show Success

PICTON (Staff) — Capacity crowds attended both night performances of Prince Edward Spring Horse Show on Friday and Saturday. Friday night's show was designed for the interests of children and attracted a crowd of well over 1,000 persons. Saturday night's performances featured many of the finest horses in the area.

The Odd Fellows band played for the Saturday events, while the music for Friday night was provided by the band of the First Canadian Guards of Camp Picton. The Guards band, a fife and drum unit, presented an impressive drill for the audience which is being rehearsed for ceremonies which will take place on Parliament Hill in Ottawa this summer. Along with the Guards band majorettes also gave a number.

Other special features of the show were the appearance of the Beverly Hill Billies, and a stubborn mule act that provided much amusement for young and old alike. Other events included races, pole bending and a colorful show of Western horses and riders were a feature of Saturday's show, along with the child's fancy dress entries.

Many fine jumpers and hunters were entered in the horse show which was one of the finest shows according to officials, to be seen anywhere. Some of the jumping events were held outside the arena due to floor conditions indoors. Judging was done by Clarke Mansfield, of Manotick, Ont., while Elmer Gerow of Picton, acted as ring steward. Trophies were presented at first place winners and ribbons were awarded in five different classes.

Late in the show on Saturday night and unknown to many of the audience, a small fire broke out over top of the second berth at the south end of the arena. The fire was quickly extinguished by arena officials, and no damage was done. The annual spring horse show is sponsored by the Picton Kiwanis Club and the Prince Edward Agricultural Society.

Big Outbreak Of Cutworms In County

PICTON (Staff) — According to Agricultural Representative for Prince Edward County Ivan Bell there is a heavy outbreak of cutworms throughout the county. This along with the lack of rain is causing county farmers much concern. Actual damage figures are not known as yet but Mr. Bell states that the menace is very serious, and damage so far has been heavy. Due to the lack of rain, some farmers are turning to irrigation for their fields. After two fairly dry years it is expected that irrigation equipment will be used more than ever this year, and this trend will probably increase in years to come. Many farmers of the area due new farm ponds as a reserve water supply during last years dry spells and many more are expected to be dug this year.

Two Charged In Slaying Of Circus Clown

NEW YORK (AP)—A young man and his girl friend, held in the hotel room robbery-slaying of star circus clown Paul Jung, have charged their constitutional rights were violated after their arrest.

Allen Jones, 24, a jobless laborer, and Marian de Berry, 21, were arrested Saturday night and charged Sunday with homicide in the death of 64-year-old Jung last April 21.

The pair, Negroes living at the same Harlem address, charged that statements they made to police were obtained under duress. The charges were repeated by their court-appointed lawyers — Saul Bershadker for Jones and Enid K. Gerling for Miss de Berry.

Bershadker asked criminal court Judge Manuel H. Gomez to have all statements made by the defendants ordered retracted, adding:

"They are all false. The defendants were illegally detained and their constitutional rights violated."

Gomez ordered Miss de Berry and Jones held without bail, and told defence counsel: "The defendants' rights have been and will be protected."

MANY QUESTIONED

Police said they questioned some 1,500 persons since the body of Jung, chief clown of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus, was found in his room at the Hotel Forrest, a block from Madison Square Garden where the circus was performing.

Jung lay on his back, his skull crushed.

Police said the murder weapon was a fire hose nozzle.

Authorities have given few details of the slaying and how the defendants were picked up. They did say that Jung was robbed of $40 in cash and a cigarette.

Cifrisil policemen in giving reasons for the re-opening said Sunday the case would remained static since Friday.

Express and freight employees in Toronto walked out Thursday to protest discriminatory measures by the railroad. An Ottawa local stopped work with a lengthy prayer meetings Friday, but union officers persuaded members to return to work the following day.

Police Chiefs Acting as JPs Resign Posts

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario police chiefs who have been acting as justices of the peace resigned during the weekend to Attorney-General Arthur Wishart's request that they cease functioning as JPs.

Chief B. [illegible]rson of Galt said he will resign as JP as soon as Mr. Wishart's letter reaches him. He has been a JP since 1945.

But Chief C. C. Ford of Meaford said he probably will not resign immediately.

"There is no one else within 20 miles," he said. "I'm still working as a JP. You cannot expect a cruiser to go to Collingwood or Owen Sound just to have one paper stamped."

Mr. Wishart said last week there are about six police chiefs serving as JPs, but that they could not be criticized for acting in a double capacity.

"If there is any criticism, it is a criticism of the system that allowed this to happen," he said.

Chief M. C. Moore of Owen Sound said he hasn't made up his mind what to do. But he said Mr. Wishart's letter makes clear that police chiefs who do not resign their JP positions will eventually be dismissed from them through an order-in-council.

Chief Moore said removal of his JP duties "would take a load off my mind, but it would leave the people here out on a limb."

52 Fatalities Across Canada Over Weekend

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Newfoundland, Saskatchewan and Manitoba were the only fatality-free provinces in Canada during a weekend that claimed 52 lives in accidents.

A survey by The Canadian Press from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday local times showed 35 persons died in traffic mishaps—21 of them in Quebec—14 persons were drowned, one woman was asphyxiated in a fire and two persons died in other accidents.

Quebec's toll also included seven drownings. Ontario followed with eight traffic deaths, two drownings and the fire death.

New Brunswick and British Columbia each reported two traffic deaths and one miscellaneous fatality. In New Brunswick, a person died of carbon monoxide poisoning. A 19-year-old youth in British Columbia died when his car fell on him.

Alberta reported four drownings. Nova Scotia had one traffic fatality and one drowning while Prince Edward Island reported one death in traffic.

Canada Pension Plan Only Part of Underwriting for Old Age Security—Benson

By HARRY MULHALL

BRIGHTON (Staff) — The Canadian Pension Plan is only part of an overall federal scheme underwriting old age security, Revenue Minister Edgar Benson emphasized Saturday.

"It never was — nor have we ever purported, that the Canada Pension Plan in itself would fulfill all the needs of the old-age people in this country," he told the annual meeting of South Central Ontario Women's Liberal Association at the Glenburnie Motel near here.

The CPP will be part of a security complex which also will include the Canadian Assistance Program and the current Old Age Security pension.

With Robert Temple, MP, Hastings South, and Russell Honey, MP Durham, the revenue minister formed a panel answering questions from close to 200 delegates.

Mr. Benson led off the panel with a discussion on the Canada Pension Plan, which, he said, will shortly be laid before Canadians in complete detail.

"A government information program will soon be launched to enquaint Canadians of their rights and obligations under the scheme," he said

WITHOUT MEANS TEST

The projected Canada Assistance Program will be "operated without a means test, but on a needs tests," the Minister said.

Provincial social workers will administer the scheme but that we will be able to give to the old people, and other people who are disabled or blind, a sufficient amount so that they will be able to live decently," added Mr. Benson.

Mr. Benson was optimistic that the provinces would agree with the projected federal program.

Noting the alarm caused in the Great Lakes basin over water levels, Mr. Temple said better regulations of water usage along the lakes seemed the only safe method of easing the threat.

Any large diversions of water from Lake Superior down to the lower lakes "could well be disastrous," he told a questioner.

The situation has developed contrastingly in only a decade, Mr. Temple reminded the meeting. In 1952 record high levels were registered while new all-time lows were recorded in 1962.

Any diversion of water might prove dangerous in the event of unexpectedly heavy and prolonged rainfalls.

GOVT. TEAM FORMED

A government team now had been formed to attempt projection of a long-range forecast on future rainfalls. However, he added, "wider regulations by all bodies of government concerned can, and must, get into the heart of this problem."

More federal-provincial-municipal government action also was called for by the third member of the panel.

Mr. Honey warned of spreading water pollution which must be watched as the population grows.

The problem was particularly crurial in Lakes Michigan and Erie but "around Lake Ontario it's becoming more important to us to see that governments at all three levels do discharge their responsibilities."

While the federal government already had moved to provide budgetary incentives to eliminate industrial contamination, he suggested a new federal agency be formed to tackle the problem.

"I think at all levels of government we've got to move quickly in this area if we are going to preserve for our children and grandchildren the heritage that has been handed down to us in the province of Ontario," he said.

Pauline Jewett, MP, North Northumberland, was panel moderator.

CNR President, Express Union To Hold Meet

MONTREAL (CP) — Union and management officials are scheduled to meet here today in an effort to iron out differences which caused walkouts in Toronto and Ottawa late last week, tying up Canadian National Railways express operations.

The talks are scheduled to bring together CNR President Donald Gordon and William J. Smith, president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, (CLC).

J. A. Pettigrew, the union's Montreal representative, said Sunday the union would remained static since Friday.

Express and freight employees in Toronto walked out Thursday to protest discriminatory measures by the railroad. An Ottawa local stopped work with a lengthy prayer meetings Friday, but union officers persuaded members to return to work the following day.

Dunkerque Evacuation Is Fittingly Celebrated

DUNKERQUE, France (CP) — Dunkerque celebrated the 20th anniversary of her liberation from the Germans with appropriate gaiety Sunday after marking in more sombre mood the 25th anniversary of the evacuation of the seaport before Hitler's then - triumphant armies.

British and French troops paraded through the reconstructed city. Children built sandcastles on a beach that 25 years ago was littered with the debris of a British expeditionary force driven into the sea but saved to fight again by a cockleshell armada of little boats and the Royal Navy.

In the cafes Sunday, British veterans of the Dunkerque fighting and crew of some of the little boats that helped rescue them took soothing aperitifs with their French hosts. A Saturday night blowout had marked the transition to liberation festivities from ceremonies recalling the evacuation.

The mayor of Dunkerque had announced beforehand that the whole town would be drunk for the festival Saturday night. His prediction proved to be close to the mark as British and French soldiers and sailors, some 400 British veterans of Dunkerque crews of the little boats and celebrants here for the Whitsun weekend holiday made the rounds of the bars and restaurants.

A convoy of 42 of the original 700 boats that helped the Royal Navy take 338,226 men off the beaches between May 26 and June 4, 1940, came from England Friday for the anniversary.

Lifeboats from the Kent coast fishing boats, yachts and dinghies, a lug, a barge the biggest was 100 feet long—returned with fresh paint, flying pennants of St. George of England and commanded in every case by new skippers.

Saturday morning the little ships formed a crescent off shore while 400 Dunkerque veterans paid tribute to their lost comrades at a service before the rectangular stone memorial earn on the beach.

An RAF plane droned overhead and dropped a wreath of Flanders poppies into the sea. British jets swooped out of the clouds to salute in a jarring reminder of how German fighters and dive bombers had shrieked down on troops waiting for rescue 25 years earlier.
